Perth has long been noted for its dyeworks and for its manufacture in inks, but of late it has become famous for its manufacture in gauge glasses, which it sends to all parts of the world. This business is carried on extensively by the firms of Messrs. Moncrieff and Tomey & Sons. There are very extensive linen and jute manufactories, and various fabrics of cotton hosiery, &c., a brewing, tanning, iron founding, rope and sail making, and other branches of industry and skill, whilst the coal, corn and timber trades employ in the aggregate a considerable capital. The city possesses extensive railway communication by means of the Caledonian, North British and the Highland Railways. There are nine banking establishments settled in Perth, exclusive of one for savings. The Central Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank occupy very ornamental buildings. The hotels here are of a highly respectable character. The Royal George Hotel, in George street; the Salutation in South street; Pople's Royal British, and the Queen's (opposite the railway terminus) are comfortable and well conducted establishments. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can deliver and receive cargoes at the harbour; and steam boats pass frequently between Perth and Dundee. The number of vessels belonging to the port for the year ending December, 1871, was 45, with an aggregate of 4,357 tons. The customs revenue of the port for the year ending March, 1868, including British spirits, was £15,965 15s., and for the year ending March, 1871, was £15,160 12s. The exports are chiefly potatoes and timber, and the imports (coastwise and foreign) are coals, manures and timber.

The government of the city is vested in a lord provost (who is also sheriff and coroner), four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors. The council thus consists of twenty-six members, all of whom, with the exception of the dean of guild, are, since the passing of the last Reform Bill, elected by household suffrage. The elective constituency is divided into four wards. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the Guildry Incorporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors, from amongst themselves. The council meets on the first Monday in every month; a sheriff court is held every Tuesday and Friday during session, and two courts at least in each vacation. The police of the city are under the charge of a superintendent, and the quiet and good order of the town is materially promoted by the power the magistrates have of summary punishment for petty offences. The police, lighting, cleansing, paving, &c. of the town, are under the charge of the Town Council Commissions, under the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. Perth was constituted a royal burgh, with a confirmation of all its former privileges, in the year 1210, by William the Lion. James VI. accepted the municipal office of provost of the city, and partook at the Cross of the festivities which were prepared for that extraordinary occasion. The city returns one member to the Imperial Parliament, the Hon. Arthur F. Kinnaird being the present representative.

The churches in Perth, with some few exceptions, do not display any striking external beauties. St. John's church is a very ancient structure, and supposed to be one of the first churches built of stone in this country; it was originally erected in the form of a cross, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of Saint Johnstone. Although it has been almost entirely remodelled by alterations at different periods, yet enough of the ancient part remains to testify that it was once a very fine edifice. Some extensive repairs have greatly improved its exterior appearance in later times. On the outside of the tower are affixed a set of musical bells, covered by a kind of portico, and a singularly looking spire surmounts the whole. The great reformer Knox thundered forth his declamations from the venerable old pile. At the extremity of High street, in Methven street, stands Saint Paul's church, a more modern and not inelegant structure of stone, with a steeple surmounted by a spire. St. Leonard's church, a very handsome structure, erected in King street in 1835—the expense being defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions—is incorporated with the Establishment. St. John's Episcopal church, Princes street, stands on the site of a former chapel; it was originally the only Episcopal church in Perth. It is a handsome edifice in the early English style, and the interior is very elegantly finished; it is seated for about 500. There is also an Episcopal School church near the station, in connection with St.John's,which is used on week days as a day school. St. Ninian's cathedral in Athole street (also Episcopal) was built in 1850. It is in the Scotch middle-pointed style of architecture; only a part of the proposed building is erected, but when completed it will have two towers and be an ornament to the city. The Free church have numerous edifices, as have also the different bodies of Presbyterian dissenters; and there is also a Gaelic church. The Baptists have a commodious chapel in South street, and the Roman Catholics one in Melville street. St. Mary's, Kinnoull hill, is a Roman Catholic establishment, consisting of the church and residence of the Redemptorist Fathers. The house serves also for the accommodation of clergy and laity who come here to spend a few days in spiritual exercises. The building though simple in its details forms by its size and proportions a handsome and imposing edifice. The church is in the early English style, and is a very perfect specimen of the simple and graceful architecture of the twelfth century. The house and church were built from the designs of Mr. Hoiton, city architect.

Newspapers.—There are three newspapers published in Perth, viz.:—The "Perthshire Constitutional and Journal," established in 1832 (Conservative). It circulates very widely among the nobility, gentry, clergy, farmers, professional men and upper classes generally, and is a paper of much influence in this and and neighbouring counties. The "Perthshire Advertiser" (Liberal), which has a large circulation in various parts of Perthshire, was established in 1829. The "Perthshire Courier," established 1809, is Liberal in politics, and the organ of the Free church party; it devotes much space to ecclesiastical matters.

The city of Perth contains several charitable and well supported institutions for the sick and destitute. Among these are the County and City Infirmary (attached to which is a District and Dispensary department), a Hospital for Incurables, the Murray Royal Institution (an asylum for the insane), King James the Sixth's Hospital, a Society for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, the Destitute Sick Society &c. The Infirmary is a commanding structure, the first stone of which was laid by Lord Kinnaird in 1836. The Marquis of Breadalbane and Dr. Brown, of Perth, left liberal bequests to this institution, which have been augmented by one from the late Marquis of Breadalbane, and many others. Additional wards for the treatment of infectious diseases were erected in 1865 at a cost of £1,200, defrayed principally by subscription. King James the Sixth's Hospital was founded by King James the Sixth in 1569, and charters were granted by that monarch in 1569 and 1587, and confirmed by Acts of Parliament in 1587 and 1592, "to provide by all honest ways and means an hospital for the poor maimed distressed person, orphans and fatherless bairns within our burgh of Perth," and for the endowment of which he gave all the "lands, biggins, tenements, kirks, orchards, &c., which pertained to chaplainries, attatages, prebendaries, founded in whatever kirk, chapel or college within the liberties and privileges of said burgh of Perth; all the lands, &c., &c., which pertained to the Blackfriars, Greyfriars and Carmelite monks at the Reformation—the profits of the same to be applied, in all time coming, to the hospital and sustenance of the poor." The Hospital for Incurables is situated in Dundee road: it has only recently been opened, and at present contains six patients. There are many applicants, and the Directors hope to make arrangements to receive ten or twelve more. The Murray Royal Institution, erected from a bequest of Mr. James Murray, a native of Perth, was opened in 1827, for the reception of 80 patients. It is situated on an eminence of considerable elevation on the north-west side of the Hill of Kinnoull, and is in the Grecian Doric style of architecture. The Poorhouse,an extensive pile of buildings, is situated in Glasgow road, and was erected by the authorities of the city at a cost of £8,000. The Antiquarian Museum possesses a considerable collection of valuable coins, medals and manuscripts, besides a great variety of natural curiosities, amongst which is a cabinet of minerals, containing upwards of twelve hundred choice specimens. In the centre of Rose terrace were erected, in 1805, the Public Seminaries, of fine stone, embellished with noble pillars. Since the passing of the Scotch Education Act, 1872, the School Board has remodelled the interior of the buildings and added accessories suitable to modern ideas. It has also instituted a curriculum extending over a period of nine years. The school is separated into two divisions—the lower or elementary school, and the higher or senior school; the latter having for its object what is commonly called middle-class or secondary education, as given in the best higher public schools. The session commences in October and ends in July. The masters comprehend a rector for mathematics, natural philosophy and chemistry, and the higher branches of arithmetic, a rector of the grammar or classical department, with their assistants; a master for modern languages, one for drawing and painting, and another for practical arithmetic and accounts. Sharp's Educational Institution is in South Methven street. This large and elegant building, erected by the trustees of the late Mr. John Sharp, baker, Perth, was opened in September, 1869. The institution contains four departments—the industrial, the infants', the junior, and the senior. Special attention is given to the industrial training of girls in sewing, knitting, household economy, &c. The elder boys are taught calisthenics and drill. A beautiful structure has been erected near the Bridge, which forms a handsome termination to George street. It is dedicated to the memory of the late Thomas Marshall, Esq. of Glenalmond, formerly lord provost. The form of this chapel is circular, ornamented with an elegant Ionic portico; the body of the building is surmounted by a dome, and the whole is imitative of the Pantheon at Rome. In the interior are halls for the public library and the museum of the Literary and Antiquarian Society of Perth. This structure was raised by private subscription. The Freemasons' Hall is a neat and not inelegant building, in the Parliament close, High street. It contains a handsome spacious room. It was built on the site of the old Parliament House in the year 1818, and is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons. A statue of the late Prince Consort was erected in 1864, and was inaugurated by Her Majesty on the 30th of August in that year. On this occasion the late Sir David Ross, the then lord provost, was knighted. The statue is the work of Mr. Brodie, sculptor, Edinburgh, and is much admired. On the Inches many of the citizens ardently engage in athletic sports and exercises, especially cricket, football, and the national game of golf. The Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry. The barracks, erected in 1795, at the west end of Athole street, were originally intended to accommodate 200 cavalry, but are now devoted to the use of infantry. Perth being now the seat of the 57th Brigade Depot, extensive alterations and additions have been made. The militia barracks are in Canal street.

The weekly market-day is Friday. The fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council, on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the days formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places, they are now, therefore, held on the first Fridays in March, April July, and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Inverness wool fair. A cattle market is likewise held on the South Inch on every Friday, from the third occurrence of that day in December, to the middle of June, and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May; there are now two great cattle and sheep marts in Perth. The population of Perth in 1871 was 25,606, namely, 11,614 males and 13,992 females.

Kinfauns is a parish five miles east of Perth. It is about five miles long, by a width of two and a half miles. It is situated on the banks of the river Tay, and is a station on the Perth and Dundee line. An Established and a Free church, and a Board School are in the parish. Acreage of the parish, 4,291; population, 578.

Glencarse is a small village in the parish of Kinfauns, 6¼ miles e. by s. from Perth. It is a station on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian Railway.

Kinnoull parish lies with its western extremity to the Tay, opposite Perth, extending thence in an irregular manner for nearly four miles, with a general breadth of one mile. The parish consists of several detached portions, including Balbeggie, Murrayshall, Balthayock, and Inchyra. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations. From the summit of Kinnoull hill a beautiful view of the surrounding country may be obtained. Many handsome villas have been erected within the last few years on the rising grounds to the east of the river, and forming part of the suburb of Kinnoull. The ancient church of the parish was a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church is a neat edifice, built on a bank overhanging the Tay. Near this once stood the old castle of Kinnoull. Kinnoull has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Errol, the first of the title being ennobled in 1627, as Lord Hay of Kinfauns, and elevated to the earldom in 1633 as Earl of Kinnoull and Viscount Dupplin. A handsome school has recently been erected under the combined Boards of Perth and Kinnoull. The parish comprises 3,646 acres, and in 1871 the population numbered 8,108.

PITLOCHRY,

MOULIN, LOGIERAIT, BALLINLUIG AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village and post town, in the parish of Moulin, 13 miles N.W. from Dunkeld, and about five from Logierait; situated on the banks of the Tummel, and surrounded on all sides by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery found in the highlands of Perthshire. The trade of the village is mainly confined to that of domestic and retail character—except that the distillation of whisky is carried on somewhat extensively in the village and neighbourhood. The place, too, is of sufficient importance to encourage the establishment of several respectable fire and life agency offices, and three banking concerns—branches, respectively, of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland, and there is, besides, a branch of the Perth Savings Bank, and a station on the Highland Railway. There are two small manufactories in the village, one for tweeds, plaids, &c. and the other for the preparation of chemicals. There is a very handsome edifice in connection with the Free church, and for the convenience of the great influx of the English visitors there is a small but beautiful chapel about half a mile to the east of the village called Holy Trinity Episcopal chapel. There is in course of erection a Hydropathic Establishment, the finest in Scotland, which is expected to be opened in the spring of 1878; the cost of which is over £60,000. A justice of peace court sits here once in every third month, and the fairs are held annually, on the Saturday before Amulree in May; on the Friday after Falkirk Tryst in August (for lambs), and on the third Wednesday in October (old style). Population in 1871, 510.

MOULIN is a large parish in the Highlands, extending towards Athole, bounded on the north-east by the parish of Kirkmichael, on the south-east by Logierait, on the south-west by Dull, and on the west and north-west by Blair Athole. It is intersected by the Briarachan and the Arnate, which unite within the district. The latter takes its rise in Lochloch, in the north-east of the parish, and runs through Glenfarnate, and its junction with the Briarachan forms the Ardale. The several lochs are well stocked with trout, particularly Loch Broom. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is five miles distant from Logierait, near to it stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. There is a very excellent inn in the village. The Parish church, which was erected in 1832, and the Parish school, are both situated in this village. In the parish is the pass of KILLIECRANKIE, noted for the battle fought there in July, 1689, between King William's troops, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of Highlanders under the Viscount of Dundee. There is a fair held at Moulin annually on the first Tuesday in March. The parish of Moulin has an acreage of 44,640. The population according to the returns for 1871, was 1,793.

LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county—the village is eight miles north from Dunkeld, and the like distance east from Aberfeldy. It is noted for the distillation of whisky. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each seven miles. Not far from the church is an eminence, which commands a prospect of the greater part of the parish, which, including the windings of the rivers, the vales and pastures, with the woodlands, in some places extending to the rivers' banks, and the distant mountains, form one of the richest landscapes that can be imagined. On an eminence above the junction, a Celtic cross commands the valley. This is a monument erected to the memory of the late Duke of Athole, by the gentlemen of the county and his tenantry. A Combination Poorhouse was erected in 1864, for the accommodation of Logierait and ten adjoining parishes. A chain boat commenced crossing the Tay at Logierait in August, 1824, for the accommodation of foot and horse passengers. A coach and four may go into the conveyance without taking the horses from the carriage. It was at Logierait that Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Prestonpans. Acreage of the parish, 37,759; population in 1871, 2,417.

BALLINLUIG is a small village in the parish of Logierait, situated about half-way between Dunkeld and Pitlochry. Here is a Baptist chapel, an excellent school, and there is a station on the Highland Railway, which is also the junction for Aberfeldy.

SCONE,

BALBEGGIE, CAIRNBEDDIE, COLLACE, GUILDTOWN, KINROSSIE AND ST. MARTIN.

SCONE is a parish lying on the left bank of the Tay, opposite the parishes of Redgorton and Perth—the village, sometimes called NEW SCONE, is about two miles north-east from Perth, and with the palace occupies a retiring part of the grounds which rise from the Tay, and commands an outlook upon the river and the vale of Perth. This place is worthy of notice principally on account of its ancient palace, for ages the residence of the early Scottish monarchs, the palace of their coronation, and the scene of many important and brilliant events. In the vicinage formerly stood an abbey, founded by Alexander I. in the year 1114. Some historians have described Scone as the ancient capital of the Picts; it certainly was the chief seat of Scottish royalty as far back as the time of Kenneth II. In the church of the abbey was preserved the famous stone (brought from Ireland, according to some writers, by Fergus I.), which was used as the coronation seat, and upon which all the Scottish kings were crowned till the calamitous days of John Baliol, when Edward I. carried it to England, where it continues to form one of the appendages to regality in Westminster Abbey. The last monarch crowned at Scone was Charles II. January 1st, 1651, when on his expedition in this kingdom. On the site of the ancient palace an elegant new edifice has been raised, as a seat of the Earl of Mansfield—pleasantly seated on an extensive lawn sloping gently to the Tay, and surrounded by large and umbrageous plantations. In this modern mansion much of the antique furniture has, with judicious taste, been preserved, in particular, a bed that belonged to James VI. and another, the hangings of which were wrought by the fair hands of Queen Mary, when a prisoner at Lochleven; the music gallery occupies the same site as the noble hall in which the coronations were performed; the large gallery for the reception of a collection of valuable paintings, is one hundred and eighty feet long. About fifty yards from the house is an aisle of the old abbey of Scone; it contains a magnificent marble monument to a Viscount Stormont, who died upwards of two centuries ago. At a little distance further stands the old market cross of Scone, surrounded by a wilderness of pleasure grounds, which have usurped the station of the ancient village; it has been aptly observed, that "there are many instances of towns losing their market crosses, but this is the only cross which has lost its town." Acreage of the parish, 7,815; population in 1871, 2,820.

BALBEGGIE is a village in the parish of Kinnoull, three miles north-east from Scone, and five miles north-east from Perth. It contains a United Presbyterian church.

COLLACE is a parish seven miles north-east from Perth, surrounded by the parishes of Cargill, St. Martin, Kinnaird and Abernyte. The hill of Dunsinane, 1,114 feet above the sea level is in this parish. Upon this insulated and chosen site (rendered famous by Shakspere), Macbeth, the Thane of Glammis, in 1043, erected a strong and lofty castle, keeping the surrounding country in the most abject subjection. In 1094, an overwhelming force, supported by Edward the Confessor, the reigning King of England, marched upon the stronghold on behalf of Malcolm, son of King Duncan, whom Macbeth had previously murdered. Being observed from the battlements, Macbeth fled northwards, but was pursued and slain, according to tradition, at Limphinan, in Aberdeenshire. The fortress was razed to the ground. The parish church is a neat Gothic structure, with square tower, erected in 1813. Freestone of good quality abounds in the parish. KINROSSIE is a small village in the parish. Acreage of the parish, 2,927. Population in 1871, 456.

ST. MARTIN is a parish about five miles north-east from Perth, extending along the banks of the Tay, forming an oblong square, averaging nearly two miles in breadth. The soil in general is black, and seems originally to have been taken from moorland. At CAIRNBEDDIE are the remains of a castle once occupied by Macbeth, and as tradition states, this place not being secure, he removed to the celebrated hill of Dunsinane, where he fortified a castle. About a mile from his old residence at a place still called "The Witch Stane" (where a remarkable stone still stands) is pointed out the spot where he was met by the witches who warned him to beware "till Birnam forest came to Dunsinane," &c. There is a parish church. GUILDTOWN is a small village in the parish of St. Martin. Acreage of the parish, 6,565. Population in 1871, 735.

THORNHILL,

OR THORNHILL-IN-MENTEITH, is a village in the parish of Kincardine, 45 miles W. by N. from Edinburgh, 39 S.W. from Perth, 5 S. from Callander, 4 from Doune, and 4 from Kippen. It consists chiefly of one street, extending nearly half a mile in length. The inhabitants are employed mostly in agriculture, and a few in weaving. Two churches of the Establishment and a Free church are the places of worship; and the schools are under the School Board, and there is one maintained by subscription. The parish lies in the southern quarter of the county, in the strath of Menteith; it is triangular in figure, one side of which is twelve miles in length, another sixteen, and a third about seven. A large portion of the parish was formerly covered with moss, but, with the exception of about five hundred acres, it is now entirely free. Adjacent to the Perth, and on the road from Stirling to Doune, is the highly ornamented and improved estate of Blair Drummond, upon which operations of great magnitude have been successfully carried on in reducing the quantity of superincumbent moss, from which the estate is now said to be entirely free. Population in 1871, 513.

RENFREWSHIRE.

THIS county, of great importance as connected with the manufactures of North Britain, is bounded on the south by Ayrshire, and on the east and north-east by Lanarkshire; the Clyde river and Firth separate it from the county of Dumbarton on the north, and the Firth of Clyde divides it from Argyleshire on the west. In figure it is nearly triangular, measuring from north-west to south-east about thirty miles, and varying in breadth from ten to fifteen miles.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the epoch of the Roman invasion this district was inhabited by the Damnii, a British tribe who also occupied the adjacent vale of Strathclyde. The invaders concentrated themselves at a spot near the present site of Paisley, to which they gave the name of Vanduaria. In after times the Romanised inhabitants were subjected to the sway of the Scots, and in 1097 submitted to the silent revolution which took place under Edgar, when the Celtic customs were changed for the municipal laws which the Scoto-Saxon government gradually introduced. In the reign of David I. Walter the son of Alan, fled from Shropshire during the troublous conflicts of Maud and Stephen, and settled in the district, where David I. made him steward and gave him lands to support the dignity of his office. Besides these possessions he subsequently acquired the whole district of Strathgryfe, and the western half of Kyle, in Ayrshire, which hence was called Kyle Stewart. Such was the manner in which the first of the royal family of Stewart settled in Scotland. At this period the country in this quarter was in a semi-barbarous state, but Walter, the Stewart, introduced new and civilised usages. He settled many of his military followers on his lands, and by founding the abbey of Paisley, introduced a body of instructed men, who taught the ancient people domestic arts and foreign manners. For several centuries this district formed a portion of Lanarkshire. In 1404 Robert III. created a principality, consisting of the barony of Renfrew and the whole of the Stewarts' estates, with the earldom of Carrick and the barony of King's Kyle, all of which he granted, in a free regality, as a provision for his son James; and this principality continued, in after times, the appropriate appanage of the eldest sons of the Scottish monarchs. In consequence of these arrangements, the identity of the barony of Renfrew and the shire of Lanark was dissolved, and the former placed under the jurisdiction of a separate sheriff.

SOIL, PRODUCE, AND MANUFACTURES.—The soil of the county is very much diversified. In those parts of the high grounds which are not covered by heath and moss, a fine light soil on a gravelly sub-stratum is generally found. In the portion formed of detached hills the surface is a thin earth, based on gravel; and in the level district the plough or spade sinks through a deep, rich, brown loam. More than one-half of the shire, comprehending the west and south-east portions, is hilly, and devoted to pasture. The cultivated districts comprise the north, the north-east, and the centre of the county, and consist partly of low distinct elevations, and partly of a level tract of rich loam between Paisley and the river Clyde. The hilly part of the county varies in elevation from 500 to 600 feet; the hill of greatest altitude in the shire is about 1,240 feet high. Owing to the great demand in this county for dairy produce, and that also of the garden and the fold (arising from the vicinity of large and populous towns), nearly two-thirds of the arable land in the shire is is kept under grass; and hence the county of Renfrew enjoys but little celebrity as an agricultural district. The minerals of this shire are of very considerable value—coal, limestone, and sandstone abounding in various parts of it. The most extensive coal works are those of Quarrelton, near the centre of the county; Polmadie, on its north-east boundary; and Hurlet and Houschill, to the south-east of Paisley. As many as eight or nine different lime quarries have been wrought at the same time in Renfrewshire. Ironstone accompanies all the coal strata, and is particularly embodied in the composition of the shores of the Clyde. In point of commercial and manufacturing importance, this county is second only to that of Lanark, and with it unites in constituting the great manufacturing districts of Scotland. The manufactures are chiefly cotton and silk goods, including amongst various articles and fabrics, shawls of infinite diversity in texture and price. Whilst Paisley is the head-quarter of the trade in these articles, the business of weaving is pursued, to a greater or less extent, in almost every town, village, and hamlet. The free export of the manufactured goods is promoted by the different sea-ports on the Clyde, especially Greenock, by which also foreign produce is imported. The trade is further assisted by the Forth and Clyde Canal, which connects this county with many other shires.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The waters of Renfrewshire are of no great magnitude in themselves, but by the industry and enterprise of the inhabitants of the district they are rendered of material importance to society. The principal streams are the White Cart, the Black Cart, and the Gryfe, all of which ultimately unite, and fall into the Clyde below Inchinnan Bridge; that is, about half-way down the river between Glasgow and Port Glasgow. The White Cart (which, by way of distinction, is generally denominated the Cart), has its creative springs at Eaglesham, in this county, and in the high grounds of East Kilbride, in Lanarkshire; and, passing Paisley in its course, joins the Gryfe at the bridge above named. The Black Cart issues from the beautiful loch of Castle Semple, in Lochwinnoch parish, and, flowing northward, falls in with the Gryfe at Walkinshaw. The Gryfe rises in the high grounds above Largs, and flows eastwards until it meets the Black Cart; the Gryfe bestows the name of Strathgryfe upon the vale through which it flows. The lakes are Castle Semple Loch, Queenside Loch (in the parish of Lochwinnoch), two lochs in Neilston parish, and several smaller ones. The first named (Castle Semple) is situate in the southern border of the county; its banks are beautifully wooded in some places, and it contains a small island, on which stand the ruins of a castle. This county enjoys the benefit of railway transit, being intersected by the main lines of the Caledonian, the Greenock and Ayrshire, and the Glasgow and South-Western Railways with their branches.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Renfrewshire comprehends fifteen entire parishes and four parts of parishes. It contains two representative burghs—Port Glasgow and Renfrew—which join with Rutherglen, Dumbarton, and Kilmarnock in returning one member to Parliament; and Greenock, Paisley, and the county each send a representative. The present (1877) member for the county is William Mure, Esq. The county contains an acreage of about 160,000; the population, according to the return for 1871, was 216,947—namely, 103,669 males and 113,278 females, showing an increase over that in 1861 of 39,386; the number of inhabited houses in 1871 was 13,551.

BARRHEAD,

NEILSTON, HURLET AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BARRHEAD is a thriving village in the parish of Neilston, county of Renfrew, four miles from Paisley and seven from Glasgow. The town or village consists chiefly of one principal street, with several smaller ones diverging from it, and together with a suburb called GRAHAMSTON, which is connected by a bridge over the Levern, is the centre of a manufacturing and thickly populated neighbourhood. The trade and manufactures of the district are very considerable, consisting of several large bleach fields, a number of extensive calico and shawl printing establishments, cotton spinning, power-loom weaving, besides collieries, and engineering and ironfoundry works. These altogether give employment to a vast number of both sexes, and contribute materially to the prosperity of the place. In the village there are three banking establishments, several respectable shops and a gas works. A justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday in each month. The railway station, a handsome one, is situated close to the town. The places of worship are an Established church, a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and one for Roman Catholics. There are two schools built under the Scotch Education Act, each affording accommodation for about 350 children. There is also a Mechanics' Institute, with an extensive library attached. Population of Barrhead in 1871, 6,209.

NEILSTON is a village in the parish of its name, nine miles S.W. from Glasgow, the like distance N.E. from Stewarton, five from Paisley, and one from Barrhead, eligibly situate on the river Levern, on the road to Irvine, in the midst of a well-cultivated and thriving neighbourhood. In the centre of the village stands the parochial church, surmounted by a handsome steeple and clock. The situation of the village is healthy, and is within ten minutes' walk of the station. In the vicinity are several bleach fields and printworks; and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland and the Clydesdale Banking Company afford suitable monetary accommodation. There is a school under the Elementary Education Act, and an endowed school. The inhabitants also support several institutions and societies of a charitable, friendly, and educational character; there is also an agricultural society. The parish extends eight miles in length by from two to four in breadth. From the summit of a ridge of hills, which extends through the entire length of the parish, the prospect is grand and comprehensive, and several plantations add materially to the beauty of the scene. There are two small lakes, called Loch Lebo and Loch Long. From the former issues the Lugton, a tributary stream of the Garnock; and the latter discharges itself by the Levern, which runs north-east to join the Cart. Population in 1871, 1,716.

One mile from Barrhead, on the Glasgow road, is the small village of HURLET, where are a large chemical and an extensive colliery works.

CATHCART, CROSSMYLOOF, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CATHCART is a pleasant village in the parish of that name partly in the county of Lanark but chiefly in that of Renfrew, distant from Glasgow two miles. Its original designation was Caer-Cart, i.e., the Castle on the river Cart. The parish is of considerable extent, and contains above 3,000 acres, almost wholly arable. Calico and yarn printing and dyeing are extensively carried on in the parish, and in it are paper, pasteboard, and snuff mills. The surface of the land is agreeably diversified with hills and dales, and presents, in many situations, great picturesque beauty. Agriculture is the occupation of a great proportion of the inhabitants; the very summits of the hills are ploughed and cultivated. The Parish church, which is in Gothic style of architecture, will accommodate 850 persons, and a Free church has accommodation for about 650. There are also several good schools in the parish. The field of Langside, in this parish, is remarkable for being the scene of the last fruitless effort of the unfortunate Mary to regain her crown. An eminence is still pointed out where the queen stood during the engagement. The old castle of Cathcart is a very conspicuous ruin, placed in a commanding situation, with two sides defended by the Cart, to which there is almost perpendicular descent of a tremendous depth. It belonged to the Lords of Cathcart, and has been dismantled over a century. Cathcart parish has an aggregate area of 4,064 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 7,231.

CROSSMYLOOF is a finely situated little hamlet, composed principally of plain houses ranged on both sides of the highway, about two miles south from Glasgow, commanding a wide spreading prospect of the surrounding country studded with towns, villages, and mansions, and bounded at the extreme distance by the misty Pentlands. The United Presbyterians have a place of worship here. An extensive baking establishment was erected in 1847 by the late Mr. Thomson, of Camphill, for the purpose of supplying the city of Glasgow with bread. There is also a small iron forge in the village. Population in 1871, 988.

EAGLESHAM

IS a neat modern village, 10 miles s.w. from Glasgow and 11 s. from Paisley, pleasantly situated in the lower part of the parish to which it has given its name, about a mile to the north-west of the old castle of Polnoon; it is composed of two rows of houses, a tributary rivulet to the Cart running through the intermediate space. The old village was demolished in 1769, and was shortly afterwards rebuilt under the direction of the former Earl of Eglintoun, who also in 1789 erected a church, of octagonal form, with an elegant steeple, furnished with a good clock and a fine toned bell; there are likewise a Free church, and chapels for United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. The barony of Eaglesham and the patronage of the church was in the Earl of Eglintoun's family, since the year 1250, but has passed into that of Allan Gilmour, Esq. Two cotton mills give employment to the industrious classes, and there is a small grain mill. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in May and August (old style). Eaglesham, which embraces 15,666 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 1,714.

POST OFFICE, EAGLESHAM, Walter Hogg, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive from Glasgow at half-past nine morning and six evening, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past eight morning and forty-five minutes past five evening.

GOUROCK.

GOUROCK is a small sea-port town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Inverkip, three miles west from Greenock, beautifully situated on the south side of a fine bay of the river Clyde. The haven is favoured with excellent anchorage ground, and vessels to and from Glasgow, Port Glasgow and Greenock frequently take refuge here in stormy weather; a small but commodious quay was constructed, at the cost of about £5,000, which has nine feet depth at low water—an advantage possessed by no other on the Clyde. The town, which is upwards of a mile in length, has become a fashionable resort in the summer months, of families from Glasgow and other places. It is said that this port was the first place in Great Britain where red herrings were prepared. The lands of Gourock were incorporated into a burgh of barony by a charter from William and Mary, dated the 24th of April, 1694, with very extensive powers, and amongst other privileges, gives authority to hold a weekly market and two annual fairs, but the successive proprietors have never yet thought proper to avail themselves of this privilege. A neat chapel was built in the year 1773. From the increase of the inhabitants, and the influx of visitors in the summer, it was too small for their accommodation; to obviate this inconvenience a very commodious place of worship, with a handsome tower and clock, was erected in 1832. A Free church, an United Presbyterian chapel, and a Scottish Episcopal church are the other places of worship. There are also commodious Board schools. The Gamble Institute, opened in 1876, was built and endowed by Miss Gamble, of Ashburn, at a cost of about £8,000. It contains a public hall, reading room and library, bath rooms, &c. Tramways were laid here from Greenock and opened July 1873. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established here, and works have been erected for the supply of gas to the town, the population of which in 1871 was 2,940.

GREENOCK,

THE first seaport in Scotland, is 22 miles w. from Glasgow, 15 w. from Paisley, 66 from Edinburgh, and 419 from London; situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, and connected with Glasgow by means of the Glasgow and South-Western and the Caledonian Railways, and with the coast by the Wemyss Bay Railway. The site of the town is unrivalled for the command of grand and picturesque scenery, combining water, wood, and mountain. In the early part of the eighteenth century Greenock was a small village, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and without quay or harbour; it now, however, possesses four harbours, which, having been improved at a considerable expense, are most commodious and capacious; they extend 5,455 feet from east to west, and are of sufficient depth to float vessels of great burthens; and in the roads there is good anchorage for ships of the largest class. The quays are spacious, and have well-constructed sheds, supported by iron pillars, for the security of merchandise against the weather; there are also good graving and other docks, capable of receiving vessels of any size. The area of the water inside the Victoria Harbour is somewhat over six acres, and the works were erected at a cost of about £120,000. It is one of the finest tidal harbours in the kingdom, and is particularly well suited for vessels of large tonnage, being sixteen feet deep at neap tides, and fourteen at spring tides. At this harbour is a crane capable of lifting fifty tons, so that steamers of the largest class may have their engines fitted without taking the ground. The Albert Harbour, was opened in 1866. The water area extends to nearly eleven acres, and the cost of the harbour and the necessary quays, &c. adjoining, was about £200,000. The Prince's Pier, which extends along the Clyde westward from the harbour, was erected at a cost of £70,000. With this pier the Glasgow & South-Western Railway has direct communication, thus affording great facilities of conveyance for passengers and their luggage between the steamboats and the trains. The pier was opened in 1870. Besides these, other new and extensive docks which the steadily increasing trade of the town and the river traffic make imperatively necessary have been constructed; these are situated to the extreme east of the town, whilst other tracts of ground have been acquired for still further increasing the harbour accommodation. The Esplanade was formed at a cost of about £20,000. It extends from the foot of Campbell street, in a noble sweep of about a mile and a quarter, along the shore of the Frith; it is protected by a substantial sea wall, with palisades, and is provided with numerous landing places; it is also well lighted with gas, and seats are disposed at convenient distances for the accommodation of pedestrians. Gas works on an extensive scale have been erected on the road to Port Glasgow. Among the public edifices of this town, the Custom House decidedly ranks first; it is truly a grand national structure. The selection of its situation is also most appropriate; the grand front faces the water, having a fine open space from the edge of the quay. The building is of Grecian architecture; in it the business of the customs, inland revenue, and post office is transacted. The entrance to the Custom House is at the north front, facing the river, and that of the inland revenue, at the east front, while the post office fronts to the west. This fine edifice was erected under the direction of Mr. Burn, of Edinburgh. The Greenock coffee and newsroom, in Cathcart square, is well supplied with the various journals and magazines; this fine room is also used as the Greenock Exchange; it is supported by subscription, strangers having the privilege of admission. There is a clubhouse in Ardgowan square, which is handsome and commodious. Greenock is the birth-place of the illustrious Watt, the perfector of the steam engine, who was born in 1736. In commemoration of this circumstance his son erected a building in Union street, called the Watt Monument and Institution, for the purpose of a library, art gallery, &c. upon ground given by the late Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Bart. The building is from a design by Mr. Blore, architect, of London, and cost upwards of £7,000; a statue of the deceased engineer, from the chisel of Chantrey, is placed within the entrance of the edifice; £2,000 was paid for its execution. The Mechanics' Institute, in Sir Michael street, has also a good library and newsroom. The public baths are in the same building, the entrance being in Tobago street.

Among the most important branches under the head of or connected with manufactures are several shipbuilding establishments, the yards of some of which being so complete as to rank second only to those belonging to the Crown; there are several extensive engine works, marine and otherwise, and iron foundries; breweries, ropewalks, tan yards, and extensive sugar refineries; manufactories for woollen and sail cloth; a distillery, and large mills for spinning wool and flax, and for making paper. But in nothing is Greenock more celebrated than in the building and fitting-up of steam vessels, furnishing them not only for London, Bristol, Liverpool and Dublin, but also for the Mediterranean, Portugal, Spain, South America, and New South Wales. Most of the fine steamers belonging to the Cunard American line have been built here. Greenock being the first seaport town in North Britain, its mercantile and shipping trade extends to very considerable importations of rum, sugar, molasses, mahogany, &c. from the West Indies; ice, potash, timber, &c. and naval stores from America, and wine, fruit, &c., from Portugal; many ships are likewise employed in the Baltic trade, and also in the fisheries of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Since the opening of commercial intercourse with India and China, the merchants of this place have prosecuted the trade to those countries with great spirit and commensurate success; the Clyde ships, from the superiority of their construction, never failing to secure a preference of engagements. Greenock derives vast advantages from the application of steam to navigation, there being a great number of vessels propelled by this powerful auxiliary constantly traversing the Clyde, to and from Glasgow, and the intermediate places on the banks of the river, where they make stoppages for the convenience of passengers. Large and elegant steamboats also leave this port for Liverpool, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, Campbelton, Ayr, Inverness, and other intermediate places in the Highlands, at stated periods. Indeed, no town in the kingdom affords greater facility to travellers, by this mode of conveyance than Greenock. The steamers carrying the Irish mail are despatched from this port.

There is in the neighbourhood of the town the greatest amount of water power to be found in the kingdom; this is derived from an extensive breakwater having been thrown across a valley, in the bottom of which a stream of water flowed, now forming a condensed body of that element, two miles long and half a mile wide. Having a depth of sixty feet, and an elevation of five hundred feet above the level of the sea, it furnishes sites for a large number of mills, with power to any extent that may be required; it is also rendered subservient to the supply of the town with water for domestic purposes. This splendid work was completed in 1827, by a company, under the title of Shaw's Water Company. There are in the town nine banking establishments, viz. branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, the National Bank of Scotland, the City of Glasgow Bank, the British Linen Company's Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Provident Savings Bank. The municipal government of Greenock is vested in a provost, four bailies, a town treasurer, and sixteen councillors, who have the power of making laws for the burgh, and of maintaining peace and order within its limits. The police is under the most efficient regulation, both that of the town and that of the harbour; the management of the latter is confided to its commissioners, along with the town council. The town has its gaol and bridewell, which are included in the County Buildings, situate in Nelson-street; here also are held the sheriff and other courts, and apartments are provided for the necessary officers connected therewith. The burgh sends one member to parliament. The present (1877) representative is James Johnston Grieve, Esq. of Levan, Gourock.

The Theatre Royal, in West Blackhall st. was opened in 1858; it is a comfortable and well appointed place of amusement. Considerable facilities are afforded for healthful recreation by the establishment of rowing, cricket, and bowling clubs; these are all well supported, and the grounds and bowling greens are kept in excellent order. The Well Park, in Regent street, is small but well laid out; it overlooks the town, and is approached from Cathcart street by a series of terraces. From it on a clear day fine views of the Clyde and the Argyleshire hills are obtained. The Wellington Park, situated near Drumfrochar road, was formally opened and devoted to the public on the first of June, 1872. It is laid out upon ground presented to the town by Sir Michael R. Shaw Stewart, and is of considerable extent; the lower and most level portion contains bowling, cricket, and play grounds, whilst the more elevated parts, though not susceptible of improvement by cultivation, yet afford space for pleasant rambles and very fine views are also here presented of the town, the Frith, and surrounding scenery. Three newspapers are published here, the "Greenock Advertiser," the "Greenock Herald," and the "Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette." There are several charitable institutions, the finest amongst which, as a building, is Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Asylum, an institution founded by the late Sir Gabriel Wood, for the relief and comfort of aged and decayed master mariners and merchant seamen. The Infirmary, erected in 1809, has recently been considerable enlarged; it is ornamental as a public edifice, and its utility is universally acknowledged. The Buchanan Night Asylum affords food and shelter to such poor persons as may be without a home. A Sailors' Home, on the same principle as those of Liverpool and Dublin, is established.

About a mile from Greenock, close to the banks of the Clyde, is a battery mounting eight guns; but there are no barracks, and it is seldom that any soldiers are quartered in the town. There are several very agreeable bathing villages in the vicinity. One of these forms a very pleasing and picturesque object from the quays, being seated under the mountains on the opposite side of the Frith, which is six or seven miles across. Several steamboats go to and from the different villages during the bathing season.

Greenock comprehends three parishes, respectively called the West parish, the Mid parish, and the East parish—all being erected out of, and separated from, the original parish of Innerkip. The first, which may be styled the mother parish of the three, includes the western part of the town, and the greater proportion of the country district. The church is a modern and elegant structure situated in Nelson street; the original church, which was for some time in ruins, has been repaired, and stands near the shore, surrounded by an old burying ground, which is interesting from being the resting place of Burns' "Highland Mary," and to mark which some years since a monument was erected. The Mid parish comprehends the central parts of the town; the church is situated in Cathcart square, and is an elegant structure with a lofty steeple. The site is extremely well selected to render it an ornament to the town, and forms a highly interesting object in the prospect from the river. The East parish possesses a place of worship in Regent street. A new church for this parish is now in course of erection. It is in the Gothic style of architecture, built of stone, at a cost of upwards of £4,000. There is an Episcopal (English) church in Union street. The Free church has nine places of worship, and there are buildings connected with the various other denominations, a list of which will be found in the directory of the town. Greenock Academy is a large establishment for the education of both sexes. It is under the supervision of a rector and lady superintendent and seven assistant masters and two mistresses. There are six public schools under the School Board. A large public Board school is now being erected in Crawford street at a cost of £9,000, which will accommodate about 900 children; and there is also in course of erection another public school in Shaw street, at a cost of £4,500, for 700 children, and one at Ladyburn, at a cost of £2,000. The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are two annual fairs, one taking place on the first Thursday in July, the other on the fourth Tuesday of November, and horse and cattle markets twice a year—on the Friday before Glasgow Whit-Monday fair, and on the Friday immediately preceding Kilbarchan fair. The population of the three parishes, according to the returns for 1871, was as follows:—West, 33,141; Mid, 9,592; East, 17,061. The town numbered at the same date 57,821 inhabitants.

HOUSTON,

BRIDGE OF WEIR, CROSSLEE, ERSKINE, BISHOPTON AND LANGBANK.

HOUSTON (or Houstoun) is a village or small town in the united parish of Houston and Kilellan, 14 miles from Glasgow, 7 from Paisley, the like distance from Port Glasgow, pleasantly situated on both sides the Houston burn. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving and embroidering. At the east end of the village is a small Parish church, there is also a Free church and a Roman Catholic chapel and school, also Board schools. It is said that the town is partly built of the stones that once composed the Castle of Houston, which formerly stood in this neighbourhood, to the east —an ancient mansion, the residence of the knights of Houston, demolished in 1780 by a proprietor of the estate. Population of the village, 518.

About one mile from Houston and three from Johnstone (a station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway) most delightfully and romantically situated in a valley, is WEIR BRIDGE, more familiarly known by the name of the "Bridge of Weir." It is the boundary of the parish in this quarter, being divided from the parish of Kilbarchan by the river Gryffe. On this stream are three cotton mills, at which are employed a considerable number of the industrious classes. A Free church is in the village, also Board schools. Population, 1,315.

About one mile hence is CROSSLEE, once participating in the prosperity enjoyed by different places in this parish as the seat of manufactures, but latterly almost deserted, owing to the destruction by fire of a large cotton mill, in which many hands were employed. The united parish is about six miles in length by three in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. Acreage of the parish of Houston and Killelan, 7,585; population of Crosslee, 379.

The parish of ERSKINE is six miles in length and from three to four in breadth, situate on the Clyde, opposite to Kilpatrick. The ground rises gently from the margin of the river, and is laid out in rich plantations, orchards and corn fields. Erskine House, the seat of Lord Blantyre, is a beautiful mansion, seated amidst tasteful pleasure grounds facing the Clyde. The Glasgow and Greenock Section of the Caledonian Railway passes through the parish. Erskine, it is said, is the oldest ferry on the Clyde. There is a neat and comfortable inn at this place. Acreage, 7,535; population, 1,565.

BISHOPTON is a small village in Erskine parish, on the Glasgow and Greenock road, 12 miles W.S.W. from the former place and 10½ E.S.E. from the latter. There is a place of worship belonging to the Free church, and a Board school. Brick making is carried on to some extent, and may be said to constitute the only approach to manufacturing in the village. The Greenock Section of the Caledonian line passes near to the village, for which it has a station. Population, 323.

LANGBANK is another small village in the same parish as Bishopton, from which place it is distant 3¾ miles. It is pleasantly situated on the Clyde, and is rapidly growing into favour as a country residence, several of the Glasgow merchants having handsome villas here. A church under the Establishment and also one for United Presbyterians have recently been erected. The former is a plain stone edifice with bell tower, whilst the latter has greater pretensions to architectural beauty, being ornamented with a tower and spire of considerable elevation. There is a good Board school in the village, and a station on the Greenock Section of the Caledonian Railway.

INNERKIP,

WEMYSS BAY, SKELMORLIE (AYRSHIRE), AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INNERKIP (or Inverkip) is a village in the parish of its name, six miles south-west from Greenock, situated on the Kipp water, which intersects the district from east to west, and falls into the Clyde. The village is sometimes called the "Auld Kirk." The Daff and some other rivulets irrigate the district. In their course they are broken into small cascades, which produce a pleasing effect, and the meadows through which they pass are finely embanked. Ardowgan House, the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw Stewart, Bart. is pleasantly situated on a kind of peninsula, a little north of the village. It is a fine modern building, surrounded with beautiful and romantic pleasure grounds. Besides the parish church, which is a neat and handsome edifice, surmounted by a spire, with a clock, there is a Free church, one for Episcopalians, and a Roman Catholic chapel; and there is a Board school in the village. Communication with other towns is rendered easy by means of the Wemyss Bay section of the Caledonian Railway, which has a station here. Acreage of the parish, 12,549; population in 1871, 4,502, and of the village, 637.

WEMYSS BAY is two miles from Innerkip, and is beautifully situated on the banks of the Clyde. It is fast rising into notice as a watering place. Many respectable families have here taken up their residence, and a number of handsome villas and an excellent hotel have been erected, all of which are well tenanted in the summer season. There is a church in connection with the Establishment, one for United Presbyterians, and a chapel for Episcopalians. The Caledonian Railway Company has a terminal station here, on their Wemyss Bay section, and their steamers also call to take in passengers for Largs, Millport, Fairlie, Rothesay, and other places. The Clydesdale Banking Company has a branch in the village.

SKELMORLIE (Ayrshire) is immediately connected with Wemyss Bay, and vies with it in beauty of situation and popularity as a summer residence. The houses are generally of a superior class, and many respectable shops are established. Gas works have also been recently erected. A hydropathic institution is in operation, under the superintendence of Dr. Currie. It is romantically situated upon a cliff overlooking the bay.

Post Office, INNERKIP, William Finlay, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at seven and half-past nine morning, and are despatched at half-past three and five minutes past four afternoon.

JOHNSTONE,

ELDERSLIE, KILBARCHAN, MILLIKEN PARK AND CARTSIDE.

JOHNSTONE is a very considerable manufacturing town, within the landward part of the Abbey parish of Paisley, 3½ miles w. from that town, 11 w. from Glasgow, 8 N. from Beith, and 14 S.E. from Greenock, most agreeably situated, contiguous to the Black Cart river. The increase of population in this locality is unparalleled in Scottish statistics. In 1782 it contained but ten persons. The system of feuing was then commenced here, and since that period it has been progressively increasing up to the present time. Trade and commerce, likewise, have kept pace with the augmentation of its population, there being now in the neighbourhood numerous cotton mills, a large paper mill, a flax mill, iron foundries, and extensive engineering, machine and tool manufactories, and four branch banks established here. Contiguous to the town are several valuable iron, coal and shale mines. The town is very regularly laid out, having good streets, with two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place; the houses are for the most part substantially constructed; the shops are numerous, and well stocked. The town is lighted with gas and bountifully supplied with water. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway passes the town, and affords direct communication with all parts of the country. Many years ago a canal was opened between this place, Paisley and Glasgow, which has proved of the greatest utility. From an eminence on the Paisley road, the town of Johnstone has a pleasing appearance, to the left, at a short distance, stands Johnstone Castle, surrounded by thriving plantations, and commanding a fine view of the country for many miles round. To the west of the town, immediately beyond the river Cart, is the seat of Sir Robert Napier, a delightful residence. Johnstone possesses nothing to invite the antiquarian or amuse the traveller; but curiosity may be gratified by a visit to the village of ELDERSLIE (a mile east of this place), once the residence of the renowned Wallace. The places of worship are the parish church, a Scottish Episcopal church, an English Episcopal church, a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The public institutions are a subscription library, a news room, a public hall, with mechanics' institute, and bible, missionary, and friendly societies. Two new schools have been erected under the Scotch Education Act, capable of affording accommodation for upwards of 1,000 children; besides these, there is also a Roman Catholic school and a school for factory children. Horse fairs are held on the Thursday after the second Monday of July and first Friday in January, and a cattle and pleasure fair in the middle of July, which lasts for three days. Population in 1871, 7,538.

KILBARCHAN is a manufacturing town, in the parish of its name, one mile and a half from Johnstone, and about five miles from Paisley; situate on the southern declivity of a hill, and pretty regularly built. Upwards of 1,000 looms are employed in this place and its immediate vicinity, in the manufacture of silk, cotton shawls, robes, &c. In the centre of the town is a school-house, with a tower, on which is the statue of Habbie Simpson, the well-known Scotch piper, born in this parish. It was executed by Archibald Robertson, a young sculptor from Greenock. The places of worship are the parish church and an United Presbyterian chapel. Gas was introduced by a company in 1846, and the town is now well lighted. There are two public libraries containing several thousand volumes. A horse fair is held annually on the first Tuesday in December (old style). Acreage of the parish, 9,000; population in 1871, 6,093, the town numbering 2,678.

LOCHWINNOCH,

NEW TOWN OF BELTREES AND HOW-WOOD.

LOCHWINNOCH is a large village in the parish of its name, 15½ miles. s.w. from Glasgow, 8½ s.s.w. from Paisley, 6½ s.s.w. from Johnstone, and 3½ N. from Beith. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway has a station close to the town. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its appellation, and surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, highly attractive to the tourist; among which the lovely loch, the banks of the Calder, the sublime cataract of Reekan Linn, the bottomless Gurratt's Linn, and the remains of several old castles, are all eminently worthy of a visit from the stranger to these parts. The lake, which stretches in a northerly and southerly direction, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart River; it is about two miles in length by one in breadth, but was formerly much more extensive, having been contracted by an embankment, whereby several hundred acres of land have been obtained and brought into cultivation. On the north-west side of the loch stands Castle Semple House, the seat of Henry Lee Harvey, Esq., the situation of which is in the highest degree picturesque; it occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about the year 1500; it was demolished in 1735. On a small island in the lake is the "Peel," the remains of some forgotten stronghold, of which nothing but a vault now exists. Lochwinnoch possesses some claims to notice as a place of manufactures, and contains a very extensive flax mill, a bleach-field, a woollen mill, &c. There is also established here a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank. The village is ornamented by a Parochial church, having a handsome steeple; also a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Saturday of each month. There is an annual fair called the "Fair of Hill," which is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). The parish of Lochwinnoch, which embraces 19,507 acres; in 1871, contained a population of 3,816, of this number 1,683 belonged to the village.

HOW-WOOD is a small village in the parish of Lochwinnoch, 3½ miles from that town, situate on the high road between Beith and Glasgow. About a mile and a half nearer to Lochwinnoch, in that parish, is a place called NEW TOWN OF BELTREES, another small village, neither of which contain any object worthy of particular description. In 1871 How-wood had a population of 312.

MEARNS, WITH BUSBY AND NEWTON.

MEARNS is a village in the parish of its name, seven miles from Glasgow and eight from Paisley, and about three and a half miles from Clarkston station, on the Glasgow and Kilbride line. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and extends seven miles in length by about three in breadth. The surface of the land is finely diversified by pleasing undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile, and adapted to the purposes of the dairy, while other portions of the district afford excellent pasturage. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton, joins the former road a little beyond the King's Well Inn. In the parish are three bleach fields, calico printing works, and an extensive cotton spinning mill; the latter two at BUSBY, a small romantic village in the parish of Mearns, five miles from Glasgow. At NEWTON, another village in Mearns, three miles from Giffnock, a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride line, stands the Parish church, a neat stone edifice, with a handsome spire, in which is an excellent clock; and the interior contains seven hundred sittings. There is also a chapel for United Presbyterians, which will accommodate a congregation of five hundred persons. A Board school has recently been erected to accommodate about five hundred children. The village of Mearns is well built and of pleasing appearance; it possesses a superior inn, and a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank. The only object of antiquity in the parish is the Castle of Mearns, near that village. It is a large square tower, seated on a rocky eminence, commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect, is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been secured by a drawbridge; this interesting relic of former times is now out of repair and dismantled; it belongs to Sir R. M. Shaw Stewart, of Ardgowan, but its origin is lost in obscurity. The parish is adorned by several elegant modern seats and mansions; and the lands are irrigated and refreshed by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly two miles and a half in circumference. This parish, which embraces 10,281 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 3,543.

PAISLEY,

WITH BALACLAVA, INKERMAN, LINWOOD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PAISLEY is a parliamentary borough, and the seat of a presbytery, in the parish of the abbey of Paisley, 50 miles west by south from Edinburgh, about 7 miles south by west from Glasgow, and 17 south-east from Greenock. This active manufacturing town, so distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive fabrications of thread, stands in a healthful and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about three miles above the confluence of this river with the Clyde, enjoys the advantages of railway communication, being connected with Glasgow, Greenock, Kilmarnock, Ayr, &c. by the iron road. The Burgh, or Old Town of Paisley, is on the western side of the river; the New Town on the eastern side. The High Church, with its lofty spire, rises from a fine eminence, the south side of which, and its summit, are covered with buildings, and its northern slope is laid out in gardens; this central ridge forms a natural terrace, which runs westward from the river nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fort, and a fortified camp, whence is a prospect extensive and beautiful; with this camp several minor stations are believed to have had communication, each placed on the summit of a neighbouring eminence, such as Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead; while the name of "Causeyside," still retained by one of the streets of the burgh, is thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road, leading to or by the the principal station.

Paisley is generalysupposed to have been the Vanduara of Ptolemy a notion supported by the etymology of the name of Vanduara—the British words wen dur signifying the "white water," and thus expressing the present distinctive appellation of the river, on the banks of which the town is built. In ancient days, Paisley was distinguished only for its abbey, and the shrine of Saint Mirin, which it enclosed, was resorted to by multitudes of pilgrims from all parts of Scotland; Saints James, Mirin, and Milburge, divided the tutelary honours. This great and opulent monastic establishment was founded in the year 1164, by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Allan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum; the religious order of the Clugni were the first occupants; it was originally a priory, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey—its lands being by James II. erected into a regality, of which the abbot was lord. By Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, the abbey precincts were surrounded by a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished; still a portion of it remains, as does an inscription setting forth, in quaint rhyme, Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription was on a tablet in the wall, and is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. In 1560, the reformation having taken place, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claude Hamilton, third son of the Duke of Chatelerault, and on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley. The abbey lands having been transferred in 1652 from the Earl of Abercorn to the Earl of Angus, and from him in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, the greater portion became the property, by purchase, of the Marquis of Abercorn in 1764, who intended to have kept it entire as a residence, but finding it had become much dilapidated, he let it on building leases; so that the parks, orchards, and gardens of the abbey susequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the stones from the wall form a portion of the materials of which the houses were built.

The abbey church, mutilated as it now is, constitutes the most interesting public structure of which Paisley can boast; the nave, which in the interior exhibits three tiers of arches, is neatly fitted up, and contains some curious monuments and sepulchral inscriptions. It is the parochial church of an extensive rural district, lying around the town, and called the "Parish of the Abbey of Paisley." The choir is levelled to within a few feet of the ground; the north transept is more entire, and displays in its large well-proportioned northern window a striking relic of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence. Three windows of good size and elegant design, with recessed doorway, form the principal ornaments of the western front. Near the abbey is a Gothic chapel, built in 1499, and dedicated to Saints Columba and Mirin, and now used as a place of sepulchre for the Abercorn family. The remarkable degree of resonance possessed by this little building (which is still, from the circumstance, called the sounding aisle), has been magnified by most writers; much of the effect which it formerly produced is now, however, lost, from the reconstruction within the chapel of a large altar tomb, consecrated to the memory of Marjory Bruce, wife of the great steward, Walter, as well as mother to Robert II. The aperture in the brickwork, formed to close up the interstices of a once beautiful eastern window, likewise contributed to weaken the echo. It is not improbable that, for some time after the suppression of its abbey, Paisley languished, and when Crawfurd, the first regular historian of Renfrewshire, produced his learned and useful work, the town consisted of no more than one principal street, and a few narrow lanes or wynds branching from it. Its population did not at that time exceed 3,000; nay, some assert that its inhabitants were then only about 1,500 in number.

The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the new, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and there are three parallel lines running from east to west of very great length. The New Town, comprising many streets, occupies a level surface on the eastern side of the Cart. Of both portions of the town, the entire length can scarcely be less than two miles; while the extreme breadth of Paisley, from north to south, must reach at least a mile and a half. East, north, and west of it are suburbs with distinct names. Such are Williamsburgh, Dovesland, Lylesland, Carriage-hill, Charleston, Maxwelton, Ferguslie, Castle Head, Cardonald, &c. The eastern and western parts of the town are connected by three bridges, respectively of one, two and three arches, and called individually the Old, the Saucel, and the Sneddon bridge, as also by the railway bridge, which is near the Sneddon bridge. Gas was first introduced in 1824, and all the streets are illuminated with it; and the town is well supplied with water. A most conspicuous public edifice is the County buidings, a large towered, turreted, and embattled fabric, comprehending besides a variety of rooms and offices for county and burgh meetings, and for public functionaries, a county gaol, a debtors' gaol, a bridewell, and a prison chapel. Between the noble pile which forms the front edifice and the prison in its rear are two courts for exercise and air. By a charter granted by James IV., in 1488, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The present municipal body consists of a provost, four bailies, a treasurer, and ten councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace. Paisley returns one member to the legislature; the present member is William Holms, Esq.

A young lady of some historical notoriety was the original cause of Paisley becoming a manufacturing town. In 1697, a daughter of the Laird of Bargarren, aged eleven years, named Christian Shaw, preferred a charge of bewitching her against a servant girl, with whom she had quarreled, and nineteen alleged confederates, seven of whom were condemned, and six of the number burnt on Gallowgreen, Paisley. The inciter to this detestable act of superstitious cruelty subsequently acquired great skill in spinning fine yarn. Her first production having been sold very advantageously at Bath by Lady Blantyre to the lace-makers, stimulated Miss Shaw to extend her transactions by availing herself of the co-operation of a relative in Holland, the demand for this thread soon became great, and the most extensive manufacturers that arose in Scotland at that period acknowledged "the bewitched lady" as their originator. She afterwards became the wife of the minister of Kilmaurs. Coarse linen checks were the first fabrics produced by the Paisley looms; to these succeeded others of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. Silk gauze then took the lead, about the year 1760, and Spitalfields soon yielded to its more successful competitor, for such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The produce of this article, together with sewing thread, lawn and linen gauze, amounted for the year 1784 to £579,000, and more than 26,000 persons were employed in their fabrication. But the demand for the popular gauze rapidly decreased, and soon became insignificant. Muslin, cambric and cotton thread were the next productions of Paisley industry and skill; to these succeeded silk and cotton shawls, and scarfs, and plaids, composed of silk and merino wool. These still continue to exhibit the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers, and in the manufacture of them they have arrived at great perfection. In Paisley and its neighbourhood are numerous thread and cotton spinning mills, bleaching and printing works, dyehouses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, a brewery, distilleries, soap, starch, and corn flour manufactories, and a very extensive tannery. There are eight banking establishments: these are branches of the Union Bank of Scotland, the City of Glasgow Bank, the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, the British Linen Co. the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. Three newspapers are published in Paisley, one daily, the others weekly

Between the year 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was, at an expense of £4,000, made navigable to the town, for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen. Attempts were some time ago made with dredging machines to deepen it, so as to admit of vessels of greater burthen, but it was found to be impracticable. The Glasgow and Johnstone canal passes along the southern verge of the town, presenting at one point a fine basin and wharf. Paisley contains eight churches connected with the Establishment—viz., the Abbey, the High Church, St. George's, the Martyr's, the North, the South, the Middle, and the Gælic churches, and seven Free churches. There are also six United Presbyterian chapels, one Reformed Presbyterian, one Episcopalian, Congregationalist, three Baptist, one Methodist, one Evangelical Union, and one for Roman Catholics. The situation of each and the names of their respective ministers, will be found in a subsequent page. Many charitable institutions and schools are liberally maintained by the inhabitants of Paisley. Among them the Infirmary, the Town Hospital or Poorhouse, the Philosophical Institution and Humane Society, Hutcheson's Charity School, the Industrial School, Roman Catholic school, Sabbath and several excellent schools under the Paisley School Board. Of the Board schools those most worthy of notice are the Grammar School and Academy, in which several branches of education are taught, and four elementary schools, recently built, and situated in the north, east, south, and west districts of the town respectively. These are handsome and commodious buildings. The Neilson Educational Institution, richly endowed by the late John Neilson, Esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852. It is a handsome, massive structure, surmounted by a lofty dome, and from its elevated position is a conspicuous ornament to the town. There are some friendly associations, Bible and missionary societies, and a Free Library and Museum, the gift to the town of Sir Peter Coats, of Woodside; and public reading rooms for the lower classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town. In Gilmour street is a handsome structure; the exterior of the upper part is adorned with Ionic pillars; the interior includes a public coffee-room of noble dimensions, on the tables of which newspapers, reviews, and magazines abound; and the place is liberally thrown open to strangers. There is a theatre, which is opened occasionally; and races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. One of the finest ornaments to the town are the Fountain Gardens, which are the noble gift of Thos. Coats, Esq., of Ferguslie House. They extend between Love street and Caledonian street, and are tastefully laid out, and contain every necessary for the convenience and comfort of the public. A large and ornamental fountain is fixed in the centre, and four smaller ones are placed, one at each angle of the gardens. A new workhouse was erected in 1850. It occupies a commanding situation in the upper part of the town. The style is Elizabethan, and there is accommodation for six hundred inmates; adjoining is the Lunatic Asylum, built in the same style, and capable of containing ninety-eight patients. In the immediate neighbourhood is the Burgh or Riccartsbar Asylum, a large handsome building, which, by its elevated position, forms a prominent feature to the south side of the town.

Paisley may boast of having been the birth-place or residence of several individuals noted for genius or science. Wilson, the celebrated American ornithologist; and Tannahill, the lyric poet, were natives of Paisley; and the distinguished Dr. Witherspoon, once minister of the parish, wrote several of his best works here, prior to his emigration. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a widespread fertile plain expands itself), is most agreeably diversified by gentle risings, by wood, by water, and, in short, by all the constituents of the soft and beautiful. A fall in the Cart, just above the town, and an aqueduct bridge over the canal, deserve mention.

The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays of February and May, and the second Thursday of August and November. February and August are the principal for cattle, and last three days each; those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants. According to the returns for 1871 the population was as follows:—Abbey Parish, 30,587; Middle, 9,724; High, 15,483; Lower, 6,702. At the same date the town numbered 22,269 males and 25,988 females, a total of 48,257; the inhabited houses were 2,621; and the parliamentary constituency was 5,606.

Linwood is a pleasant village, situated on the river Cart, distant about three miles from Paisley, its post town. It is in the parish of Kilbarchan. Cotton spinning is extensively carried on by the Linwood Cotton Spinning Company, and several coal and ironstone pits are wrought, and the manufacturing of shale oil is carried on in the neighbourhood. The religious and educational establishments are an Established church and a day school. Population in 1871, 1,250.

Inkerman and Balaclava are mining villages, about two miles w. from Paisley, their post town. These places sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and are named in commemoration of the two noted battles. They contain a population of over 1,000.

POLLOCKSHAWS, THORNLIE BANK, KENNISHEAD,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

POLLOCKSHAWS (or Pollokshaws) is a thriving manufacturing town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Eastwood, two miles and a half from Glasgow, situated on the road to Irvine, near to the White Cart river, in a pleasing valley sheltered by plantations. It consists of several well-built streets, somewhat irregular in appearance. The trade of the place is considerable, there being extensive establishments for weaving, and dyeing, also bleach fields, print works, paper works, ironfoundries, and the manufacture of earthenware, altogether furnishing employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants. The town boasts a Town House (a neat building with a spire), an extensive public library, a Board school, and one for Roman Catholics. Pollockshaws was erected into a burgh of barony in 1814, in favour of Sir John Maxwell, of Pollock, and the government of the town vested in a provost, a bailie, six councilors, and a treasurer. Branches of the City of Glasgow Bank, the Clydesdale Banking Company and the Commercial Bank of Scotland are established here. A sheriff court is held every alternate month, a justice of peace court once a month, and criminal courts once a fortnight. The places of worship are two Established churches, two Free churches, chapels for United Presbyterians, and Original Seceders, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The parish of Eastwood is four miles in length by three in breadth, bounded on the north by Govan and Cathcart, and on the south by Neilston and Mearns. The district is generally well cultivated, and abounds in freestone; and, besides the stream of the White Cart, is watered by the Auldhouse burn. The Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Railway has a station close to the town, and omnibuses run to and from Glasgow several times a day. The parish of Eastwood comprises 5,096 acres; and the population numbered in 1871, 13,098; of which Pollockshaws contained 8,021.

THORNLIE BANK is a village lying a little to the south of Pollockshaws, in a beautiful hollow, watered by the Auldhouse burn. The manufacture of cotton is carried on here to a great extent, embracing every process from the raw material to the most beautiful printed fabrics. The United Presbyterians have a chapel here. Population in 1871, 2,123.

PORT GLASGOW AND KILMALCOLM.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport and opulent burgh of barony and regality, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, twenty miles below Glasgow, three miles (by rail two miles and a half) east from Greenock, on the Greenock Section of the Caledonian line of Railway. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and an extensive view of corresponding eminences presents itself on the north. The lower grounds in the vicinity of the town are embellished with handsome villas, to which are generally attached excellent gardens. The town stands immediately contiguous to the old barony and village of Newark, at the eastern extremity of which is the ancient castle, formerly occupied by the barons of the name of Maxwell, now the property of Sir M. Shaw Stewart; it is a fine old ruin, in good preservation; and the situation is much admired for its commanding view of the Clyde and adjacent picturesque scenery, particularly that wild and singularly formed rocky eminence on which Dumbarton castle stands. Port Glasgow is neatly built, the streets running at right angles. It possesses a town-house (erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000), comprising a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the accommodation of the town clerk, fiscal and other public officers; also a public reading room. This pile of building, which is of the finest Grecian architecture, is surmounted by an elegant spire one hundred and fifty feet in height, and adorned with a good clock. The Town Hall, situated in Princes street, is a stone structure of imposing exterior, and affords ample accommodation for public meetings, assemblies, &c. The custom-house is a handsome building, and contains offices and rooms for the different officers in that branch of the revenue. The trade of this port town has been for many years gradually improving; the tonnage employed in the American trade is very considerable, and there is a fair share of Indian and general imports. It enjoys the superior advantage of an extensive wet dock, constructed at a great expense. The tide harbours, which are large and commodious, are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress, and are accessible to vessels of the largest tonnage at all times of the tide. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, the first of the kind constructed in Scotland, and which has recently been enlarged and improved at a very considerable cost. Connected with the town are eight ship building establishments, several of them upon an extensive scale, and giving employment to many hands; there are also various branches of manufacture on a large scale established here, consisting principally of saw mills, roperies, iron and brass foundries, sail cloth factories, engineers, rivet makers, and sail and block makers.

Port Glasgow formerly belonged to the parish of Newark; in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district, and in 1775 the town was constituted a burgh of barony, and its government confided to a provost, two magistrates and seven councillors; it joins with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock in returning one member to parliament. A burgh police court sits every Thursday, and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Through the public spirit of the inhabitants a new parish church was erected upon the site of the old one; in external appearance it is handsome, and its interior is chaste, elegant and convenient; there is also a quoad sacra parish church, two Free churches, and a place of worship for United Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics. There is one annual fair, which takes place on the first Monday in July, and continues for three days. The population in 1871 was 10,823.

KILMALCOLM is a village situated on the east side of the parish of its name, on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, ten miles from Paisley, seven from Greenock, and rather more than that distance from Johnstone; it is an agricultural district, intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams, whose banks are well cultivated. Consequent upon the opening of the Greenock and Ayrshire Railway, which has a station in the village, this district has recently become a favourite summer residence. Its situation is sheltered, and the salubrity of its atmosphere is highly spoken of. Several tasteful villas have been erected, whilst many others are in progress. A number of shops of a superior class have been opened and a branch of the Royal Bank is established here. There is also an excellent modern hotel (the Buchanan Arms), close to the station, which affords ample accommodation for visitors. The village is well lighted with gas, and an Hydropathic Institution is in course of erection at East Park. Population 895

RENFREW, INCHINNAN, AND YOKER.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh, the capital of the county and parish of its name; 50 miles w. from Edinburgh, 13 E. by S. from Port Glasgow, 6 w. from Glasgow, and 3 N. from Paisley; situated a short distance from the Clyde, and one mile east from the river Cart. In old charters the name of this place is variously written Ranfrew, Ramfrew and, as it is now spelt, Renfrew; it is composed of two British words ren (or rhyn), a point or promontory, and frew, a flux or flow—implying a "point of land subject to be overflowed by the tide," which certainly is applicable to the local character and figure of a part of the parish. Walter, the first Stewart, built a castle here, on a small height called Castle-hill, on the margin of the bank of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewarts long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. The present town consists of one long street, from which several smaller streets issue. There are established two extensive ironfounding and engineering establishments and ship building yards, with slips capable of raising vessels of large burthen, large gum and starch works, forge works, a dye works and a woollen cloth manufactory; these, with a distillery in operation at YOKER, are the principal establishments which come under the head of manufactures, if we except a number of looms employed in weaving for the Paisley and Glasgow houses. Gas has also been introduced, and the town is well lighted. There is a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels that frequent the river can discharge and load with the same facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew Railway is connected with this wharf, where passengers embark and land from the different steam-boats navigating the Clyde, and goods are shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish, and other boats. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies, and nine councillors. It joins with Port Glasgow (and other places there named) in returning one member to parliament. The vicinity of the town is adorned by some fine estates and mansions; of the latter, the most worthy of the stranger's notice are Elderslie, the residence of Lady Ann Spiers, and Blythwood, the seat of Archibald Campbell, Esq.—both situated on the banks of the Clyde, and their beauty increased by delightful plantations. A magistrate's court sits every Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May, and August, and last Tuesday in October. The places of worship are an Established church, a chapel for the United Presbyterians, and a Free church. There are also several good schools in the burgh. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in May and the last Friday in June. The acreage of the parish is 4,311; the population in 1871, was 5,938, of which the town contained 4,163.

The parish of INCHINNAN is situated to the north-west of Renfrew; it is watered by the Clyde, the White Cart, and the Gryfe rivers. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches forming a communication with Renfrew; to enable vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde, to pass this bridge, a canal has been cut, across which is a handsome iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. Acreage, 3,330; population in 1871, 584.

ROSS & CROMARTY SHIRES.

ROSS-SHIRE.

THIS is a large section in the north of Scotland, being eighty miles in length and nearly the same in breadth (exclusive of the Island of Lewis), extending from the German Ocean to the Atlantic. On the north it is bounded by Sutherlandshire, on the south by Inverness-shire, on the east by the German Ocean and the small county of Cromarty, and on the west by the Western Sea; on the east coast the county terminates in an obtuse point, and on this side it is deeply penetrated by the Bay of Cromarty; the western shore is laid open by many gulfs or arms of the sea, the waters of which roll far within the land. From the numerous indentations made by lakes and friths, the form of Ross-shire is of the most irregular character. The main land (exclusive of Cromartyshire) is computed to contain about one million, eight hundred and fifty thousand, eight hundred acres, and Lewis Isle three hundred and fifty nine thousand; of the first number, five thousand nine hundred belong to the district of Ferintosh, a part of the county of Nairn.

SOIL, SURFACE, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &C.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall is loamy clay: the rest is light soil, of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation. Ben Wyvis is considered the most lofty, rising upwards of 3,700 feet above the level of the sea. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate of this county is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long dreary cold winters, and some very hot summer weather: the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of fir wood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted with great spirit—large additions have been in progress for many years. The improvements effected in farming within the last sixty years have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross, and indeed this portion as well as other parts of the county may now compete in the skilful management of the land with any other division in Scotland. The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little value in a directly useful point of view. Limestone occurs in several localities on the west coast, but there is a general destitution of coal throughout the county. The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings is pursued with great success on the east coast, and partially on the west.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAY.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, which flows into the Cromarty Frith, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Frith. The largest stream on the west coast is the Ewe, which has a short course from Loch Maree. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Greinord, Loch Ewe, Gair-Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron, and Loch Alsh, (with its inner southerly arm) Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them, save Loch Maree, near the west coast, are of sufficient magnitude or beauty to excite interest. The Highland Railway intersects this county. This line presents many attractions. It traverses some of the grandest scenery in the Highlands hitherto comparatively unknown, and affords the advantage of a direct communication with the west coast. No railway route in the kingdom, and probably not even on the continent, presents within the same space of time so great a variety of fine scenery. Strome Ferry is the terminus, from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &C.—Ross-shire comprehends thirty complete parishes, and three parts of parishes. It has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain, and Fortrose; the two former, with the town of Cromarty, join with Kirkwall, Wick, and Dornoch, in returning one member to Parliament, and the shires of Ross and Cromarty unite in sending another. The present member (1877) is Alexander Matheson, Esq., of Ardross and Lochalsh. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation. According to the returns for 1871 the population of the counties of Ross and Cromarty was 80,955, namely, 38,050 males and 42,905 females; the number of inhabited houses at the same time was 15,713. In 1861 the population amounted to 81,406.

CROMARTYSHIRE.

THIS county is so amalgamated with, and intersected by Ross-shire, that, as is observed by respectable authorities, "there can hardly be a literary separation of the two, as there should certainly not be a political." The greater part of it lies in the "Black Isle," or that peninsula which is bounded by the Frith of Cromarty on the north, and the Moray Frith on the south and east. The length of the district is about sixteen miles, and its average breadth between six and seven; it is computed that the superficies of the land in the county amounts altogether to about three hundred and forty square miles. Cromarty is mentioned in the fifth parliament of James V. in the year 1537, as a separate county; and the same distinction is observed in subsequent legislative acts that apply to the statistical divisions of the country; yet it has still been included in the shrievalty of Ross, and at this time the sheriff substitute holds a monthly court at Cromarty (the only town in the shire), from which the county has received its distinctive recognised title.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &C.—Originally, and at a not distant period, the greater part of this district presented a moorish, unprofitable surface; but in recent times agricultural improvement, extensively pursued with persevering industry and skill, have materially changed its features; the soil has been rendered generally productive—planting has been introduced, and is gradually progressing. The climate is drier, and the air more genial, than in the further northern and more western Highland tracts; the culture of the land has contributed to the amelioration of the temperature of Cromartyshire, and its crops are in most seasons earlier than in many of the adjacent districts. Its mineral treasure is but scanty; freestone and granite comprise the only descriptions worthy of notice. The fisheries on the coast are the most productive sources of the public profit and prosperity.

CROMARTY,

RESOLIS, JAMIMAVILLE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CROMARTY is a burgh of barony, and the capital of its parish and county, 19½ miles N.E. from Inverness, 17 N.W. from Nairn, 11 S. from Tain, 9 N. by. E. from Fortrose, and 8 W. by N. from Invergordon; situated upon a promontory jutting into the neck of the sea connecting the Moray with the Cromarty Frith, and at a short distance from the entrance into a harbour esteemed one of the safest and most capacious in North Britain. In this haven vessels of any tonnage may ride in perfect security. The entrance from the sea lies between two wooded headlands, called the "Sutors of Cromarty," which almost meet and reflect each others form—producing an effect, in combination with the general scenery, eminently picturesque. The view from the hill of Cromarty is truly delightful, and is the admiration of every visitor. Beneath the south Sutor is a profound chasm, called "Macfarquhar's Bed," and a petrifying stream called the "Dripping Well," both attractive natural curiosities, never overlooked by the investigating stranger or tourist. Near the north Sutor are seven sunken rocks, termed the "Seven Kings' Sons," so named from the circumstance (according to tradition) of seven individuals who bore that relation to royalty having been shipwrecked upon them and drowned in returning from France. On an eminence immediately behind the town, is a monument, consisting of a column 40 feet high, and surmounted by a full sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller, the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," &c. who was a native of Cromarty. The execution of the work was by Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh. The herring and white fishery is prosecuted in this quarter with persevering industry and general success; large quantities are exported to foreign countries, and the remainder (with the exception of the local consumption) to the London and various home markets. The monetary transactions of the place are facilitated by branches of the Caledonian Bank and the Commercial Bank of Scotland. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitations of Sir John Urquhart, proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now, however, holds the rank stated in the brief description of shires, and joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornock, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to parliament. The parish church, an ancient building, stands at the east end of the town; a chapel for the accommodation of the Gaelic portion of the community, is situated on the hill south of the town, and a Free church is the only other place of worship. Cromarty parish possessed in 1871, a population of 2,180, at the same date the village had, 1,481.

RESOLIS parish lies on the south side of the Cromarty Frith, and consists of a portion of the peninsula territory, called the "BLACK ISLE," being eight miles long, with a breadth of three, having a coast line of about ten miles. In it is the village of JAMIMAVILLE. Population in 1871, 1,527.

DINGWALL,

STRATHPEFFER, FODDERTY, CONTIN, KNOCKBAIN, URRAY, URQUHART, KILLEARNAN, MARYBURGH, CONON BRIDGE AND AUCHTERNEED.

DINGWALL is a parish, royal burgh and market town, the latter 178 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 21 N.W. from Inverness 20 S.W. from Cromarty, 13 S.W. from Invergordon, and 9 N. from Beauly; pleasantly situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain, near the western extremity of the beautiful Frith of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town. About three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier, or jetty, for the convenience of vessels in discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than it now is, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. As it now exists, Dingwall is neat and well built, and consists of one main street, well paved, and a few smaller ones; it is copiously supplied with excellent water springs above the town, into which it is conveyed by means of pipes. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, is a curious old building with a spire and clock; and the church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. In the neighbourhood of the latter edifice is an obelisk, fifty-seven feet in height, erected to the memory of George, first Earl of Cromarty, who, eccentric at death as in life, in accordance with his last injunctione was buried here. Near the town formerly stood the mansion of the powerful and noble family of Ross; a rude fragment in the garden attached to a villa is now all that remains of that once princely domicile. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II., and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Cromarty, Tain, Dornock, Wick and Kirkwall in returning one member to parliament. The town is eligibly situated for the purpose of a more extensive trade than it enjoys; its business is chiefly of a local character, manufactures not having as yet found a seat here. In the High street of the town are several handsome and spacious hotels where the best accommodation can be obtained. In the same street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland, the Caledonian Bank and the City of Glasgow Bank. A little to the east of the town stands the County Buildings, forming a very conspicuous feature in its general appearance; they were completed in 1845 at a cost of £5,000, and contain a county room, a sheriff's court room, and county clerk's and other offices, together with one of the most complete prisons for its size in the kingdom. Dingwall is surrounded by some of the most beautiful scenery in Scotland. The valley of Strathpeffer recedes to the westward, and is as lovely as any Lowland vale, while the mountains at its head present all the rude grandeur of the Highlands. The hill on the north side of the town, a beautiful woody declivity, will remind the traveller of the celebrated hill of Kinnoull, near Perth. About a mile and a half from Dingwall, on the road to Beauly, is the small village of MARYBURGH, seated on the left bank of the Conon, on the opposite side of which river is CONON BRIDGE, another little village. In the former village a handsome Free church and manse were erected in 1850. The market of Dingwall is held every alternate Saturday, and the fairs on the third Wednesday in January, the third Wednesday in February, the first Wednesday in June, the first Tuesday in July, the first Wednesday in September and in November, and the Tuesday next before Christmas, new style. The mineral well of STRATHPEFFER, situate at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about three miles due west from Dingwall, occasioned the erection of some twenty or thirty neat villas or cottages around them for the accommodation of invalid visitors, and there are two good hotels. The small hamlet of AUCHTERNEED, about two miles distant from the pump room, or public lounge, attached to the principal well, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings to strangers when their influx is great, as it generally is during the months of June, July and August. The situation of these wells is romantic—the neighbouring country fertile and exceedingly beautiful. The springs seem to rise through the porous red sandstone, which is prevalent in this district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain, Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the north of Scotland. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, an Aberdeenshire gentleman, who was an enthusiast for their sanitary virtues, affirming them to be the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by various scientific individuals, particularly by Dr. T. Thompson, in May, 1828, who analysed the waters with the most scrupulous exactness. They are strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and strongly vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road through the valley passes along the property, almost exclusively, of the Duchess of Sutherland, sole heiress of the estates of Cromertie, and bounds the grounds of the ancient seat of the Cromertie family, Castle Leod, a castellated mansion, still inhabited. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the romantic and beautifully wooded knolls of Coul, the property of Sir Robert R. Mackenzie, Bart., and the manse, village, and island plain of Contin, beyond which the visitor of this district may either wander along the picturesque shores of Loch Echiltier and the sheepwalks of Comrie to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, he will be delighted with the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathgarve. Nearer to the mineral spa, he may likewise be gratified with a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Brahan Castle, the ancient and princely residence of the Seaforth family. This beautiful seat is situated below the southern slope of Knock-Farrel, and commands an extensive, magnificent and pleasingly varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the rivers Conon and Orrin. The Dingwall and Skye Railway traverses some of the finest scenery in the Highlands, and includes views of Loch Maree, Loch Carron, Loch Luichart, Strath Carron and other districts comparatively unknown, and forms a direct communication with the west coast. Tourists by this route may reach the Isle of Skye from London in thirty-six hours, and from other parts of the kingdom in proportionately less time. The terminus is at Strome Ferry, from which point steamers in connection with the railway, convey passengers to the isles of Skye or Lewis at regularly stated times. According to the census returns for 1871, the parish of Dingwall had a population of 2,443; of this number the parliamentary and royal burgh contained 2,125.

CONTIN is a parish joining Fodderty on the west. It is forty miles long by a mean breadth of thirty miles. It is distant from Dingwall seven miles. Population in 1871, 1,550.

KNOCKBAIN, a small parish, eight miles from Dingwall, is only three miles broad by five in length.

FODDERTY parish is a very long one, it being thirty miles in length by a breadth of only four miles. It joins the parish of Dingwall. Population in 1871, 2,155.

KILLEARNAN is a small parish, eight miles in length by a breadth of five miles. It is distant from Dingwall five miles. In 1871 Killearnan had a population of 1,272.

The parish of URQUHART is only two miles distant from Dingwall. It is ten miles long with a breadth of five miles, and in 1871 had a population of 2,863.

URRAY is a parish five miles distant from Dingwall. It is fifteen miles in length, with a breadth of nine miles. Population in 1871, 2,308.

FORTROSE IN ROSEMARKIE AND AVOCH.

FORTROSE is a small market town and representative burgh in the parish of Rosemarkie, 21 miles s. from Tain, 18 N.N.E. from Beauly, and 10 N. from Inverness, situated on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Frith, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant two miles and a half. Before the abolition of episcopal establishments in Scotland, Fortrose Cathedral was that of the bishopric of Ross, and this town was likewise the chief seat of learning in this quarter of that kingdom; it was mentioned in history by the title of the "Chanonry of Ross." James II. in 1444 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. But small portions of the ancient cathedral now remain entire; one part of it is used as a court-house and prison, and another division is a burial place.

ROSEMARKIE is comparatively a smaller place than Fortrose, though in point of antiquity it takes the precedence as being a parish town. Between the former place and Fort George there is a regular ferry, and the town has an excellent harbour, erected by parliamentary commissioners. Fortrose enjoys every advantage for sea-bathing; and there is an excellent hotel—the Royal—which affords very good accommodation, and is also a posting establishment. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors; and it joins with Inverness, Forres and Nairn in sending one member to parliament.

The parish church, which is at Rosemarkie, was completed in 1821; it is in the late Gothic style, and considered to be a very handsome, well-finished building; its situation has been happily selected, and its commanding aspect on the coast uniformly attracts the particular notice of strangers. More recently a neat church has been erected at Fortrose for the Free Communion of Scotland, and there is an Episcopal chapel. The parish of Rosemarkie extends six miles in length, by three in breadth. Its situation is fine and pleasant; the hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is bold and rocky; it abounds with romantic views and frightful precipices. As the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. Fairs are held on the Mondays before Beauly fair. The entire parish of Rosemarkie contained in 1871 a population of 1,441—of this number 612 were returned as belonging to Fortrose and 302 to the village of Rosemarkie.

INVERGORDON,

ROSSKEEN, ALNESS, EVANTON, KILMUIR EASTER, KILTEARN, AND LOGIE.

INVERGORDON is a thriving sea-port town in the parish of ROSSKEEN, county of Ross, 12 miles S.S.W. from Tain, 13 N.N.E. from Dingwall, and 8 W. by N. from Cromarty, most eligibly seated on the north side of the fine bay of Cromarty, from whence there is a regular ferry to the opposite shore of the Frith. For the accommodation of persons crossing, a small pier was erected in 1821, partly at the expense of the county and partly with the assistance of Government, so that boats can now land their passengers at any time of the tide; but the most valuable and important improvement was conferred upon the port through the munificence and the public spirit of the proprietor—R. B. Æ. M'Leod, Esq. of Cadboll—who, at his own expense, constructed an excellent harbour in 1828. This, for many years, owing to the central position of the place, served for the landing of the sea-borne goods for the eastern and western parts of Ross-shire, as well as for most districts of Sutherlandshire. In 1857 the accommodation was greatly increased by the erection of large wooden piers, extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London, &c. coming alongside. The extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863, and subsequently further north, has for the present diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is perfectly commodious and safe, and capable of containing a large fleet, with anchorage of the best description, from which vessels never drive, the "Souters of Cromarty" forming a natural mouth to one great harbour. The town has undergone considerable improvement of late years, and its appearance enlivened by the erection in 1861 of a very handsome Free church, capable of accommodating nearly a thousand sitters. The body of it is cruciform in shape, and there is a spire some 140 feet high, much admired for its handsome proportions.

There are also some other excellent buildings, amongst which may be mentioned a handsome house and offices belonging to the Commercial Bank, also a very handsome building belonging to the North of Scotland Bank, and several shops, which, for elegance, are not surpassed in the north of Scotland. The Town Hall was opened in April, 1871. It is a conspicuous building in the middle of the High street, in the Italian style of architecture, its most conspicuous feature being a pediment, with a beautifully sculptured group representing the god Neptune, with the accessories of the "horn of plenty" on one side and aquatic plants on the other. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town with very considerable spirit by two establishments. Nothing is now done in this branch of commerce. The principal public work is at present a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, carried on in a set of buildings covering over an acre of ground, and employing some score of workpeople. Few places possess greater attraction or convenience for sea bathing than Invergordon. This circumstance, together with the salubrity of the climate, the comparatively short distance to the Strathpeffer mineral wells, now of so much celebrity, and its accommodations as a port, have combined to raise this once unimportant village into a station of consequence enjoyed by few places of its size. Two banking establishments are established here—they are branches respectively of the Commercial Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank. There are several comfortable inns, the principal one, the Commercial, in High street, affording the best accommodation to tourists and travellers, is an excellent house. A justice of peace court is held when necessary, and a sheriff court quarterly. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of "Provost Lindsay's Police Act." About one mile from the town is Invergordon Castle, where are some fine plantations. In November, 1801, the centre of the edifice was accidentally destroyed by fire, but in 1873-4 a very elegant structure was erected on the old site. It is in the Elizabethan style of architecture, and is much admired for its noble appearance. The parish of Rosskeen extends six miles along the Frith of Cromarty and ten inland. The parish of Alness lies on the west, and Logie on the east. The lower part of the parish, which lies along the Frith, and for about two miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. A hill called Knock-Navie or Coldhill divides the lower from the highland part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing black cattle or sheep. Like the adjacent parts of the shire, the parish has been greatly improved in agricultural capabilities, and now possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these being Invergordon Castle, above noticed. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in February, the second Tuesday in April and December (old style), and the first Tuesday in August and October (old style). In 1871 the parish of Rosskeen had a population of 3,808, of this number 1,157 were returned for Invergordon.

KILMUIR EASTER is a parish five miles south from Tain, and on the west side of Cromarty Frith. Its size is about ten miles in length by four in breadth. An Established and a Free church are the places of worship. Population in 1871, 1,281.

KILTEARN is a parish six miles north-east of Dingwall, situated on Cromarty Frith. It is a large parish, being twenty miles in length, by a breadth of about six miles. An Established and a Free church are in the parish. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,496.

ALNESS is a small village, partly in the parish of its name and partly in that of Rosskeen, three miles from Invergordon, situated on both sides of the Alness (which river separates the two parishes), and on the north side of Cromarty Bay. The church is about half a mile from the village. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in this district by two large establishments. The following fairs are held in Alness:—On the second Tuesday in June, Wednesday before the third Thursday in July, and Wednesday after the third Tuesday in September. The parish of Alness in 1871 had a population of 1,053 persons, of which 911 belonged to the village.

EVANTON is a rural village, about seven miles from Invergordon and four from Alness, situate, like the two latter places, on the north side of Cromarty Bay, and sheltered by a row of trees which defend it from the sea breeze. The church is about a mile distant. About two miles to the westward is FOULIS-FERRY, used for loading grain, timber, and cattle, and a mile north-east of the village is a deep ravine called "Aultgraade," supposed to have been formed at some very early period by a mighty convulsion of nature. Fairs are held in this village on the first Tuesday in June and December. Population in 1871, 526.

LOGIE is a small parish, seven miles in length and two in breadth, situated in a fine hollow on the Balnagown river. The places of worship are an Established and a Free church. Population, 912.

STORNOWAY (ISLAND OF LEWIS),

BARVAS, LOCHS, AND UIG.

STORNOWAY is a parish in the ISLAND OF LEWIS, county of Ross. The town, which has greatly increased in importance of late years, is 65 miles N. from Portree (in Syke), and 60 from Poolewe (described in a preceding page). It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 7 min., and in west longitude 6 deg. 14 min. 10 sec., at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, considered one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north or even Great Britain. The entrance to it is north and north by west, and is easy of access to vessels of any burden, at any time of the tide. A lighthouse stands on Arinish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights. Another lighthouse has been built on the Butt of Lewis by the Commissioners. The town is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre, and the streets run in direct lines. The houses are neat and well built, and being in general whitewashed, have a clean appearance. A most convenient quay, with slips and landing places have been constructed by public subscription. A substantial wall has since been erected round the basin of the harbour. The stranger, on entering the bay, is forcibly struck with the imposing and magnificent appearance of Lewis Castle, in the Tudor and castellated style of architecture. It occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by its present proprietor, Sir James Matheson, M.P. for Ross-shire, at an outlay of £60,000. It is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds. There is also a glass conservatory, with a colonnade communicating with the castle, erected by Mr. Cranston of Birmingham, who has patented the plan. The town, too, as seen on entering the bay, presents a pleasing aspect. From small origin, Stornoway has gradually risen to considerable importance, through the spirit and enterprise of its inhabitants, and these exertions have been effectually seconded by the present liberal proprietor; and the ample resources of this gentleman have been applied to promote both the agriculture and commercial value of the Island in general, and Stornoway in particular. The Island of Lewis or Lews, next to Ireland, is the largest of the British Isles, being 45 miles in length, 15 in average breadth, and 30 in extreme breadth. It was acquired by Sir James Matheson, Bart. of Achany, in 1844, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaforth, for the sum of £190,000. Among the improvements accomplished, may be mentioned the draining of two thousand acres of moor or waste land, planting several hundred acres with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding the castle, pleasure grounds and walks were tastefully laid out, ponds sunk, and drives formed. One hundred miles of old roads were thoroughly repaired, and the same distance of new ways made in various directions. Twenty-one bridges were thrown across rivers and rapid streams, in different parts of the island, and in Stornoway a patent slip was constructed at a cost of £7,000, which will draw up vessels of eight hundred tons burthen into dock for the purpose of making repairs—a great advantage to the shipowners of Stornoway and others visiting the port. The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which the salmon fishery is very productive. The months of May, June and July is the season for herring fishing, when from eight to nine hundred boats, with a complement of five hands to each boat, are employed through the Island; and during this period four hundred tons of fish or more have been exported, consisting chiefly of cod, ling and herring. The ling and cod are caught during the winter months, and are dried and forwarded to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets, and as many as 60,000 and 70,000 barrels of herrings have been exported in one year, chiefly to the Hamburg, Stettin, and St. Petersburg markets. We may in this place be allowed to state a fact which, though at that time seemed interesting merely as a singular occurrence, involves considerations worthy of being entertained in a more important light, as creating, possibly at no distant period, another branch of marine pursuit upon our shores that has hitherto been followed only in more distant seas, accompanied by extreme perils and privations, viz.—the whale fishery. On the morning of the 4th of July, 1837, a shoal of several hundreds of whales, of the bottle-nose species, came into the bay of Stornoway. The greatest bustle and activity were immediately manifested among the inhabitants, and chase was instantly commenced upon these unusal visitors. After an arduous and severe contest, twenty-eight of these leviathans of the deep were driven on shore. The writer of this article witnessed the opening of one of these enormous fish, and in the paunch were found the remains of nine fine salmon, two of which when alive could not have weighed less than twenty pounds each, and they exhibited every appearance of having been swallowed whole. Several shoals have been successfully caught since the above-mentioned period. In the spring of 1872 a whale, 63 feet in length, was taken into Stornoway harbour by some persons who had found it floating at sea. This monster was of the sperm variety, of which few are ever seen on this coast, and attracted numbers of visitors daily. Until of late a ropery and corn mill were the only manufactories Stornoway could boast of, to which, however, may now be added The Lewis Chemical Works, where there is carried on the manufacture of paraffin oil from peat. The first process is carried on at a place called The Creed, where peats are cut, and by a process of distillation, a kind of tar is extracted from the smoke. The tar is then carried a distance of six or seven miles to GARRABOST, where it undergoes another process, conducted by steam machinery, and ultimately paraffin oil and paraffin itself are produced There are also lubricating oil and grease manufactured, the latter is used for coating ships' bottoms, and termed "anti-fouling grease," and has proved itself far superior to anything yet used for this purpose. This great undertaking originated with Sir James Matheson, for the purpose, if possible, of converting the large tracts of moss in the Island to some useful purpose, and ultimately to cultivate the land when thus cleared. A great amount of money is embarked in this undertaking, and is a source of employment to a large number of people, there being at present about sixty men constantly employed, besides a larger number who get employment in summer in cutting and drying the peats. A steam saw mill has recently been erected, and has proved a valuable boon to the inhabitants. The gas works erected in 1848 are still in operation, and manufacture on an average about 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas annually, which is sold at 12s. 1d. per 1,000 feet. The chairman of the company is Sir James Matheson. The Burgh Police Commissioners have purchased the water plant from the water company, and water is supplied to the townspeople at the rate of 6d. in the pound upon the rental. The streets of the burgh are now well lighted with gas, and great improvements in the paving of them have recently been completed. The monetary transactions of the town are facilitated by branches of the National Bank of Scotland, the City of Glasgow Bank, and Caledonian Bank, which have been established in this distant quarter for many years. There are likewise agents for Lloyds, and for several insurance companies, and three or four excellent inns; of the latter, the Imperial, the Lewis, and the Royal Hotels may be considered as exceedingly eligible establishments for families, commercial gentlemen, or for posting. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. with the design of promoting the civilization of the western isles, and it has now adopted The General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A sheriff's court sits every Tuesday during sessions for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. In respect to edifices ornamental in their architecture, the buildings deserving notice are the Established, the Episcopalian, the Free and United Presbyterian churches, a new building for the City of Glasgow and National Banks, Nicholson's Institution, the new post office, a commodious prison, erected in 1845, which has recently been supplemented by a large and commodious court room, besides offices for the sheriff, procurator fiscal, and sheriff clerk and jurymen; and a few private residences along the beach, of handsome exterior. Stornoway possesses several educational, religious and social institutions. The Nicholson Institution before mentioned is an elegant building, situated off James street, and is endowed by Sir James Matheson with a salary of £35 annually for the teacher. The same gentleman also contributed the site for the building and playgrounds free of charge. The Free Church and General Assembly's Schools are very efficient establishments, conducted upon the plan of the Normal seminaries; there are also two schools for females: one instituted and endowed by the proprietor and his lady, affording a thorough English education to numerous pupils, and instruction in every description of needlework, having a department for Ayrshire needle work alone, the materials of which are supplied by Glasgow houses, who pay the pupils for their work. There are several other schools built and endowed by the same benevolent gentleman, in various parts of the Island, and one founded by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge. There are a number of societies for mutual improvement, including the Young Men's, the Juvenile, and the Free Church Young Men's Christian Association. There are also a public library and reading room; to the latter strangers are admitted free upon the recommendation of any member. The Friendly Society and Incorporated Trades' Society (associations for the support of the aged and infirm) are liberally supported by their respected benevolent members. The Horticultural Society has been re-organised, and holds public competitions in flowers and and vegetables in July and October. The edifice erected for the service of a Masonic lodge is a handsome structure; in it are occasionally held assemblies, concerts and public meetings; in the same building is a newsroom and a public library. The parish of Stornoway lies on the north-east of Lewis Island, bounded on the inland side by Barvas. It extends nineteen miles in length, by from four to seven in breadth. The surface is generally flat and moorish, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and are indented by a number of bays. In addition to the more immediate local improvements effected by the proprietor before and so often mentioned, he has facilitated the means of communication between Lewis and Stornoway with distant parts. Steamers handsomely fitted up for passengers ply daily between Glasgow and Stornoway, besides those which call at Stornoway weekly and fortnightly.

The most remarkable ancient remains in the Island of Lewis or Lewis are the Druidical standing stones or Temple of Callanish; they are forty-three in number, arranged in a cruciform manner, with a circle at the the intersection from which the wings radiate, and extend north and south 600 feet with the line corresponding with the long leg of the cross. Sir James Matheson has enclosed the circle with a neat wire fence, and the ground about it is cleared. On a lower eminence half a mile from the Callanish Temple, there is another cluster of standing stones. Throughout the Island there are various specimens, single and in fours, of these standing obelisks, probably erected as memorials, and there is a cave at Gress 200 feet in length, which is comparatively unknown to the inhabitants. At MEALISTAN UIG, not far from the shrine of St. Catan are the remains of a nunnery which has found no name in history, but is still designated by a Gaelic name commemorative of the abode of the sable sisterhood. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered a few years ago upward of sixty ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently of very ancient manufacture, they were about four inches long, partly stained of a beetroot colour, and from their variety in form and shape were probably designed and shaped as chessmen. The population of the whole of the Island of Lewis, a portion of which is in the county of Inverness, was in 1871, 25,947, of this number 9,510 were returned as belonging to Stornoway.

TAIN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF EDDERTON, FEARN, KINCARDINE, NIGG AND TARBAT, AND THE VILLAGES OF ARDGAY AND PORTMAHOMACK.

TAIN is a parish, a royal burgh, and a market town, 46 miles N. from Inverness, and 26 N. by E. from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Frith of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea several ferries are established, and near its head an iron bridge crosses it. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Baldnei, signifying "the town of St. Duthac" (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. The church, which was founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, and was an elegant structure, is now in a state of melancholy dilapidation. St. Duthac seems to have been a saint who enjoyed a considerable reputation in Scotland in the 15th century, as records state that James IV. once made a pilgrimage on foot from Falkland, in Fife, to his shrine at the church of Tain, for the expiation of some offence. He travelled with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land, with other immunities. The inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss, within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but of late years it has received improvements and additions by the erection of many good houses and buildings for public use; among the latter is a new Court-house, surmounted by pinnacles, and presenting a handsome appearance, a large hall for assemblies and public meetings, and a very handsome hotel (the Royal), the churches, and the Royal Academy. The last-named, which is agreeably situated in an open park at the west end of the town, and is a superior educational institution, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1812, the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription. The courses of education are conducted by a rector, with a classical master and assistants. The Court-house, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors; in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames; the new Court-house is erected on its site. The trade of Tain is of the usual character found in country towns where manufactures have not appeared. The most prominent branches are distilling and woollen manufacturing. There are two banking houses established here—branches respectively of the British Linen Company and of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors; and unites with Cromarty and other contributory burghs (named under that town) in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held in Tain every Tuesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free Church—a handsome building erected in 1841—and a United Presbyterian church. The first-mentioned edifice is of considerable dimensions—in form quadrangular, with a castellated tower at each corner, which, not rising above the main body of the building, renders the general appearance of the whole more massive than elegant. The parish of Tain extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 4 miles inland. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west rather hilly. The district is tolerably well wooded, much improved by agricultural operations, and, upon the whole, of a pleasing appearance. The sea-shore is flat and sandy. The Highland Railway passes through Tain, and has a station here. The principal markets are held on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in July, on the Wednesday after the third Tuesday in August, and on the third Tuesday in October; and corn markets are held on every other Friday. In 1871 the parish of Tain had a population of 3,221; of this number the village possessed 1,765.

ULLAPOOL,

LOCHBROOM AND COIGACH.

ULLAPOOL is a seaport and fishing village in the parish of LOCHBROOM, 61 miles W. by N. from Inverness, 50 N.W. by W. from Dingwall, and 30 N.E. from Poolewe, situated on the west coast of Ross-shire, on the north side of an extensive inlet of the sea, called Loch Broom, and is overhung by a long rugged precipitous face of rock. It was begun to be built under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1788, and has been gradually increasing since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay for the use of vessels. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. In Ullapool a very handsome hotel has been erected, and there is also a branch of the Caledonian Bank. The nearest railway station at present is Garve, on the Dingwall and Skye railway. The chief trade of the place is the herring fishery, which is the main dependence of its inhabitants. Prodigious shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they pass on towards the south, and do not strike into the lochs and arms of the sea as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for, great preparations made, and considerable expense incurred by the poor people, to profit by their expected bounty. When the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast, and even from Ireland by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The want of good roads in this district has been an inconvenience long felt by the inhabitants of the circumjacent country. The late Hugh Mackenzie, Esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of the Marchioness of Stafford, Sir James Matheson, Bart. M.P. being the feuer, and he having conferred great benefits on Stornoway and other parts of Lewis, by his spirited and costly improvements in roads, &c. Ullapool may, therefore, look confidently forward to future days of prosperity under his fostering care.

The parish church is situated at the head of Loch Broom and was built in 1844. There is a quoad sacra church with a district attached; it was erected into a parish quoad sacra in 1859. A Free church is also situated in the village. A justice of peace court for the recovery of small debts is held occasionally in the village. In 1871 the parish of Lochbroom possessed a population of 4,406; of this number 752 belonged to Ullapool.

WESTER ROSS,

PARISHES OF GAIRLOCH (WITH VILLAGES OF POOLEWE, AULTBEA, AND KINLOCHEWE), APPLECROSS (WITH VILLAGE OF SHIELDAIG), LOCHCARRON (WITH VILLAGE OF JEANTOWN), KINTAIL (WITH VILLAGE OF DORNIE, LOCHALSH (WITH VILLAGE OF PLOCKTON), AND GLENSHIEL.

GAIRLOCH parish is about 40 miles in length by 38 in breadth, and abounds in mountains, lochs, heaths, &c. For beauty of scenery and abundance of game of all descriptions it is, perhaps, unsurpassed by any other district in the north. An Established and two Free churches, together with several schools, are in the parish. There is also a branch of the Caledonian Bank at Gairloch. Population in 1871, 5,048.

POOLEWE is a small village in the parish of Gairloch, 64 miles W. from Dingwall, and about the same distance S.E. from Stornoway, situated at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds, still in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. It was erected into a burgh of barony in 1619, and a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great Seal, erecting the borough of Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a borough of barons; and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies, &c.; and not only of keeping borough courts for the good government of the borough, and the administration of justice to the inhabitants, and all others concerned, but of creating burgesses, levying the borough duties, buying and selling merchandise as practised in other boroughs in the kingdom, and planting artizans, keeping weights and measures, and levying customs, anchorage, &c., after the manner of other royalties; of having a market cross, a Saturday market once a week, and a public market once a year, under the name of Michaelmas market, beginning September 29th, and continuing four days. It does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter, as far as the borough of Clive was concerned. It is very probable that the proprietor of Gairloch may have desired to introduce trade and commerce into the country, and had "planted artizans" at Poolewe, and obtained this charter to encourage the settling of others. However this may be, Poolewe at the present day has no evidence of the success of such an attempt. The proprietor, John of Gairloch, may have attempted such favourite schemes, but it appears that his successor, Alexander, did not carry them out. John died eleven years after the granting of the charter, and Alexander eight years later, leaving a son, Kenneth, a minor. Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, and is a quoad sacra parish; a quoad sacra church and a Free Church are the places of worship. In Poolewe and the neighbouring districts are several schools for the education of the young; the school at BUALNALUIP is one of the finest erections for educational purposes in any rural parish in the north of Scotland; it was erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie, Esq. The only station on the west coast for curing salmon, grilse, and trout is that at Poolewe, which is carried on to a great extent by Messrs. Hogarth & Co., of Aberdeen. Poolewe is about two miles from Loch Maree, which abounds with fish. This lake contains twenty-four islands; some of these are but little raised above water, and are covered with scattered firs, and with thickets of birch, alder, and holly; while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels. The northern margin of the loch presents a variety of close shore scenery, consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by noble overhanging cliffs and mountains; in one place the remains of a fir forest, in a situation almost incredible, produces a style of landscape that might be expected among the Alps, but not within the more confined scope and lower arrangements of Scottish mountains. This lake is eighteen miles in length, and from three to four in breadth; one of the islands is called Maree, from which the water takes its name; tradition says that some noble personages from Norway were buried here.

Loch Maree is the property of Sir Kenneth S. M'Kenzie, Bart., of Gairloch. Into the inner part of Loch Ewe (or Ew, or Eu) pours the river Ewe, which is scarcely two miles in length, and is the natural outlet from Loch Maree; the river has a rapid turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. Nearly two centuries ago an extensive iron furnace was in operation near Poolewe, but its fires became extinguished after consuming the greater part of the timber around it. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Syke Railway there is regular communication by coach from the hotel at ACHNASHEEN station to KINLOCHEWE, GAIRLOCH, and POOLEWE. Two large hotels are on this route, one at TALLADALE and another at GAIRLOCH, for the accommodation of tourists. The population of Poolewe is included that of Gairloch.

KINTAIL parish is bounded on the north and west by Lochalsh, on the south by Glenshiel, and on the east by Kilmorack. It is altogether a very mountainous district. In the village of DORNIE, in the above parish, has been erected, through the munificence of the late Duchess of Leeds, a beautiful Roman Catholic chapel, with schools attached. Population, 753.

APPLECROSS is a parish in the highlands of West Ross, on Applecross Bay. Its size is about 15 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton. The scenery in some parts of this parish is the finest in Ross-shire. Population of Applecross in 1871, 2,470.

GLENSHIEL is a parish near Loch Duich. In size it is 16 miles in length, by a breadth of two miles. Loch Duich is one of the finest sea lochs in Scotland. Population in 1871, 463.

LOCHCARRON is a parish on Loch Carron, its size being 14 miles in length, its breadth five miles. The principal village is Jeantown, near the head of the loch, and about three miles from the railway station of STRATHCARRON, on the Dingwall and Skye Railway. It has a good hotel, and a branch of the Caledonian Bank. In 1871 the population was 1,629.

LOCHALSH is a parish 10 miles S.W. of Lochcarron. It is a large parish, being 28 miles in length and eight in breadth, abounding in red deer, game, &c. There are four good hotels in this parish, one at ACHNASHEEN station, affording every accommodation to tourists; one at STRATHCARRON station, one at BALMACARRA, and one at STROME FERRY, the last-named being the terminus of the Dingwall and Skye Railway. Steamers ply regularly from Strome to Plockton, Broadford and Portree, from which there is communication by Messrs. Hutcheson's steamers to Stornoway, Glasgow, &c. Near PLOCKTON, which is about four miles from Strome, is Duncraig Castle, one of the seats of Alexander Matheson, M.P., of Ardross, the proprietor of the parish. A branch of the Commercial Bank is established at Balmacarra. This parish in 1871 possessed a population of 2,319.

ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS county, which lies on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded by Northumberland on the east, Dumfries-shire on the south-west, by the county of Selkirk on the west, by Berwickshire on the north, and by Northumberland and part of Cumberland on the south. The figure of the county is extremely irregular: it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of forty miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about thirty miles. The area of the shire contains 672 square miles, rather less than one half of which is brought into cultivation. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county comprehends the alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the time of the Christian epoch, the western and greater part of Roxburghshire was inhabited by the Gadenii, while the eastern and lesser districts were occupied by the Ottadinii, who had numerous strongholds in the shire, ruins and traces of which are still visible. The district is also intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and the whole shire presents a field of the greatest interest to the antiquary and the historian. There is another class of antiquities belonging to the county worthy of notice and inspection—these are towers or castles; among them are the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh, Hermitage castle (in Liddesdale), and other similar structures of minor celebrity. The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose, and Kelso. From its situation on the confines of the two kingdoms, Roxburghshire suffered severely throughout the various border wars; few were so distinguished in the conflicts of the middle ages as the "men of Teviotdale," many of whom followed David, in 1123 to "the Battle of the Standard," in which they fought by his side, and shared his misfortune. During these fierce aggressions, the marches of the kingdom were at different periods contracted and extended (this district being occasionally wholly or partly under English domination), till the year 1357, when the borders were finally settled as they then happened to lie; and by this arrangement Roxburghshire was for ever attached to Scotland.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—The southern parts of Roxburghshire are very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat; in many instances, however, the hilly grounds rise in beautiful swells from the rich valleys at their base; the aspect of the country is thus finely diversified in respect to surface and elevation, while the beauty of the district is greatly enhanced by the clear rivers and brooks which flow through the different vales. The following are the principal mountains and eminences, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell, 1,880; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruterlaw, 1,460; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the country is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile; in some parts a rich loam prevails, in others, gravel and clay, in various proportions; the heavy clayey soil occuping the higher grounds, while the valued loam is generally found on low and level tracts, near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land; but for a country so mountainous, the proportion of heath and moss is inconsiderable. It has been ascertained that so early as the twelfth century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress in the manufacture of grain. Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and it is a matter of certainty that they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. In later times Roxburghshire has kept pace with the other counties in those extraordinary improvements in the management of the soil and the rearing of stock for which Scotland in general is now distinguished. The mineralogy of the shire is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland; but though wrought for some time was ultimately abandoned as unprofitable; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern portion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but not one of them was conducted on a scale adequate to the importance of the object, and the inhabitants are still supplied with this valuable fossil from Dumfries-shire, Lothian, or Northumberland. The manufactures of Roxburghshire are not extensive; if a staple of the county may be particularised, it is that of articles manufactured from wool, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, where flannels, blankets, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively manufactured. The county contains many elegant mansions and beautiful seats, one of the most interesting of these is Abbotsford, the seat of the late eminent novelist, Sir Walter Scott; it is a fine Gothic castle, the internal and external decorations of which characterise it as having been the residence of the poet, the antiquary, and the man of superior and refined taste. But not to the mansion was the cultivated taste and judgment of the poet confined. He covered his extensive property with the most skilfully disposed and thriving plantations, and by his improvements induced others to contribute to ornament that beautiful portion of the valley of the Tweed.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are beautiful and interesting, and their tributaries numerous. The noble Tweed enters the county near the influx of the Ettrick, winds through the fertile vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of thirty miles, receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot, and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, is a lovely river; it passes through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from thirty to forty miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Keaile waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddal (or Liddle), rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of four or five miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddal are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers have their origin in this county; after which they enter England, and fall into the sea at Tynemouth and Coquet Isle. The waters of Roxburghshire, while useful and ornamental to the country through which they glide, possess considerable interest with both the antiquary and the poet, from the associations connected with their streams; for, besides being frequently mentionsd in the pages of history, they have elicited laudatory strains from the Scottish lyrists, among the rest those of the author of "The Seasons." The principal railway line in conection with this county is the North British, with its several branches.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—The county of Roxburgh comprises thirty entire parishes, and five parts of parishes; it contains only one royal burgh—Jedburgh—which, in connection with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Lauder, returns one member to parliament, and the county sends another. The present member (1877) for the county is Sir George Henry Scott Douglas, Bart. Roxburghshire comprises an area of 425,638 acres, and has 7,829 inhabited houses. In 1871 the population was returned as 53,974—25,738 males, and 28,236 females. In 1861 the number was 54,119

ANCRUM AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ANCRUM is a small village in the united parish of ANCRUM and LONGNEWTON, 12 miles W. from Kelso, 11 E. from Hawick, and 4 N. from Jedburgh; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, and about three miles from the Hawick branch of the North British Railway. Ancrum House, the residence of Sir William M. Scott, Bart. stands in a delightful position, and commands some beautifully picturesque prospects; the trees in the park are considered the oldest and finest in this part of the country. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of Thomson, author of "The Seasons;" one of the caves just mentioned is still pointed out, in which, it is said, he frequently retired to indulge his reveries, and on that account is called "Thomson's Cave;" his name is carved on the roof, by, it is supposed, his own hand. Mount Teviot, one of the seats of the Marquis of Lothian, is also in the parish. Dr. Buchan, the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," and other medical works, was born in this village. The parish stretches six miles along the north side of the river Teviot, and its breadth is about four miles. A part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. The population of the parish in 1871, 1,391; acreage, 10,295. Ancrum village numbers 412 inhabitants.

DENHOLM,

WITH THE PARISH OF CAVERS.

DENHOLM is a small village in the parish of CAVERS, five miles from Jedburgh, and the same distance from Hawick, pleasantly situated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a neat stone bridge, erected in 1864. Leading up towards the hills from a "holm" or meadow is a richly wooded "den" or ravine, which presents a series of romantic views, and from which Denholm takes its name. The village was much improved some years since, at a considerable expense, by James Douglas, Esq. of Cavers. The greater proportion of the inhabitants are stocking weavers, and others are engaged in rural affairs. Many are also employed in the stone quarries adjoining the village. This parish contains an Established church, a Free church, a chapel for Independents, and two schools in connection with the Established church, and one supported by James Douglas, Esq. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. The celebrated Dr. Leyden was born here, and a monument has been recently erected to his memory in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower, which is in a fine state of cultivation, declines into rich arable fields. In 1871 the population of Denholm was 659

CAVERS is a parish of very irregular figure, and of considerable extent, it consists of two detached portions on the southern side of the Teviot. The upper portion is separated from the lower one by Hawick and Kirktown parishes. Cavers contains 18,254 acres, and in 1871 the population numbered 1,443.

HASSENDEAN Station, on the North British Line, is one and three quarter miles from Denholm

HAWICK,

HOBKIRK, KIRKTOWN, MINTO, ROBERTON, TEVIOT-HEAD, AND WILTON.

HAWICK is a thriving manufacturing town, a free burgh of regality, and capital of its parish, 50 miles S. by E. from Edinburgh, 20 S.W. from Kelso, 11 S. from Selkirk, and 45 N. from Carlisle; situated on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley line branch of the North British Railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. It is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot. By the former river the town is divided into nearly two equal parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of WILTON, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included in the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one erected in 1865, besides one of timber. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt. One of its most destructive conflagrations occurred in 1570, when it was set fire to by the English under Lord Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton, bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets and minor thoroughfares extending from it. The town is generally well paved, but considerable improvements in this department are being made. It is very well lighted; the water supply, for many years defective, was in 1865, considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot five miles above the town. The water is excellent in quality, and in quantity is amply sufficient for the requirements of the population. A thorough system of drainage has, since the introduction of the water supply, been carried out. The public buildings are the Town Hall, the Chamber of Commerce, which are situated in High street; and the Exchange; the latter is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. The environs of Hawick are much admired by strangers; but the improvement of the neighbourhood is much retarded by the territory being held under strict entail, which prevents gentlemen of fortune from settling in this part of the country and embellishing its natural loveliness. The banks of the Teviot are extremely picturesque and delightful, and the approach to the town from the south can be scarcely surpassed for beauty; the extensive nursery grounds, which are so celebrated throughout the kingdom, are in the immediate vicinity of the town, and materially heighten the general effect of the scenery. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population, and the consequent augmentation of buildings. Some of the residences of the manufacturers are on a scale which quite outstrips the mansions of the country gentry. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1545, by James, Douglas Comes de Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May of the same year this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two baillies, and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing town council, made application to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act, which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property.

The town is divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and town clerk, and besides acting as custodiers of the burgh property exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established. The burgh enjoys all the privileges of a royal one, except that of returning members to Parliament. It has a great annual festival, "The Common Riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries. It originated according to tradition, from the circumstance of some young men of the town having, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), surprised a party of marauding English, during the night, about two miles below the town, and, after slaying the greater part of them, took possession of their colour; a representative of this colour or ensign is now borne by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the occasion, and dubbed with the title of "Cornet," who accompanies the authorities in procession round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. Hawick is one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a high reputation. A few blankets are also made. In the tanning of leather and dressing of sheep-skins there are several houses engaged. Four banking agencies are settled here, namely the British Linen Company's Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The commerce and general trade of the place has received some improvement from the facility of communication with distant parts by railway transit. One of the principal hotels here, called "The Tower," situated in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not consumed by the forces of Sussex; at a more recent period it was the frequent residence of the celebrated Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and Monmouth. There are places of worship of the Establishment, the Free church, and for various religious denominations—a list of these, with their officiating ministers, is given in a subsequent page. The establishment of several institutions evinces a taste for literary pursuits and useful knowledge; among these are a circulating library and public reading-room, liberally furnished with London and provincial papers; there is also a flourishing Archæological Society, with which is connected a museum, rich in memorials of the ancient history of the border, and other antiquarian relics and curiosities. A new combination poorhouse was erected in 1857, at a cost of £4,000; it will accommodate one hundred and thirty-three inmates. A farmers' club, or agricultural society, was formed here in 1776. Another club of the same kind, "The Teviotdale," was established in 1859. There is also the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, which has an annual exhibition of live stock. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every Monday. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, the 21st of September, and the 8th of November; any of these days of the month happening on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses and cattle are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after Saint Boswell's fair in July. Hawick parish comprises an area of 6,112 acres; and its population in 1871 was 8,733, the town of Hawick with Wilton numbering 11,356.

HOBKIRK, or HOPEKIRK is a mountainous parish, 7 miles from Hawick, 11 miles long, and about one and a half in breadth; it adjoins the parishes of Cavers, Bedrule, Southdean, Castletown and Kirktown. Acreage, 16,193. Population in 1871, 718.

KIRKTOWN is a parish, 3 miles from Hawick, about 8 miles long, and about one and a half broad, adjoining Cavers, Hobkirk and Hawick. Acreage, 6,202. Population in 1871, 320.

MINTO is a parish, 5 miles from Hawick, about 5½ miles long, and its greatest breadth about 3 miles; bounded by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers, Wilton and the county of Selkirkshire. Acreage, 5,602. Population in 1871, 431.

ROBERTON is a parish 5 miles from Hawick, partly in Roxburghshire, and partly in Selkirkshire, bounded by Yarrow, Selkirk, Ashkirk, Wilton, Hawick, Dumfries-shire and Ettrick. It is 13 miles long, and about 5 broad, and is very mountainous. Acreage, 29,419. Population in 1871, 593.

WILTON is a parish adjoining Hawick; the greatest portion of its houses, factories, &c., forms a portion of the town of Hawick, and nearly all its social interests are identified with that town. Acreage, 8,760. Population in 1871, 3,936.

JEDBURGH,

BEDRULE, CRAILING, HOWNAM, OXNAM AND SOUTHDEAN.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the capital of its parish, and the county town; 46 miles S.E. from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 10 S. by W. from Kelso, the same distance N. by E. from Hawick, and 12 N. from the English border; agreeably situate on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with weorth, the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of Jedeworth, or Jedworth; in course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained, by pronouncing it Jeddart, or Jethart, which are almost exclusively used by the common people. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with excellent water. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many new buildings have been erected. The principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town is the abbey, which stands upon a piece of ground between the houses and the river. Although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence. To preserve this venerable edifice from the destruction towards which it was hastening, it several years since received considerabe repairs, which were so judiciously conducted as not to interfere with or alter the original design of the structure, which is of the Gothic order. It was founded for canons regular by David I.. It runs from east to west, and appears to have been originally three storeys in height; the nave from the tower, and the south front, are mostly entire, but there is no roof on any part of it. The tower, which is still standing in tolerably good preservation, is about 120 feet in height. Among the other prominent public buildings of Jedburgh are the County Gaol and Bridewell, the Town Hall and the Corn Exchange the first-named is designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress. It is a fine erection, in the castellated style, and its internal accommodation and arrangements are upon the most approved system. From its elevated situation it is seen at a considerable distance, and from its summit a delightful view is obtained. The Town Hall is a commodious edifice, built in 1811. The Corn Exchange is situated in Exchange street. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedency, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the £10 constituents resident within the royalty. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick, Selkirk and Peebles), generally in April and September; and the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday for the despatch of civil business, and a small debt court once every month. The justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month; and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning one member to parliament. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings, &c. is carried on to a considerable extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable emolument is derived from the sale of the produce of the orchards and gardens that surround the town. There are places of worship belonging to the Establishment, the Free Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterian body, Independents, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics. In connection with the town flourishes a horticultural society. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday after 26th May, 20th July (or two days after St. Boswell), 20th August if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, 15th September (if Monday, then on Tuesday), and the first Tuesday in November. Jedburgh parish comprises an area of 22,535 acres; the population in 1871 was returned at 5,214, and the town 3,321 of that number.

BEDRULE is a parish in the centre of the county, bounded on the east by Jedburgh, on the north by Ancrum, by Hobkirk on the south, and on the west by Cavers. The village of Bedrule consists of the parish church, school, and a few scattered houses, and is distant from Jedburgh about four miles. Acreage, 3,917; population in 1871, 292.

CRAILING is a parish situate 3½ miles from Jedburgh and 6½ from Kelso, bounded on the west by Ancrum, on the south by Jedburgh, on the north by Roxburgh, and on the east by Eckford. There are two small villages in the parish, CRAILING and NISBET. The places of worship and school are at Crailing. The North British Railway intersects the parish, and has a station at Nisbet. Acreage, 5,966; population in 1871, 657.

HOWNAM is a parish situate amongst the Cheviot Hills, bounded on the south by the county of Northumberland, on the east and north by Morebattle, and on the west by Eckford, Jedburgh and Oxnam. The village of Hownam is distant from Jedburgh nine miles, and from Kelso about twelve. Acreage, 15,075; population in 1871, 258.

OXNAM is a parish on the borders of Northumberland, bounded on the east by Hownam, on the north and west by Jedburgh and Southdean. The village of Oxnam is four miles from Jedburgh, which is the nearest town and railway station. Acreage, 21,190; population in 1871, 695.

SOUTHDEAN is a large parish in the southern part of Teviotdale, bounded on the north by Jedburgh, on the south by Castleton and the county of Northumberland, on the west by Hobkirk, and on the east by Oxnam. The parish church and school are at CHESTERS, a hamlet in this parish. Acreage, 27,880; population in 1871, 753.

KELSO,

NENTHORN, EDNAM, MAKERSTOUN, ROXBURGH, SMAILHOLM, SPROUSTON, AND STITCHEL.

KELSO is a burgh of barony, a considerable market town, and the capital of its parish, 42 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 10 N. from Jedburgh, 23 S.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 N. by E. from Carlisle, and 6 W. from the English border. It is connected with the North British and the Newcastle and Berwick Railways by branches which approach within a short distance of the town, and it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed, opposite the confluence of the Teviot with that river, and surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history. Its border situation subjected it to almost continual incursions of enemies, and to several conflagrations. To the latter infliction, however, it is indebted for the modern and uniform style which now characterises its appearance. It is built after the manner of the Flemish towns, having a spacious square in the centre, from which diverge four principal streets. On the east side of the square stands an elegant town hall, erected in 1816, which is adorned with a fine portrait of the late Duke of Roxburgh. In this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace, and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the commissioners of police, and the incorporated trades and friendly societies of the town. On the ground floor is a large enclosed piazza, which, on market days, is opened for the use of the farmers and others attending the market. In the Wood Market has been erected a very elegant Corn Exchange, which has proved a great boon to the farmers and merchants. The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the present century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a model. It consists of five arches of equal span, and is well worthy of the stranger's notice, particularly from the beautiful views obtained from it, which are not surpassed on any other part of the Tweed. On the north bank is Fleurs Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburgh, and on the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George H. S. Douglas, Bart. In the centre may be seen the ancient castle of Roxburgh, with the Eildon hills in the distance, while on the right hand are the venerable remains of Kelso Abbey, founded by David I. in 1128. This magnificent ruin is of Saxon or early Norman architecture with the exception of four central arches, which are Gothic, and is a splendid specimen of its style. During the repairs of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, on removing the rubbish from the base of the structure, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been when perfect about 3 feet in diameter and one ton and a half in weight. At the east end of the town is situated Shedden Park, which was recently presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, and her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin.

The government of the town is vested in a senior and two junior magistrates and a body of commissioners of police, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. The town is lighted with gas, and is abundantly supplied with spring water, and of all the towns on the border stands pre-eminent for its cleanly and orderly appearance. Though not a manufacturing town, a considerable trade is carried on in the dressing of lamb and sheep skins and the currying of leather, and there is a large iron foundry and engineering works. Boots and shoes are made in large quantities, supplying not only the town and neighbourhood but also the different fairs and markets in the north of England. It is noted for its cabinet and upholstery works, and the artisans in this business are selected by the resident gentry within a wide circuit on both sides of the border. There are many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is well supported, and many of the shops are furnished with very extensive stocks of all sorts of goods necessary for the consumption of an inland district. The trading and monetary interests of the town are aided in their transactions by the establishment of five banking houses, branches respectively of the Branch of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company's Bank, and the City of Glasgow Bank. The principal hotel is the Cross Keys. There are several places of worship in Kelso, exclusive of the Established Church. Their designations, &c. are given in a subsequent page. Among the several benevolent institutions supported by the inhabitants may be enumerated the dispensary, founded in 1777, which possesses hot and cold baths, a society for educating poor boys, a public grammar school, and others. The literary institutions include several libraries and a news and reading room, a literary and polytechnic institution, an association entitled the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society; a society composed of the noblemen and gentlemen residing in this quarter, styled the Bowmen of the Border (instituted in the year 1768); and several benefit societies. Three newspapers are published in Kelso, under the titles of the "Kelso Mail" (established in 1797), the "Kelso Chronicle" (in 1838), and the "Kelso Courier." Kelso, which is at all times a place of gaiety and respectability, has an additional liveliness imparted to it by the occasional rendezvous of the Royal Caledonian Hunt, and by the horse races which take place in the autumn, they being superior to any meetings of the kind in Scotland. The course, which is much admired, is situated about a mile to the northward. On it is an excellent stand on the model of that at Doncaster. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, is held on Friday, and from October to June a market for cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight on Monday. An annual fair also takes place on the 5th of August. Acreage of the parish, 5,884; population in 1871, 5,124, of which the town contained 4,564.

EDNAM (or Edenham) is a small village and parish, the former pleasantly situated on the small river Eden, about two miles and a half north-east from Kelso. It is celebrated as the birth-place of the poet Thomson, his father having been incumbent of the parish; a monument, erected to the memory of the poet, stands on an eminence near the village. The principal trade establishment in this village is an extensive brewery. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is excellently cultivated and enclosed. Acreage of the parish, 3,849; population in 1871, 613.

MAKERSTOUN is a small agricultural parish on the north bank of the river Tweed, bounded on the east by Kelso, on the north by Smailholm, and on the west by Mertoun, distant from Kelso five miles. The nearest railway stations are at Rutherford and Roxburgh. Acreage, 2,865; population in 1871, 361.

NENTHORN is a parish in Berwickshire, but abutting on Roxburghshire, about four miles from Kelso, two from Stitchel, seven from Earlstown, and about the same distance from Greenlaw; situated on a gentle slope from the river Eden, its length is about four miles, and about the same in width. Acreage, 3,454; population in 1871, 434.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, situate about three miles from Kelso, bounded by Makerston and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, Ancrum on the south, and Crailing and Eckford on the east, and is a station on the North British Railway. Acreage, 7,781; population in 1871, 1,053.

SMAILHOLM is a small agricultural village and parish, situate about six miles from Kelso, and in the north-eastern part of the county. The nearest railway is at Fans Loanend, about four miles from the village. Acreage, 4,194; population in 1871, 534.

SPROUSTON is a parish and village situate about two and a half miles from Kelso, on the south bank of the river Tweed. The North British Railway passes through the parish, and there is a station here. Acreage, 8,635; population in 1871, 1,294.

STITCHEL is a small village and parish situate about three miles from Kelso, and the same distance from Hume, and is bounded on the east by Eccles, on the north by Greenlaw, and on the south by Ednam and Nenthorn. Stitchel House, in this parish, is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. Acreage, 6,898; population in 1871, 848.

LILLIESLEAF, BOWDEN AND MIDLEM.

LILLIESLEAF is a village and parish—the former 10 miles from Galashiels, the same distance from Jedburgh, 8 from Hawick, 6 from Selkirk, 3 from New Belses Station, and 4 from Hassendean Station on the North British Railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and trades connected therewith. The parish, which is four miles in length by nearly three in breadth, is intersected by the Ale water. The lands are under good tillage, and the district has a very pleasing appearance. Acreage of the parish, 6,673; population in 1871, 788, and of the village, 349.

BOWDEN village is 2½ miles from Melrose, standing in a low situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed. The parish comprises a portion of the Eildon hills, from whence the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. The vestiges of a Roman military road, with circular stations or encampments, may be traced in this district, and a ruin at HOLYDEAN, at an early period a strong fortification, and the ancient residence of the now noble family of Roxburgh. Within the parish, besides Bowden, is the small village of MIDHOLM, or Midlem, pleasingly situated on a rising ground, two miles from Lilliesleaf. Acreage of Bowden parish, 7,667; population in 1871, 842.

POST OFFICE, LILLIESLEAF, Thomas Turnbull, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Selkirk) at a quarter-past eleven morning and twenty minutes before twelve noon, and are despatched at ten minutes before twelve noon and five minutes before two afternoon.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, BOWDEN, Helen Grant, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Newtown) at twenty minutes past ten morning and ten minutes past seven evening, and are despatched at half-past six morning and ten minutes before two afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at NEWTOWN.

 Letters for MIDHOLM should be addressed "LILLIESLEAF, near SELKIRK."

MELROSE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF NEWSTEAD, GATTONSIDE, DARNICK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MELROSE is a parish and free burgh of barony—the town, small and ancient, is 36 miles S. by E. from Edinburgh, 12 S.W. from Jedburgh, 7 N.E. from Selkirk, and 4 S.E. from Galashiels; delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon Hills, and on the line of the North British Railway. The station, a spacious and handsome erection, presents a very fine appearance, and being situated on rising ground, may be seen from all parts of the neighbourhood. The town is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading out at the corners. In the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey. There are a number of new and handsome houses, while others exhibit proofs of great antiquity, presenting decorated stones that once undoubtedly formed a portion of the superb abbey for which the place is so celebrated. The Corn Exchange stands in the Market place; it is a handsome structure, and contains an elegant hall, capable of accommodating an audience of about 500. There are three hotels and posting houses in the town, namely, the "Abbey," the "George," and the "King's Arms." An iron suspension bridge over the Tweed for foot passenger, leads to the village of Gattonside, on the opposite bank of the river. The abbey of Melrose, one of the largest and most magnificent Gothic structures in the kingdom, adjoins the town on the south side of the Tweed. On viewing the exterior of this noble pile of building from the south it has a most imposing effect; but on entering the interior, the lofty Gothic columns, in a double row, supporting the majestic arched roof—the elegance and variety of its sculpture, the multiplicity of its statues, the beauty of its stone, and the symmetry of its parts must strike every stranger with profound admiration. It was founded in 1136 by King David, who dedicated it to the Virgin Mary, and endowed it with extensive privileges and almost princely revenues. The monks were of the Cistercian order, and this monastery was the mother foundation of all establishments of that order in Scotland. It is somewhat remarkable that it is only within the limit of the present century that Melrose Abbey became an object of interest to the tourist. That interest was principally awakened by the publication of the "Lay of the last Minstrel," a poem by Sir Walter Scott, whose description of this venerable time-recalling fabric induced the visits of strangers from all quarters. At the beginning of the present century, and until the erection of the present church on the Weirhill, the abbey was used as the parish church. There are churches belonging to the Free church, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Independent denominations. About two miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey of the Culdees settled in this part of the kingdom. All that remains, however, of the old structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks around it are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river like buttresses; the situation is in the highest degree pleasant, commanding a fine view of the valley of the Tweed. About a mile nearer the town of Melrose is the village of NEWSTEAD, near which was another abbey, called the "Red Abbey." About a mile north of Melrose is the Waverley Hydropathic Establishment, a noble and stately building. The situation is dry and airy, and well sheltered from the prevailing westerly winds. It commands a splendid view to the south and east, including the romantic three-peaked Eildon Hills, and some beautiful stretches of the river Tweed, the valley of which lies open as far as Leaderfoot, and the view is bounded by the heights of Bemersyde. The site of the building is the well-known Skirmish Hill, where was fought one of the last Border frays of the district. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality; but now it is a free burgh of barony, and governed by a baron bailie chosen by the burgesses. A justice of peace court is held here on the first Saturday in every month. The banks of the Tweed are clothed with plantations in the finest order, and the land around appears in the highest state of cultivation. The Roxburgh, Selkirk, and Berwickshires District Lunatic Asylum, a large handsome building, erected at a cost of £45,000, situated on Bowden Moor, about a mile distant, was opened in May, 1872. It is designed to accommodate between 200 and 300 patients. The August fair is considered the largest for lambs in Scotland. Acreage of the parish, 25,794. Population in 1871, 9,432, of which the town numbered 1,405.

The antique and rural village of GATTONSIDE stands on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, with which town a communication is maintained by means of the suspension bridge. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. Population in 1871, 383.

DARNICK is a small village in Melrose parish, situated on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town. In the centre of the village stands the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, the exquisite bit of border antiquity, Darnick Tower. Population in 1871, 435.

NEW CASTLETON

Is a modern village, in an extensive mountainous parish, formerly known by the name of Castletown, but more generally by the popular title of Liddesdale, being in the vale of the Liddle water. The village, which owes its rise to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch, and has superseded the old parish village (a little further up the vale), is 26 miles from Jedburgh, 20 S.E. from Hawick, and 10 N.E. from Canonby; situated in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale. It consists principally of two long streets of neat houses, which occupy a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle. Except that a few of the inhabitants are employed by the cotton manufacturers of Carlisle, there is no other business worth mentioning. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good sheep pasturage. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called Dead Water, on account of its stagnant appearance. Mineral springs, which are in considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thorlieshope, and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and of many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the thirteenth century by Gomyn, Earl of Monteath, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during this operation several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring, evidently of very old manufacture, bearing the inscription, In Broaderlie Amite. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church and one of the United Presbyterians. Fairs are held in April, May, September, and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The acreage of the parish is 67,853. The population in 1871 was 2,202, the village containing 886.

POST OFFICE, NEW CASTLETON, M. & A. Murray, Post Mistresses.—Letters from all parts arrive at a quarter-past nine morning and twenty-five minutes past seven evening, and are despatched at ten minutes past nine morning and five minutes past seven evening.

ST. BOSWELLS,

MAXTON, NEWTOWN, AND MERTON.

ST. BOSWELLS (or LESSUDDEN) is a small village in the parish of its name, 10 miles W. from Kelso, 9 N. from Jedburgh, and 4 E. from Melrose; situated nearly in the centre of the parish, at the east end of a spacious green, and distant about one mile from the St. Boswell station of the North British Railway. The hamlet of St. Boswells consists of one long street, running east and west from the green. Great improvements have of late years taken place, and a plentiful supply of water has been obtained from Whiterigg Bog. St. Boswells was at one time noted for one of the largest fairs (on the 18th of July, for black cattle, horses, sheep, and wool) held in the country. This fair was also the resort of salesmen of various goods, and it is still much frequented by the direct descendants of the gipsies for the disposal of earthen, horn and tin wares. The parish of St. Boswells is three miles in length, by from one and a half to two in breadth, and is beautifully enclosed, planted and cultivated. On the west rise the Eildon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating, the latter quarter ornamented by the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, enclosed within high banks; beyond the Dryburgh woods rise hills of various altitudes that bound the prospect. Acreage of the parish 3,155. The population numbered in 1871, 971, of which the village contained 556.

The parish of MAXTON, which is about four miles in length by three in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, well enclosed and planted. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile from the church, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kerrs, of Littledean. At Eilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots and English on the 14th of December, 1544, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men, slain and made prisoners. Acreage, 4,422. Population in 1871, 481.

NEWTOWN is a small village in the parish of Melrose, situated about three miles south from that town, and one mile from St. Boswells. The village consists of a United Presbyterian church, a school, two public houses, a few shops and cottages, and the St. Boswells station on the North British line. Population in 1871, 302.

MERTON is a parish in Berwickshire, abutting on Roxburghshire. It is two miles from St. Boswells, and from five to six from Melrose, extending six miles along the banks of the Tweed. Dryburgh Abbey is a superb monastic edifice of cruciform structure, now in ruins, and is much frequented by tourists as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott. At a short distance from the abbey is an Ionic temple, built by the late Earl of Buchan about the year 1817, in the inside of which is the statue of Apollo, and surmounting the dome is a bust of the author of "The Seasons." His lordship also erected a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace. Acreage, 6,874. Population in 1871, 734.

YETHOLM, LINTON, AND MOREBATTLE.

YETHOLM parish is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trouting stream; the surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. Situated on the western boundary is YETHOLM or PRIMSIDE LOCH, measuring nearly 1½ miles in circumference. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bow mont; that on the side, called TOWN-YETHOLM, is about eight miles s. from Kelso; the other, designated KIRK-YETHOLM, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream. Both are humble in appearance, especially the latter, which is chiefly inhabited by gipsies—a race formerly remarkable for their disorderly lives and dangerous characters, and at this day distinguished by peculiarity of habits from the general body of the community. The close proximity of the border most likely induced the settlement of the gipsies in this locality. The old parish church, which, at the time of its demolition, was the oldest thatched church in Scotland, is now replaced by an elegant edifice of black stone, the windows and corners being faced with white. Besides the Established church there are one each for the members of the United Presbyterian and Free Churches. Fairs are held on the 27th of June and the 24th of October for sheep; acreage of the parish, 5,960; population in 1871, 1,100.

LINTON is a strictly agricultural parish, extending nine miles in length by three in breadth; bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west, and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile. Besides that stream it has two small lochs, one of which abounds with trout, the other with eels. The land, which rises from the Kaile, is under the best system of cultivation. The church is a humble structure, beautifully situated on a high mound. Acreage, 6,393; population in 1871, 570.

The parish of MOREBATTLE is about nine miles in length, with a mean breadth of four. It is bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south, and the county of Northumberland on the east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kaile and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. Near the former stream, at the distance of 7½ miles from Kelso and 10 from Jedburgh, stands the village. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is Morebotle, which signifies "the dwelling-place at the Marsh." The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet House, indicate this parish to have been the frequent scene of warfare. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and for United Presbyterians. Acreage of the parish, 22,334; population in 1871, 986, the village numbering 327.

SELKIRKSHIRE.

THIS small county, of irregular form, lies in the south of Scotland, bounded by Roxburghshire on the east and south-east, on the west by the counties of Dumfries and Peebles, and on the south and south-west by Dumfries-shire. The county extends twenty-seven miles from south-west to north-east, and is seventeen and a half miles in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 260 square miles.

EARLY HISTORY.—This border county was formerly designated the "Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many of the royal charters it is entitled "The Forest," and before regular sheriffs were appointed, it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. The ancient history of this county is so intimately associated with that of Roxburghshire (already briefly detailed) that but few incidents worthy of special notice exclusively belong to the district. Unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined "keeps," the seats of feudal strength; and among other objects worthy the inspection of the antiquary is a large portion of a stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the fifth century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons.

SURFACE, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &C.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many "cleughs" and "hopes," that run up for some distance between the heights; these vales, as well as the waters (noticed hereafter) which pour through them, have been repeatedly the theme of Scottish as well as English lyrists. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now subjected to the plough, and in these situations wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitude, are—Blackhouse Hills, 2,370 feet Windlestrae Law, 2,295; Law Kneis, 1,900; the Three Brethren, 1,978; Black Andrew, 1,966; Pentlaw, 1,964; Wardlaw, 1,900; Minchmoor, 1,877; Hangingshaw Law, 1,780; and Peatlaw, 1,557. Throughout the county generally, agriculture is as well understood and practised as in any district of the kingdom. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement of the breed of sheep; this was stimulated, and kept up with great success, by the praiseworthy conduct of the late Lord Napier, who, at the termination of the war, betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming, as an amusement. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. Of minerals, none of the more useful have yet been found in this county, it being equally deficient of coal, lime, and sandstone; in some parts, however, abundance of whinstone is obtained, and a good deal of granite. The manufactures of this county, which will be more particularly noticed in the directory of Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollen, tweeds, tartans, shawls, and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The county is well-watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed; the latter valuable river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, during the placid course in a deep channel of nine miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be esteemed a river of this county: it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick two miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being Saint Mary's Loch and the Loch of the Lowes, lying at the head of the Yarrow. The principal Railway line with which this county is connected is the North British, and the chief town that lies in its route is Galashiels, and a branch from the main line runs to Selkirk.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &C.—The county of Selkirk contains only three complete parishes, namely, Ettrick, Stow, and Yarrow, but has portions of seven other parochial divisions. There is a combination Poorhouse at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose, and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galasheils—the former a royal burgh but not represented in Parliament. The county at large returns one member. The member at present (1877) sitting for the county is Sir Graham-Graham Montgomery, Bart. The acreage of the county is 166,524. According to the population returns for 1871, Selkirk shire contained 14,005 inhabitants, namely 6,731 males and 7,274 females; in 1861 the number was 10,449. The number of inhabited houses at the former date was 1,741.

GALASHIELS AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GALASHIELS is a burgh of barony and market town, the latter, which is one of manufacturing celebrity, is 31 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, 18 E. from Peebles, 6 N. from Selkirk, 4 N.W. from Melrose, and 30 S. by W. from Berwick, partly in the parish of Galashiels and partly in that of Ladhope, charmingly situated on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. It lies on the North British Railway (Waverley route), for which line there is a station in the town; there is also a line to Selkirk, and from Innerleithen to Peebles. The parish of Galashiels was formed out of two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, in the early part of the seventeenth century. Galashiels is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than fifty years. It is composed of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of handsome villas in the immediate neighbourhood, these being the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the church, the manse, and a few of the original respectable dwellings; and this portion has also been much improved by new erections. It is situated on a sort of table-land overlooking the picturesque vale of the Gala, and is allowed to be the most pleasing as well as the most healthy part of the town. The river is here crossed by three bridges, two of stone and one of wood. The wire suspension bridge, erected in 1813, was swept away by a great flood some years ago. The Town or Public Hall, erected by a joint-stock company is a handsome building, situated in High-street, two storeys high, the upper storey being used for public meetings, concerts, &c. A drill-shed, erected for the 1st Selkirkshire Volunteers, is well adapted for concerts, public meetings, &c. For many years Galashiels has enjoyed an envied distinction in the manufacture of tweeds. This is the staple of the place, and there are many houses engaged in it. This town, in common with others in the south, interested in manufactures, sustained for a long period great inconvenience from its distance from seaports, railways, and collieries; but the extension of the North British Railway to these parts has to a great extent obviated the obstructions that commerce had previously laboured under. The supply of water, too, is sometimes limited in the dry months of the year, it being obtained by wells sunk in the gravelly subsoil upon which the town is built, the water thus obtained is liable to be polluted by the number of drains. There is also a private water company, but in a dry summer this source of supply often fails. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trades, and conferring on matters therewith connected. The business and commerce of the town and district are facilitated by branches of the National Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank, and the British Linen Co.'s Bank. Other trades flourishing in Galashiels are the coal, corn, timber, and leather tanning. A small debt court is held in the town six times a year. A newspaper is published, the "Border Advertiser," which has a large circulation in the border counties. The places of worship in Galashiels comprise churches of the Establishment, and of the Free Communion of Scotland, and edifices for the worship of Unitarians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Episcopalians, and Congregationalists. A short distance from the town is situated ABBOTSFORD, the beautiful seat of the late Sir Walter Scott. A bulk grain market is held on Tuesday, a fair on the third Wednesday of March, and a live stock sale every alternate Saturday. The parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 8,449. According to the returns for 1871, the town contained 10,312 inhabitants.

SELKIRK,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ASHKIRK, ETTRICK, ROBERTON, KIRKHOPE, YARROW, AND CADDONFOOT.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish; 38 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, 22 E. by S. from Peebles, 12 N.N.W. from Hawick, 8 S.W. from Melrose, and 6 S. from Galashiels, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the king. In the oldest charter it is called Seleschirche, Sele chyre or Sel chire, which signify the great or the good church. When a second kirk was erected in the vicinity, after the foundation of a monastery by David I. in 1113, the prior place received the dignified title of Selkirk Regis, while the village of the monks was denominated Selkirk Monachis. The monks of Selkirk did not, however, remain long settled in the town; they were removed to a more pleasant locality by their royal patron. Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its site cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Formerly Selkirk exhibited but an indifferent appearance in its buildings and their arrangement, but a spirit of improvement has been developed which has imparted to the place an aspect far more prepossessing. Many handsome private houses have been built in the vicinity of the town. The Market place is embellished with a very handsome monument to Sir Walter Scott. In High street there is a monument in remembrance of Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshields, in this county; it is the work of Andrew Currie, a native artist. In 1865 extensive alterations and improvements were made to the county gaol, at a cost of about £2,000. In 1870 handsome buildings were completed for the business of the county, including sheriff's court room, and offices for sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal, and other officials. The old Town Hall in the market place is used for burgh courts, meetings of town council, police commissioners, and other public bodies. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoes) tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1715, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish six thousand pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied, and soon after a few hundreds more. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls, wool spinning and tanning. A railway is open from here to Galashiels, where it joins the Waverley line of the North British system, thus giving to Selkirk railway communication with most parts of Great Britain. The town possesses two principal inns—the County and the Fleece. Branches of the British Linen Company's Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland, are settled here, and there is a Savings Bank. The introduction of manufactures has caused a great augmentation of the population of the town, and a material extension of its ancient limits. As a royal burgh Selkirk is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and eleven councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff's court is held on Wednesdays and Fridays. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter Sessions are held on the first Tuesday of March, May, and August, and last Tuesday of October, special justice of peace courts as found necessary. The places of public worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, two for United Presbyterians, an Independent, an Episcopalian, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The institutions for education in Selkirk comprise, besides the Parochial school, a burgh school, subscription school, Roman Catholic school, and some private academies. The inhabitants support a public library and a Mechanics' Institute.

The rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half above Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed. About two miles below the town the beautiful mansion of Bowhill (belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch), the stately ruins of Newark Castle, the fertile straths, and the serpentine windings of the two rivers, together with many elegant seats, form beautiful scenery, romantic and diversified. Philiphaugh, the residence of Sir John Murray, is a beautiful castellated mansion; amongst others may be noted Sunderland Hall, and Broadmeadows. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April, and 31st October. Acreage of the parish, 22,558; population in 1871, 5,683, and of the town, 4,640.

ETTRICK is a parish situated in the south-west part of Selkirkshire, bordering on Dumfriesshire; this parish is very mountainous, Thirlstane Castle, the residence of Lord Napier, is situated in Ettrick. There is an Established church, and a parochial school. Acreage, 42,387; population in 1871, 434.

KIRKHOPE parish is a presbytery of Selkirk. It formerly formed part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjointed in 1851. The parish is very hilly, there being eight hills in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. A church of the Establishment, and two small endowed schools, are situated at Ettrick Bridge End, a small village in Kirkhope. Acreage, 22,724; population, in 1871, 565.

YARROW is a parish in the presbytery of Selkirk, lying south-west from that town. The parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by Hogg, the "Ettrick Shepherd," to whose memory there is a monument at St. Mary's loch. This loch is a great resort for visitors in summer. There are an Established and a Free church here, also a Board school. Acreage about 42,000; population in 1871, 662.

CADDONFOOT is a quoad sacra parish in the north-eastern division of the county, erected in 1870. It has a church and school in connection with the Establishment.

STIRLINGSHIRE,

ONE of the most important and beautiful counties in Scotland, is situated partly in the Highlands and partly in the Lowlands; bounded on the east by the county of Linlithgow and the river Forth, on the south and west by Dumbartonshire, on the north by the shires of Perth and Clackmannan (which latter county touches it also on the east), and on the south and east by portions of Lanarkshire. Its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water on the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely singular, and has been fancifully likened both to a fish and a serpent; its tail, which diminishes to an apex at the north, is inserted between the counties of Dumbarton and Perth; and its head is suddenly turned towards the shire of Lanark (on the south), and Linlithgow on the south-east. Its length from east to west is thirty-six miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of forty-five miles; its breadth varies from twelve to twenty miles, except where it declines towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of four hundred and sixty-seven square miles.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county, from its situation between the Firths of Forth and Clyde, and on the direct passage from the northern to the southern parts of the island, has been the scene of many memorable transactions; and there are few counties where monuments of antiquity are so frequently to be met with; neither does it yield to any in point of modern improvements or in the beauties of scenery. The wall of Antonius, built for the purpose of protecting the Roman conquests on the south, traversed the lower division of the country, and has left some slight traces for the investigation of the antiquary; the remains of Roman forts are also distinguishable, and weapons and coins of that invading power have been occasionally dug from the soil. After the overthrow of the Pictish sovereignty, Stirlingshire with all the country on the south side of the Forth, was for some years under the dominion of the Northumbrian Saxons; and at a later period it passed quietly under the government of the Scottish sovereigns. Subsequently, considerable importance was attached to the county from the position and strength of the castle of Stirling (which will be found noticed more particularly under the head of its locality), commanding as it did, the most important pass betwixt the northern and southern districts of the kingdom. In the twelfth century it was much benefited by David I. who erected religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, within its bounds; and the inmates of these establishments being generally learned men, their pious authority tended to civilise the rude manners of the inhabitants.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MINERALS, MANUFACTURES, &c.—This county, as has been said, is partly Highland and partly Lowland. The former, which is the western quarter and adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here the majestic Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than three thousand feet. East from this Highland part the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth of the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from thirteen to fifteen hundred feet in height; from one of these eminences, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained one of the finest views in Scotland; it is computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine green sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of beautiful carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich vale of the Forth. In this quarter the country has experienced improvements of the most extensive and beneficial character; and it now exhibits the pleasing spectacle of fertile meadows, fields in the highest stage of tillage, with plantations, pleasure grounds, gardens, and orchards, all in the most exuberant vegetation and fruitfulness. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile in the county is the alluvial or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam present their surface to the husbandman in other parts of the county. From the great variety of the soil, the system of agriculture in Stirlingshire naturally cannot be uniform, nor its produce equally abundant or limited to any particular species; large crops of wheat, barley, beans, peas, turnips, potatoes, &c. are raised; the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of numerous flocks of sheep, which are of the old black-faced or Highland breed; there are but few cattle reared, the county being sufficiently supplied by the drovers from the Highlands. Stirlingshire is inferior to few districts of Scotland in the quantity and variety of its mineral productions, the most abundant of which are coal, ironstone, limestone and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district, in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde Canal; the county produces such quantities of this mineral as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but by means of the Union Canal to supply the metropolis. Ironstone, limestone and sandstone are found in the same districts with the coal. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought about a century ago, but the working of them was soon discontinued; copper, lead, and cobalt have likewise been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians) to a valuable extent; at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn (ever memorable for the decisive defeat of the army of Edward by the triumphant Bruce) carpets are manufactured; while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries and chemical establishments.

RIVERS, MOUNTAINS, AND RAILWAYS.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire; it takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into that noble estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only seven miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than twenty by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron; it has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burthen for about two miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, the Kelvin, none of which, however, require particular notice. Besides these waters, the county enjoys the advantage of the Forth and Clyde Canal and the Union Navigation, which is of paramount importance to the commerce of this productive and flourishing district. The eminences of greatest altitude above the level of the sea are—Ben Lomond (before mentioned), 3,262; Alda Hill, 1,600; and Campsie Fells, 1,500. The county is intersected by the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian Railway, and by the Forth and Clyde and the Edinburgh and Glasgow sections of the North British line, with several branches from each, thus affording facilities of communication with all parts of the kingdom.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Stirlingshire comprises twenty-two complete parishes, and portions of four others. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is a royal burgh), and Falkirk; the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline, and Inverkeithing in returning a member to the legislature; and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county sends a third representative; the present member (1877) is Sir William Edmonstone, Bart. of Duntreath. The entire acreage of Stirlingshire is 286,338. According to the Government returns for 1871 the population amounted to 98,218, comprising 48,215 males and 50,003 females; the number of inhabited houses at the same period was 13,275. The population in 1861 was 91,926.

AIRTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

AIRTH is an ancient village in the parish of its name, the latter about six miles in length by about two in breadth, 27 miles w. from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 E. from Stirling, and 6 N.W. from Falkirk; situate on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennet Pans. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. It possesses an Established church, a Free church, United Presbyterian chapel, and an Episcopal church at Dunmore. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages, &c. to Alloa, and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success; and the coal mines, of which there are several in the neighbourhood, afford employment to many of the labouring classes. Airth Castle, occupied by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, is an elegant mansion, in the pure Gothic style, and few buildings are superior to it either in chaste simplicity of architecture or elegance of design. In the parish are three ancient towers, one at Airth, another at Dunmore, a third at Powfoulis; that at Airth is of very early date, and is called Wallace's Tower, from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. Some years ago an anchor was found in Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of Airth parish. 5,477; population in 1871, 1,395; of which the village contained 520

BALFRON

IS a manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 19 miles north from Glasgow (its post town), the like distance north-east from Stirling, and 16 north-east from Dumbarton, agreeably situated on the declivity of a hill. The parish is about 11 miles in length, and 3 in breadth; bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnock and Fintry, on the south and south west by Killearn and Drymen, and on the north by Kippen. The cotton spinning works of Robert Jeffrey and Sons are situated in this village, and employ a considerable number of the inhabitants, chiefly females, whose generally clean and healthful appearance may be ascribed to the salutary regulations enforced in the establishment of that firm. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is in the village. On the site of the old parish school there has recently been erected a handsome and commodious public school, with a dwelling house, for the schoolmaster. The school is capable of accommodating about 250 children, and is under the charge of Mr. Robert Sewell, one of the few remaining schoolmasters appointed by the heritors prior to the passing of the Education Act. The annual fair is held on the third Tuesday in May (old style.) Acreage of the parish, 7,820. Population in 1871, 1,502; of the village, 1,085.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF LECROPT AND LOGIE, AND THE VILLAGES OF CAUSEWAYHEAD, MENSTRY AND BLAIR LOGIE.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN, a beautifully romantic and fashionable watering place, is situate on the river Allan, about one mile and a half from its confluence with the Forth, three miles from Stirling, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochil hills. A small portion of it is in the parish of Lecropt, and the remainder in that of Logie; and it is also situated in two counties—Stirling and Perth. It is a post town and a station on the Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian line. It is resorted to by persons from all parts of the world, as well for pleasure as for restoration of health, on account of the mildness of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters. Prior to the discovery of these springs the place was comparatively little known, and presented to the tourist the unassuming aspect of a small and quiet country hamlet, with a few whitewashed and thatched cottages embosomed in venerable trees, together with an old mill and an ancient public house offering "entertainment for man and beast." Since that period things have greatly changed, and Bridge of Allan is now a large and handsome village, consisting of well-built houses and tasteful villas. There are also several hotels, which for elegance and comfort are not surpassed in Scotland. In 1871 Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act. Its municipal affairs are managed by nine commissioners, who, from their own number, elect a senior and two junior magistrates. The present chief commissioner is Mr. John M'Isaac. The higher part of the village in the neighbourhood of the Wells and Coneyhill, is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many handsome villas are erected, the sloping sides of the hill being tastefully adorned with trees, commanding a most beautiful and varied series of views, including Stirling, its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, with other objects of interest. Numerous improvements were made for the accommodation and recreation of the public by the late Major J. Alexander Henderson, of Westerton, on whose estate a considerable portion of the village is erected. There are churches of the Establishment, a quod omnia parish church, a Free church, one for United Presbyterians, and a Scotch Episcopal chapel. Among the various attractions and objects of amusement are a billiard room, bagatelle room, reading rooms and a library, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures, two bowling greens, Keir Gardens, the seat of Sir William Stirling Maxwell, which are open once a week to the public, and several miles of good angling. The late great patron of the place also revived the ancient and interesting game of tilting at the ring, a sport much practised in the reign of James I., and which is still one of the chief among the many attractions of the now famous "Strathallan Meeting," annually held on the first Saturday of August, in Westerton Park, the seat of the lord of the manor, General Sir James Edward Alexander, Knt. The above meeting for Scottish athletic games takes pre-eminence of all others in Scotland. In the same park some of the prize meetings of the Ochil Archery Club are held. It is, however, chiefly to its mineral wells that Bridge of Allan owes its principal claims to attention. These are situated on the Airthrey estate, the property of Lord Abercromby, and within a few minutes' walk of the village. They are highly celebrated for their medicinal virtues, externally and internally, and have proved of great benefit to numerous invalids. There are convenient baths, and the hotels before noticed are admirably suited for the reception of families and other visitors; while the walks around are beneficial auxiliaries in improving the health of the invalids. Among the business establishments, besides the inns, are large bleaching and dye works, and a paper manufactory. The Bridge of Allan connects the parishes of LECROPT and LOGIE, at the confluence of the Teith and Allan, and is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Acreage of the parish of Lecropt 2,968, population in 1871, 535; Bridge of Allan at the same period numbered 3,055 inhabitants, while in 1861 it possessed only 1,803.

LOGIE, or Blair Logie, is a parish situated on the Forth at a part where the counties of Perth, Stirling and Clackmannan meet, a portion of the parish being situated in each of the three counties, the larger portion being on the north bank of the river Forth, opposite Stirling. Within the parish, on a flat peninsula formed by a sinuosity of the river, is the tall and desolate ruin of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded by David I. in 1147, and once a pile of great magnitude. Within the precincts of the abbey James III. and his Queen were interred. During some excavations made a few years ago among the ruins the royal remains were discovered and re-interred. A beautiful tombstone now marks the spot, being erected at the expense of Her Majesty. The plain adjacent to the abbey was the arena on which Wallace obtained his first open and signal victory over the arms of King Edward. The village of Blair Logie is most agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, at the entrance to SHERIFF MUIR and the mouth of Glendevon, and presents a singularly pleasing scene of natural beauty, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. The kirk, which is small and neat, stands about three miles from Stirling and the same distance from Bridge of Allan. Acreage of the parish 11,814; population in 1871, 4,553.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling, situated in the counties of Stirling and Clackmannan, and at the foot of Abbey Craig—a detached portion of the Ochil range—which presents a precipitous front of about 560 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge and almost perpendicularly over the village stands Wallace's monument. It is in the form of a Scotch baronial tower, surmounted by a crown, and is 220 feet in height. The foundation was laid June 24th, 1861 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn), with masonic honours, by the Duke of Athole. From the summit, which is reached by a spiral stair, the view is rich in natural beauty and historic associations. Population in 1871, 336.

MENSTRY is a village partly in the parish of Logie, in the southern part of Perthshire, and partly in that of Alloa, Clackmannanshire. It is situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, five miles from the former, five miles from Bridge of Allan, and two from Alva. The manufacture of different kinds of woollen fabrics gives employment to many of the inhabitants. A quaint old house in the village is pointed out as having been the birthplace of Sir William Alexander, who figured as statesman and poet during the reign of James VI. when he held his court at Stirling. Having become an especial favourite with that monarch, he conferred on him the order of knighthood, besides various offices of high trust. He was afterwards created Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles I. at Holyrood, in consideration of his services, and of having been the founder of the colony of Novia Scotia. The estates at a subsequent period passed into the possession of the Abercrombie family; and it was in the same house that in the year 1734 was born the celebrated general Sir Ralph Abercrombie. There is a large distillery here, the property of Messrs. M'Nab Brothers & Co. Public Board schools were erected in 1875, at a cost of about £4,000. Population in 1871, 658.

DENNY AND DUNIPACE,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BONNYBRIDGE, DENNY LOANHEAD, AND HAGGS.

DENNY is a thriving and increasing post town in the parish of its name, 29 miles w. from Edinburgh, 20 N.E. from Glasgow, 7 s. from Stirling, and 5 w. from Falkirk. The extent of the parish is about six miles long by an average of four in breadth, bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, on the west and north by the Carron. The contiguous parishes are St. Ninians and Dunipace. It is on the road directly south from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through the town. Near this parish is the Forth and Clyde Canal, which is of great benefit to the agriculturists, as well as the manufacturers, of the district. Places of interest to the tourist in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron glen, and the ruins of Torwood Castle. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history, but are now that of active industry, and a source of wealth to the surrounding country. The uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the steam, have caused the establishment of very considerable works on its margin, comprising paper and dye-wood mills and chemical works, and in the vicinity is a distillery and coal and iron mines, the whole furnishing employment to a large and industrious population. The Denny Railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly four miles distant. The terminus is close to the town, from which run two subbranches, extending to the iron mines in the neighbourhood, by which the mineral is conveyed to works near Coatbridge. There is a handsome hall where the Oddfellows' lodge and public meetings are held. There is a lodge of the Ancient Order of Foresters, the Free Gardeners, and Freemasons, and a people's club and reading room. Paper making is carried on to a great extent at three large works. The places of worship are the Parish church, Free church, a United Presbyterian chapel, and one for Roman Catholics. Large public Board schools were erected in 1875 at a cost of about £5,000. Two fairs are held here annually, one on the Wednesday before the 12th May, the other on the Wednesday after the 11th November. Acreage of the parish, 8,309; population in 1871, 4,998, the town numbering 3,623.

DUNIPACE is a parish divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace, and Torwood, bounded on the west and north by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert, and on the south by Falkirk and Denny. This locality is rendered famous, in the works of most Scottish topographers, from possessing two mounts, called "The Hills of Dunipace," the origin of which or the purposes to which they were devoted have exercised the ingenuity and stimulated the researches of the antiquarian. The traditionary account is that they were erected as monuments of a peace concluded upon their site between the Romans and the Caledonians; but there are strong reasons for presuming that they are sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. This parish is rich in minerals, and has an extended line of the Denny branch of railway crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny, extending to the mines, which give employment, with the other works, to the inhabitants of this district. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches. Acreage of the parish, 5,586; population in 1871, 1,733.

BONNYBRIDGE is an enterprising village, about two miles and a half south-east of Denny. It is partly situated in the latter parish but mostly in the parish of Falkirk, from which place it is about four miles distant. The ground around here is arable, and presents a most pleasing aspect. The Forth and Clyde Canal passes the village, and upon its banks are the extensive works of Messrs. Smith and Weistood, Messrs. George Cle and Co. and Messrs. C. and J. Oswald. In connection with the two former works is a commodious literary hall, containing a library, with upwards of 400 volumes, daily newspapers and periodicals are also furnished, the whole being supplied by these firms for the instruction and edification of the men employed at their works, who number upwards of 350. Population in 1871, 731.

DENNY LOANHEAD is a straggling village, situated about two miles south of Denny, in the same parish. A chapel for United Presbyterians is in the village, and a public school. Minerals abound in the neighbourhood, and there is also a large forge for the manufacture of spades and shovels. The Forth and Clyde Canal and the Caledonian Railway pass about a mile to the south.

HAGGS is situated about one and a half miles west of Denny Loanhead, and in the parish of Denny. It contains an Established church and a handsome public Board school, erected in 1875, at a cost of about £4,000. A distillery is at the extreme west end of the parish, at BANKIER. The battle of Kilsyth was fought 15th August, 1645, in the neighbourhood of Hollandbush, near Haggs.

DRYMEN,

BUCHANAN, GARTNESS, AND THE DISTRICT OF CROFTAMIE.

Drymen, a parish and village, about 18 miles from Glasgow, 15 miles long by 10 in breadth, bounded on the north by Aberfoyle, on the east by Kippen, Balfron and Killearn, on the south by Killearn, Kilmarnock and Dumbarton, on the west by Buchanan and Kilmarnock, lies on the south-eastern shore of Loch Lomond, into which, below the village, runs the river Endrick. The village contains the parish church, and a chapel for United Presbyterians. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in a handsome building well adapted for the purpose. Fairs for cattle are held on the last Wednesday in April (old style) and 17th May (new style). Acreage of the parish, 30,850; population in 1871, 1,405.

Buchanan is a parish lying on the western extremity of the county, mountainous and moorish; it is bounded by the parish of Arrochar on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Aberfoyle, Loch Katrine and Drymen on the east, and is about 24 miles in length and five in breadth. The river of Forth rises in the district at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. The seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose, Buchanan Castle, stands on the margin of Loch Lomond, and the Fort of Inversnaid near the head of the loch. Acreage of the parish, 41,598; population in 1871, 591.

At Gartness, about 2½ miles from Drymen, is a fall of water of about 12 feet tumbling over a rock, which the salmon going up the river clear by a leap. Near the village are two manufactories for woollen cloths and felting. It was here that Lord Napier of Merchistoun (inventor of the logarithms) resided when he was making his calculations.

Croftamie is a district containing a few houses, in the parish of Kilmaronock (Dumbartonshire), situated about 1½ miles from Drymen village; the Forth and Clyde section of the North British Railway runs through it, and the Drymen station is situated here.

POST OFFICE, Drymen, Elizabeth Connell, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at eight morning and twelve noon, and are despatched at five minutes past eleven morning and a quarter before three afternoon.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

 Letters for Buchanan and Croftamie should be addressed "Drymen, by Glasgow."

FALKIRK,

BOTHKENNAR, CAMELON, CARNOCK, CARRON, CARRON SHORE, LAURIESTON, POLMONT, REDDING AND SLAMANNAN.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, and the principal town of the eastern district of the county, as it is of the parish to which it gives name. The extreme length of the parish is nine miles, its breadth five and a quarter miles. It is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamannan, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire. The town is 24 miles west from Edinburgh, 22 N.E. from Glasgow, 11 S.E. from Stirling, and three from Grangemouth. It is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Carse or Kerse of Falkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect, which, for beauty of landscape, is scarcely surpassed in any part of Scotland. The views comprise (besides the rich and fertile "carse," which is well cultivated, and interspersed with villages and several gentlemen's seats), the river Forth, with vessels passing to and from the ports of Grangemouth, Alloa, Kincardine, &c., and also up and down the great canal, which intersects the country about half a mile north of the town; while to the south it is bounded by Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town. Few situations more eligible for rendering a place handsome could have been selected. As it is, the town has a very good appearance. It consists of (excluding a number of back streets and lanes, or wynds) one principal street, which is long and irregular. In general, the houses are built of hewn stone, and the town is ornamented with a steeple, 146 feet high, in which are two bells and a clock, and immediately to the west of which an equestrian statue of the late Duke of Wellington was erected in 1854 by public subscription. It is of stone, and is a great ornament to the High street. In the year 1859 a commodious exchange or corn market was built on the north side of the Parish church, in which a stock market is held every Thursday. The dues or customs from the market amount to about £170 per annum. The port of Grangemouth, situate about three miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a railway, formed by the Forth and Clyde Canal Company. A number of small villas are situated towards the north of the town; they form a street, about a half a mile in length, uniting to the town GRAHAMSTON and BAINSFORD, and thereby forming a continuous double line of upwards of a mile in extent. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, and seven councillors. This body first came into existence in 1833, but for want of any power of raising money to carry on a municipal government, the powers of the magistrates were latent. This defect was remedied by an act passed called the "Falkirk Police and Improvement Act," under which the magistrates assist the inhabitants for police and improvement purposes. The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, is situated in Hope street; the building includes court rooms for the sheriff and justices; procurator's hall and general offices for the officials of the town. At the same time a new prison and county police office were erected. The inhabitants of Falkirk have been long celebrated for a manly spirit of independence, both political and religious, combined with a liberality of sentiment and a sociality of intercourse seldom witnessed elsewhere. Falkirk, as it is situate in a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, commands an extensive inland trade, no market being held in the seven or eight surrounding parishes; and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between fifty and sixty thousand people. Under the head of manufactures, we may mention, in addition to the leather trade in tanning and currying, the making of fire bricks and tiles, with a distillery, and several chemical works. Besides the famous Carron Works, which are the oldest and most extensive in Scotland, there are the Abbots Iron Works, the Gael Iron Works, the Falkirk Iron Works, the Gowan Bank Iron Works, the Grahamston Iron Company's Works, the Burnbank Iron Works, the Etna Iron Works, the Parkhouse Iron Works, the Camelon Iron Works, the Callander Iron Works, and about a mile to the west are the Union Iron Works (one of the oldest and most extensive in the district), the Port Downie Iron Works, The Forth & Clyde Iron Works, and a large nail work. There are various coal works in the vicinity, extensive timber yards and flour mills. The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde Canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh & Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length. Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I., afterwards a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I., but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters," chosen by the different trades of the town formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by act of parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held as occasion requires. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1884, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slamannan, Larbert, Bothkennar, and Airth. A fine block of stone buildings was erected in 1876, at the north side of the High street, styled the Glebe Buildings. There are six branch banks and a savings bank in the town. The old church, founded by King Malcolm Canmore in 1057, was some years since taken down, and a new one, of the Gothic order, erected on its site; a tower, connected with the ancient structure was, however, permitted to retain its position. In the church yard lie the bodies of Sir John de Graham (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298, whilst fighting for the independence of their country against Edward I.; two plain stones mark the spots of their interment. In the same cemetery stands the monument to two brave officers, Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, January 17th, 1746. Various sects have places of worship in Falkirk and neighbourhood: the situation of each, with their respective officiating ministers, are given in a subsequent page. All the burial grounds being closed by order of the sheriff, a new cemetery has been provided for the entire parish; it embraces an area of eleven acres, and is situate about a mile west of Falkirk. There are three public schools, two of which were erected in 1875. A market for grain is held on Thursday; the town has also one of the best flesh markets in the country. Seven fairs are annually held for cattle and horses, namely, the last Thursday in January, the first Thursday in March, the third Thursday in May, the second Thursday in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the first Thursday in November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October), called feeing Thursdays, which are numerously attended. The three Falkirk trysts, supposed to be the largest cattle market in the kingdom, are held in the neighbourhood on the second Mondays, Tuesday, and Wednesdays in August, September and October. The population of Falkirk, including Grahamston and Bainsford, was in 1871, 11,712, namely, 5,815 males, and 5,897 females. The inhabited houses at the same period numbered 1,503.

CARNOCK is a small district in the parish of St. Ninian, but in the postal delivery of Falkirk.

CAMELON is a village in the parish of Falkirk, situate on the road from Stirling to Falkirk, about a mile west from the latter town, on the line of the great canal; it consists chiefly of one tolerably well-built street. There are two nail manufactories of some importance, as well as the three foundries before mentioned, and likewise a boat building yard, while about half a mile further west is an extensive paraffin oil and tar distillery. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquarian, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian, and when subsequenty possessed by the Picts had twelve brazen gates. No vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The present village had its origin about ten years back, and the sea is now about four miles distant from it.

CARRON is a village in the parish of Larbert, one and a half miles east therefrom; it is situated on the river Carron, and about two and a half miles from Falkirk. The immense iron works of the Carron Company occupy almost the whole village. Population in 1871, 1,688.

CARRON SHORE is a village at the extreme north-east of Larbert, about two miles therefrom, situated partly in that parish, and partly in that of Bothkennar, and about three miles from Falkirk. The river Carron passes the village, which contains a mission church belonging to the Establishment, a Free Church school and other schools. The Carron Company have numerous collieries here for supplying their works. Railways run in various directions from the works to these collieries. Population in 1871, 966.

LAURIESTON (or Lauriestoun) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about one mile east from that town. A considerable portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the same branch of industry (nail making) as those of Camelon, while others are employed in agricultural labours. This place was originally called Langtoun, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Lauriestoun, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it. Population in 1871, 1,310.

The parish of BOTHKENNAR, about two miles long by an equal breadth, lies in the carse of Falkirk, and about three miles therefrom; it is a rich and fertile district, possessing some excellent orchards, and contains the parish church and school. In is bounded on the north by the parish of Airth, on the west by the parish of Larbert, on the south by the parishes of Falkirk and Polmont, and on the east by the river Forth. Coal abounds in the parish, which is got to supply the Carron Company. On the Avon are the ruins of an old nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV. and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient castle of Almond, for several generations the favourite seat of the Earls of Callander. Acreage of the parish, 1,774. Population in 1871, 2,455.

The parish of POLMONT is one of the richest and most beautiful districts in the county, with little exception, being arable land, finely enclosed and planted; it has the river Avon on its eastern boundary, and is intersected by the main road from Edinburgh, to Falkirk and by the Union Canal and the Frith of Forth on the north. The parish, which extends five miles inland from the Forth, is about two miles in breadth, and has within its limits several coal works, and abounds in iron and freestone. The village of Polmont lies on the road to Falkirk, and from whence it is three miles and a half to the east. The small village of NETHER POLMONT is situate on the coast from Falkirk to Bo'ness, from which it is four miles distant. Acreage of the parish, 5,512; population in 1871, 3,910; of the village, 455.

REDDING is a district situated in the parish of Polmont, abounding in coal mines, all of which are worked by the Redding Coal Company; there is a public school and a chapel for Methodists. Population in 1871, 599.

SLAMANNAN parish lies on the south bank of the Avon, about seven miles from Falkirk, extending along the margin of that river, for about five miles, and from three to four in breadth. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which is a tributary to the great reservoir for the Clyde Canal. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the three shires of Stirling, Dumbarton, and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet with the shire of Linlithgow. The City of Glasgow Bank have a branch here. Acreage of the parish, 7,062; population in 1871, 4,164; of the village, 681.

FINTRY,

A VILLAGE in the parish of its name, is 41 miles from Edinburgh, 16 from Stirling, and about 24 from Glasgow; bounded on the north by Balfron and Gargunnock; on the east by St. Ninians and Kilsyth; on the south by Campsie; and on the west by Killearn and Strathblane; extending from east to west 6 miles, and in breadth, from north to south, about five miles. It is pleasantly situate north of the Campsie Fells, and admirably calculated for a seat of manufactures from its healthful site and the abundant supply of water; the deficiency of coal, however, is a formidable obstacle to the establishment of works of magnitude, the nearest point from which this indispensable article can be obtained being at the distance of at least eight miles. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which the celebrated Loup of Fintry, a cataract of the Endrick descending ninety-one feet, is within the parish, and is worthy a visit. Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the "Doun," on which is a superb range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some fifty feet in length; among them may be observed several without any joints; altogether they form an attractive object. Acreage of the parish 13,772. Population in 1871, 499.

GRANGEMOUTH

IS a busy and thriving seaport in the parish of Falkirk, 3 miles from that town, 27 from Edinburgh, and 25 from Glasgow. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal. The formation of this place was commenced in 1777 by the late Sir Lawrence Dundas for the accommodation of the shipping passing through the Canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port. It is now a place of importance, and displays the enterprise of the British merchant in an eminent degree by its numerous and commodious quays, granaries, and warehouses for goods, and its capacious wet docks and basins for timber. It has also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock, bonded stores, and timber yard. Rope and sail making is extensively carried on, and there are saw mills and large collieries adjacent. The Commercial Bank and Bank of Scotland have branches here. There are two good school-houses—one erected by the Earl of Zetland, to which a library is attached, the other a public Board school, erected in 1875, at a cost of about £3,000. The Earl of Zetland Hotel is an excellent commercial and posting house. The wet dock, opened in 1843, affording room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping, being found too small for the trade, additional dock accommodation was added. The growth of the port is no doubt attributable to the very moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage to enter the docks. The canal rates of toll are also low, and an abundant supply of lighters is always in the port. The area of basins for timber exceeds 17 acres. A branch railway, which joins the North British at Falkirk, was formed in 1859, thus putting the port in connection with the railway system of the country. The Caledonian Railway Company have also a branch line, which joins the Scottish central section at Larbert. There are large imports of timber, grain, flax, &c., from Norway, Denmark, America, Prussia, and the Baltic in general, besides a considerable coasting trade. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Copenhagen, Middlesbro', Newcastle, &c. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with unrivalled advantages for the above imports of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the west of Scotland. Near the canal stands Kerse House, the seat of the Earl of Zetland. There is an Established church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian chapel. The population of Grangemouth in 1871, was 2,569.

KILLEARN.

KILLEARN is a village in the parish of its name, 50 miles w. from Edinburgh, 20 s.s.w. from Stirling, and nearly 17 N.W. from Glasgow, situate on the river Enrick, almost in the centre of the district, and in a pleasant part of the country. The parish is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½ miles, the river, with the parish of Balfron, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane, and on the west by Drymen. Gentlemen's seats and pleasure grounds abound throughout the parish; and these, with the surrounding highly picturesque scenery, render the aspect of the locality most agreeable. Considerable interest is also attached to this part of the county as having been the birth place or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat. It has an additional claim to the attention of the literary world from being indisputably the birthplace of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, whose name is deservedly famous all over Europe. He was born at a place called the Moss, a small farmhouse on the banks of the Water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn; the farm was the property of the distinguished author's father, and was for a long period possessed by persons of the name of Buchanan. A beautiful monument of white freestone was erected in the village, by the gentlemen of the parish and neighbourhood, in honour of the memory of their eminently gifted countryman. It is a well-proportioned obelisk, 19 feet square at the base, and 103 feet in height above the ground. The expense of its erection was defrayed by voluntary subscription. Near the obelisk, the Parochial church, a neat modern structure, has superseded the old place of worship, the ruins of which still remain. The land of the parish is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Acreage of the parish, 15,870; population in 1871, 1,111, of the village, 337.

KILSYTH,

AND THE VILLAGE OF BANTON.

KILSYTH is a considerable town and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name, 35 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 15 s. from Stirling, between 12 and 13 N. from Glasgow, nearly 12 w. by s. from Falkirk, and 4 from Cumbernauld; situated on the main road leading to the three first-named places. It is a straggling and irregularly built place; a considerable proportion of the inhabitants are employed in weaving for Glasgow houses and resident manufacturers. The parish is abundantly stocked with coal and iron stone, vast quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron Iron Works, near Falkirk, and to Gartsherrie and Langloan, near Coatbridge. The district is about seven miles in length, and three and a half in breadth. In form the parish is an irregular oblong, bounded by St. Ninians and Fintry on the north, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers; it also contains one of the reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde Canal. In 1637 near the village of Kilsyth, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingston, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial place of this family the bodies of the last Lady Kilsyth and her infant son lay embalmed for many years. About the middle of the parish is a hill which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. A railway is now in course of construction, which will facilitate communication with Glasgow. It will join the Blane Valley section at Kirkintillock on the North British line. Besides the Parish church there are places of worship for members of the Free church, the United Presbyterian, Congregationalists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. A sheriff small debt court is held quarterly on Thursdays. Branches of the City of Glasgow Bank, and the National Bank of Scotland are established in the village, also a Savings Bank. Fairs are held on the first Friday in April, and the third Friday in November. Acreage of the parish, 13,121; population in 1871, 6,313—the town numbering 4,895.

BANTON and HIGH BANTON are small villages, situate about two and a half miles north-east of Kilsyth, in that parish, and about six miles south-west from Denny; a quoad sacra church is at Banton, and also a public school.

POST OFFICE, KILSYTH, Archibald Chalmers, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at ten minutes past eight morning and half-past two afternoon, and are despatched at half-past six morning and half-past five evening.

KIPPEN,

WITH THE PARISH OF GARGUNNOCK, AND THE VILLAGE OF BUCHLYVIE.

KIPPEN is a village ten miles west from Stirling, situate in the eastern part of the parish of its name. The parish is eight miles in length by from two to four in breadth, and is bounded on the north by the river Forth, on the east by Gargunnock, on the south by Balfron, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it lies partly in the county of Stirling, and partly in that of Perth; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented. Kippen village possesses two churches—an elegant one belonging to the Establishment, and a Free church. Near the railway station is the historically celebrated Ford of Frew, where in 1746 Prince Charles lost his cannon, while retreating before the Campbells. Mineral wells are situated in the neighbourhood. A quarry of red stone is also near the village. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December, and at Balgair, a moor about two miles from Kippen, for horses, cattle and sheep on the Friday before the 26th June. Acreage of the parish, 11,256; population in 1871, 1,568, and of the village, 360.

BUCHLYVIE is a village in the parish of Kippen, situated five and a half miles therefrom, and contains three places of worship, a quoad sacra church, belonging to the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. From PORT of MONTEITH station the tourist may proceed to the lake of Monteith, in which are situated the Islands of Inchnahome and Falla, on the former of which are the ruins of a large monastery, founded by King Egbert, in 825. Many historical associations are connected with it, among which may be mentioned that Queen Mary retired thither after the battle of Pinkie, and planted a boxwood bower, a part of which still remains. It was here that Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his "Lady of the Lake." Ardgibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held in Buchlyvie on the 26th of June, and 18th of November. Population in 1871, 327.

GARGUNNOCK is a parish which extends six miles in length, by four in breath; bounded on the east and south by St. Ninians, on the west by Fintry, Balfron, and Kippen, and on the north by Kincardine and Kilmadock. As regard its agricultural features and capabilities, it is divided into two districts; one of which on the south, is hilly and pastoral; and the other is flat carse land which spreads from the town of Stirling, in a south-westerly direction, towards the county of Dumbarton. A church of the Establishment and a Free church are in the village, which stands on the side of a hill on the south edge of the carse alluded to, about four miles from Kippen. The river Forth divides the parish from Perthshire. Acreage, 9,859; population in 1871, 675.

LARBERT,

AND THE VILLAGE OF STENHOUSE-MUIR.

LARBERT, or Larbet, is a parish, the village, 3 miles from Falkirk and 8 from Stirling, being beautifully situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron. The parish contains some gentlemen's seats of the first class, among which is Kinnaird, once the residence and property of Bruce, celebrated for his travels in Abyssinia, who was born, and died, in this parish; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. At the Reformation, an ancestor of this enterprising traveller repaired the old church. The present place of worship is a handsome modern erection, with a square tower. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. The famous Falkirk cattle tryst is held on a moor in this parish, in the month of October, when 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle, and over 1,000 sheep are exposed for sale. The chief manufacture is that of grates and stoves. The Established church is in the village, and there is a public Board school. Acreage of the parish, 3,963. Population in 1871, 5,280, and of the village, 559.

STENHOUSE-MUIR is a small and neat village, situated about half a mile east of Larbert, in the same parish, and contains a Free church and public Board schools. Another half mile distant is the hamlet of NORTH BROOMAGE, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children—a handsome building in the style of the continental ecclesiastical architecture. Here careful and skilful tuition, varied as each case demands, succeeds in imparting a useful education to and unfolding the inherent capabilities of many children of deficient intellect, on which ordinary training would be inefficient. It is sustained partly by donation and partly by fees which are paid by the more wealthy parents. Near this institution is the Stirling District Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. Population of Stenhouse-Muir in 1871, 1,872.

LENNOXTOWN AND CLACHAN OF CAMPSIE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF BALDERNOCK, CAMPSIE, STRATHBLANE, MILTON OF CAMPSIE AND TORRANCE.

LENNOXTOWN (or Newtown of Campsie) is a large village in the parish of Campsie, 42 miles w. from Edinburgh, 22 s.s.w from Stirling, and 9 N.N.W. from Glasgow, and is a station on the Blane Valley Branch of the North British Railway. In the village is the extensive calico printing establishment of Messrs. R. Dalglish, Falconer & Co., and the Hurlet & Campsie Alum Works; and in the vicinity are bleachfields and collieries. There are two comfortable hotels within one minute's walk from the railway station. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts is held at the Lennox Arms Hotel on the last Thursday in February, May, August, and November. An Established church, with a square tower, is situated in a commanding position near the centre of the village; there are also neat places of worship belonging to the Free church, the United Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodists and Roman Catholics. Several schools are attached to these places of worship. The parish of Campsie lies in the central part of the county, and extends 8 miles in length by 7 in breath. It is bounded on the north by the parish of Fintry, by Baldernock and Strathblane on the west, on the south by Cadder and Kirkintilloch, and on the east by Kilsyth. It is composed of a fertile strath or valley, bounded by ranges of the Campsie hills or fells on the north, which are elevated about 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The Clachan or town of Campsie, as it is designated, is distant rather more than a mile from Lennoxtown, and stands on the low grounds at the foot of the far-famed Campsie glen, which from its romantic scenery and waterfalls is a place of great resort in the summer. The district is the residence of several persons of distinction, and ornamented by some elegant seats; those of Woodhead, Craigbaronet and Glorat are perhaps the most conspicuous. The rivers Kelvin and Glazart pass through this parish, which is intersected by the two great roads from Kippin to Glasgow and from the latter city to Edinburgh. Population in 1871, 3,917.

The small village of TORRANCE, in the parish of Campsie, or, as it is generally called, the Torrance of Campsie, is about 3½ miles from Lennoxtown, on the direct road to Glasgow.

BALDERNOCK, a parish (anciently Bathernock), is situated in the southern extremity of the county. It is bounded by the river Kelvin and Allander on the side fronting north-east, and by Campsie; and on the south-west lies the loch of Baldowie. The parish abounds with cairns and similar memorials of early warfare. The most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated "the auld wife's lift;" it consists of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and upon the top of these the third is placed, in the same direction, with their ends pointed to the north and south; the whole are 18 feet in length by 11 in breadth and 7 in depth. In the surrounding grounds the roots and stumps of oak trees have been dug up, and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove, and place of sacrifice. Acreage of the parish 4,322; population in 1871, 616.

STRATHBLANE parish, as its name implies, composes the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-western course through it; the land of the valley is exceedingly fertile, and is embellished by several neat villas, while the hills are clothed with natural woods. The parish lies in the south-west corner of the county, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Campsie; on the south by Baldernock and East Kilpatrick, and on the west and north by Killearn. The village of Strathblane is 3½ miles west from the Clachan of Campsie, and 5 east from Killearn. There are the extensive calico print works of the Blanefield Printing Company situated in the valley. About one mile to the west are the ruins of Duntreath Castle, and two miles south-east are the ruins of Mugdock Castle, the property of the Duke of Montrose. Acreage, 9,068; population in 1871, 1,285.

MILTON (or Milton of Campsie, as it is generally called), is a small village situated two miles east of Lennoxtown, in the parish of Campsie. There are two printworks in the neighbourhood. The village contains a public school, and there is a station on the Campsie branch railway. Population in 1871, 714.

ST. NINIANS AND BANNOCKBURN,

WITH CAMBUSBARRON, EAST PLEAN, AND WHINS OF MILTON.

ST. NINIANS is a considerable village or town in the parish of its name, about one mile from Stirling, situate on the road from that town to Glasgow. The form of the parish is irregular in its extent, but may be computed at about ten miles from east to west, and about six miles from north to south, bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Larbert, Dunipace, and Denny, on the west by Fintry and Gargunnock, on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Lecropt, Logie, and Alloa (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted.) It derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient parish church, the steeple of which still remains, and is a distinguished curiosity. The church to which this fabric was formerly attached being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was accidently blown up immediately before their retreat to the north. Though scarcely one stone of the body of the church was left upon another, the steeple remained uninjured. The town consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned; upon many are dates of considerable antiquity, and some of them have stones upon which various characters and implements are rudely and grotesquely carved. The dwellings, however, are for the most part whitewashed, which imparts a lively appearance to the place; and well cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. St. Ninians has long been famed for the manufacture of nails; other staples are the tanning of leather, and the manufacture of screw bolts. Acreage of the parish, 38,012; population in 1871, 10,146.

BANNOCKBURN is a prosperous manufacturing town in the parish of St. Ninians, one mile from that town, situate on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. Few places of its size in Scotland have more rapidly improved of late years, in consequence of the manufactures that have taken their seat here; these consist of tweeds, tartans, and carpets to a considerable extent. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance, and a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district the country is characterised by long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Frith of Forth, and it was on one of these uplands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought on the 24th of July, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn, the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English was defeated with a loss of thirty thousand men and seven hundred knights. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greysteil and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Caldan

Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone," having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. About half a mile from the village of Bannockburn, at MILTON, is pointed out the remains of the miller's house to which James III. retreated from the battle of Sauchieburn (fought in 1488), about two miles further to the south-west. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches, and a United Presbyterian chapel. Two fairs are held in Bannockburn —on the second Tuesday of June and October (old style.) Bannockburn, with MUIR, contained in 1871 a population of 2,564.

CAMBUSBARRON is a village in the parish of St.Ninians, situate one mile north-west from that place, and about the same distance west from Stirling. An extensive woollen mill belonging to Messrs R. Smith & Son,gives employment to the majority of the inhabitants. In the immediate neighbourhood there are also some extensive lime-kilns. Public Board schools were erected here in 1875, at a cost of £4,000. Population in 1871, 1,236.

About three miles from Bannockburn is the village of EAST PLEAN, containing a hospital for the accommodation of old and indigent men, more especially soldiers and sailors. Colonel Francis Simpson, of East Plean, who died in 1831, was the donor, having bequeathed upwards of £3,000 for the purpose. The establishment contains about thirty inmates, who are fed, clothed, and have a small allowance of pocket money; the trustees granted the land on which a church has been erected in connection with the church of Scotland.

STIRLING,

CAMBUSKENNETH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STIRLING is an ancient town, the capital of the county and parish of its name, and a royal and parliamentary burgh; 35 miles W. by N. from Edinburgh, 28 N. by E. from Glasgow, 33½ S.W. from Perth, 11 N.W. from Falkirk, 7 W. from Alloa, and 6 S. from Dunblane. Like the old town of Edinburgh, Stirling is situate on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous end of which, towards the west, is occupied by the castle. The prospects from hence are most delightful and extensive; towards the east, especially, they are enhanced by the windings of the Forth, the ruins of the Abbey of Cambuskenneth, the tower of which has been renovated and ornamented at great expense, the Abbey Craig, with Wallace's monument on the summit, and the City of Edinburgh in the distance. While the situation of Stirling is thus one of the most pleasing and picturesque in the country, it is a place noted for its antiquities and the historical associations connected with them. The origin of the name of Stirling is surrounded in great uncertainty. In all the old records it is entitled Stryveline or Stryveling, a word of obscure etymology, which has been modified into Sterling and Stirling—the latter its now accepted appellation. The town standing, as it does, on the declivity of a hill, the streets are in general clean; the principal streets are Broad street, King street, Port street, Murray place, and Baker street. Broad street is of a spacious and imposing appearance, lying along the inclined plane like the High street of Edinburgh; there are, leading towards the castle, several diverging streets. The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, in King street, conducted by Robert Stuart; and the Royal Hotel, in Barnton place, conducted by Archibald Campbell, both combining comfort and economy, with strict attention to the wants of visitors. Others may be mentioned, namely, the Queen's, the Railway, and the Star, &c.

As was the case with Edinburgh, Stirling arose as a suburb in contiguity with the castle. The latter stands on a basaltic rock, and around it is a pleasant walk, carried from the town, in many places cut out of the solid rock; from this walk are several very interesting views, and it affords an excellent opportunity for examining the basaltic pillars of which the rock is composed. On the south side of the castle is a flat enclosed piece of ground, called the "Valley;" it was the spot were tournaments were held, and on one side is a place where the ladies used to sit to witness the feats of valour of the combatants, which is still designated "the ladies' rock." This piece of ground is now tastefully laid out as a cemetery, and is quite in keeping with the beautiful scenery by which it is environed; it contains several handsome monuments, chiefly the martyrs of the Reformation. On the low ground immediately below this rock is situated the "King's garden," a moderately sized field, completely surrounded by a canal, now filled up; in the midst of which is a curious artificial mound of octagonal form, called the "King's Knot," which appears to have been a miniature of a regularly fortified place, but which tradition recognises as the scene of some forgotten play or recreation, which the king, with his court, was accustomed to enjoy here. The palace, within the castle walls, is a stately structure, externally, in the form of a square, and very richly and curiously ornamented with grotesque figures, standing upon pillars or pedestals, in good preservation. For several centuries Stirling Castle was little else than a single tower; at the end of the 11th century it rose into consequence, and in the course of the succeeding century it attained the distinction of being one of the four principal fortresses in the kingdom. Such it continued during the sanguinary and protracted contest which Edward I. of England, commenced for the subjugation of Scotland, when it was frequently taken and re-taken, after tedious sieges, and under circumstances which prove its great strength and importance at that period. In the course of that eventful struggle between independence and usurpation, Stirling and its vicinity formed the theatre of some of the most brilliant achievements of Sir William Wallace; of these none were so remarkable as the battle of Stirling, fought on 13th September, 1297, in which the English army was signally defeated with great slaughter, and the eventful battle of Bannockburn, fought by Robert the Bruce, on the 24th of June, 1314. Stirling Castle first became a favourite residence of royalty about the reign of James I., whose son, James II., was born in it. In the reign of Queen Anne the fortifications of the castle were considerably extended; and it is declared in the articles of treaty of union with England, to be one of the four fortresses in Scotland which were ever after to be kept in repair. Since that period it has experienced little change in external aspect, except its being gradually rendered more and more a modern barracks for the accommodation of soldiers. It is commanded by a lieutenant-colonel, and has a chaplain and a barrack master, who is likewise storekeeper. Perhaps one of the most interesting places in the castle is a room in the west building of the quadrangle, known as the "Douglas Room," so called from being the apartment in which William, eighth earl of Douglas, was killed with a dagger by the hand of King James the second. On the evening of the 18th of November, 1855, it was almost destroyed by fire, but since it has been as nearly as possible restored to its original appearance. From wood saved from the fire were made mementoes, which were readily bought by the tourist; and on the occasion of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Stirling in 1864, the Princess was graciously pleased to accept from Mr. Crawford, bookseller, a copy of the "Lady of the Lake," handsomely bound in the oak of the Douglas room.

Stirling as a royal burgh is one of high antiquity, having received its charter from Alexander I. in 1119. It is governed by a provost, who is also high sheriff, the only provost in Scotland holding this important office, four bailies, who are also sheriffs, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, who are elected according to the terms of the Scottish burgh reform bill, which has also enlarged the limits of the burgh in as far as the parliamentary elective franchise is concerned; and for that purpose it comprehends St. Ninians, and other small villages and hamlets. The burgh, in connection with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to Parliament. Being the county town, the courts of the sheriff are held there, and are attended by a number of procurators resident in the place. The chief manufactures of Stirling are carpets, tartans, tweeds, winceys, and shawls for which it has been long noted, and these branches engage a considerable number of weavers. There is also a large wool spinning factory, and two coach making establishments, which employ several hundred workmen. The other leading avocations are tanning, nail making, and agricultural implement making. There are eight banking establishments settled here; they are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, National Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland, City of Glasgow Bank, and the British Linen Company's Bank, besides a National Security Savings Bank. Some shipping trade is carried on, and at certain periods of the tide steam vessels from Granton afford a cheap, expeditious, and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

There has sprung up in Southfield and Spittals Park, the property of Spittals Hospital, what may be called the west end of the town. A large area is covered with beautiful urban villas, squares and crescents, and these all being in the immediate neighbourhood of the King's Park, renders them very pleasant places of residence. The approaches to the town, on every side, are truly grand, and probably equalled by few and excelled by none in Scotland; large sums have been expended upon the main streets, and to good purpose, for few towns are better paved, or lighted with purer gas, than Stirling; it is also well supplied with excellent water, brought to the town from a distance of about three miles; so that Stirling is perhaps one of the most pleasant towns for residence, as well as one of the most beautiful, in the three kingdoms. The Town House, which stands in Broad street, has a lofty tower, with a clock and a set of musical chimes; behind it is the gaol. New court houses have been erected in Viewfield Gardens in a substantial and elegant style. At the top of King street is the Athenæum, a handsome edifice with a fine lofty spire and a clock, which has four faces; the ground flat is occupied as shops, and the upper flat contains the County Hall and town clerks's office; the front of the building is circular, thus giving a much greater facility of entrance to the two streets which branch out here. There is a reading room with library, and a small museum in King street, called the "Macfarlane Library and Museum;" the late John Macfarlane, Esq. of Coneyhill, maintained it solely at his own expense. Smith's Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone with a portico front; it was founded by the late Thomas Smith, Esq., of Glassingall, at a cost of £5,000, who also left sufficient funds for its future maintenance; the town gave the site. The building embraces a reading room, library, museum and picture gallery, all of which are open to the public free, the provost and others being appointed trustees. The Stirling Tract Depot is a handsome building, erected at a cost of nearly £5,000, situated at the corner of King street and Murray street; it forms a prominent feature from the style of architecture, which is a combination of modern Italian, with some of the more picturesque features of early Norman. The windows of the ground storey are crowned with heads sculptured in stone, of Luther, Wycliffe, Knox, Guthrie, Whitfield and Chalmers; provision has been made for handing over the whole property to trustees for its permanent maintenance as an Evangelistic agency. The Corn Exchange, situated near the Athenæum, is a large and commodious structure used as a market place.

Near to the castle are two churches of the Establishment, besides which there is one in Murray place, in the Norman style of architecture, and there are several others belonging to various sects of Dissenters. A handsome Free church is also situate in Murray place. A monument, in the Grecian style of architecture, has been erected at a cost of upwards of £500, in front of the United Presbyterian chapel, St. John street, in memory of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the first seceders from the Establishment. In 1856, a poor house, hospital and lunatic asylum, were erected at a cost of £7,000. Stirling has long been celebrated for its schools and hospitals, some of the latter are foundations of long standing, and are well endowed —there titles and localities will be found under their appropriate heads at a subsequent page. Three newspapers are issued from the press of this town every week, namely, the "Stirling Observer," the "Stirling Journal and Advertiser," and the "Stirling Reporter." They are papers of considerable repute, and deservedly enjoy a large share of patronage. Stirling, long the seat of Scottish kings and the classic site of the most interesting scenes in Scottish history, is now the peaceful centre of the richest and best cultivated district in Scotland. Three miles from Stirling are the mineral springs of AIRTHREY rapidly and deservedly rising into notice; they are situate in a charming locality close beside the Bridge of Allan, now a large and thriving village, containing many elegant mansions and villas. On the Abbey Craig, a distance of two miles east from Stirling, has been erected the Wallace monument, a noble structure to the memory of Sir William Wallace, fitly built on the craig on which Wallace's army encamped the night before the battle of Stirling Bridge. On the 24th of November, 1877, a monument to King Robert the Bruce, occupying a commanding position in front of Stirling Castle and overlooking the battlefields of Stirling and Bannockburn, was unveiled by Lady Alexander. There are four charities or mortifications connected with the town of Stirling, particulars of which are given in the list of public buildings, &c.

A weekly market is held at Stirling every Friday. The fairs are held on the first Friday in February, for horses; the last Friday in May, for cattle and horses; the first Friday in March, April, May and August, for cattle: the third Friday in October and the second Friday in December for hiring servants. According to the returns for 1871, the town of Stirling contained 6,670 males, and 7,609 females, making a total of 14,279; the inhabited houses at the same period numbered 1,481.

CAMBUSKENNETH is a small village in the parish of Logie, county of Clackmannan, situate opposite to Stirling, on the north side of the river Forth, on one of the peninsulas formed by the windings of the river, near to which is the tall and desolate ruin of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded by David I., in 1147, and once a pile of great magnitude. Within the precincts of the abbey, James III. and his queen were interred; during some excavations recently made among the ruins, the royal remains were discovered, and were afterwards re-interred, and a beautiful tombstone, erected at the expense of Her Majesty, marks the spot.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is a Highland county, and one of the most northerly districts in Scotland. Its form presents five sides, that on the east being bounded by Caithness-shire for about thirty-seven miles, that on the south and south-west by Ross-shire, that on the south and south-east, for a distance of thirty-three miles, by the Moray Firth, and its sides on the west and north are washed by the Atlantic and the North Sea. A small portion only of the shire is under cultivation.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &C.—This large county consists almost entirely of one uninterrupted succession of wild mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets of the sea and bay, and variegated by imposing promontories, among which latter Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland, the first named including the northern part and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from three hundred to eight hundred feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oickel; and the western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is still more wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountain of greatest altitude in the shire is that of Glaschen, which rises 2,000 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland which was subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of that civilisation which had been so beneficially spread over the rest of Britain. The great barrier which impeded improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two powerfully-moving circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the extraordinary and patriotic exertions made by the noble family of Sutherland and Stafford, and the second was the well-judged liberality of Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the highlands. When it proposed to place turnpike gates on the principal line the noble proprietor said, "It will shut out the thoroughfare of passengers, of which we have too few; and, regarding the tenantry, I see no benefit in lowering rent with one hand, while with the other I impose tolls upon them." Thus, under the fostering care of a late Duke of Sutherland as well as that of his Duchess, the aspect of the county has been most agreeably changed. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and finely swelling green hills, as well as its climate (which is superior to that of Caithness-shire), eminently adapt it. Under the various improvements of store farming the county rears 200,000 Cheviot sheep, of which 20,000 are annually exported, besides 89,000 fleeces of wool. From the fishing stations on the coast the county annually exports from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels of herrings, besides cod, ling, &c. Nor is the business of tillage neglected. The agriculture of the shire is now equal to that of the Lothians, and the soil, being of a sandy open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of grain. The exports of farm produce, &c. have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland. The building of houses has been greatly facilitated by the abundance of sandstone, limestone, and slate, found in different parts of the county. The principal rivers are the Brora, Borgie, Naver, Helmsdale, Holladale, Laxford, Inchard, Inver, Shin, Strath-Fleet, Strathmore, and Gruke. The line of railway which gives to this county railway communication is the Highland line.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &C.—Sutherlandshire comprises thirteen parishes and part of one other. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in returning one member, and the county at large sends another. The member at present (1877) sitting for the county is the Marquis of Stafford. The acreage is computed at 1,207,188, and the population in 1871 amounted to 24,317—11,408 males and 12,909 females. In 1861 the number was 25,246. Number of inhabited houses in 1871, 4,814.

DORNOCH,

CLASHMORE AND BONAR BRIDGE IN CREICH.

DORNOCH is a small town and royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and of the county of Sutherland, nine miles from Tain (by the Meikle Ferry 36½ from the Mound station, round by Bonar Bridge), and 12½ from Golspie, healthfully and pleasantly situated near the mouth of the river Portmaculter, now generally called the Firth of Dornoch, and opposite to Tain, which lies on the south side of the estuary. Dornoch is an ancient place, and was the residence of the bishops of Caithness even before the 12th century. The cathedral church was then erected here by Bishop Gilbert Moray, but in the year 1570, some hostile tribes of the neighbouring country took advantage of the minority of Alexander, Earl of Sutherland, made a sudden irruption into the town, and among other barbarous acts set fire to the venerable edifice, after a desperate resistance by the inhabitants, who succeeded, however, in preserving the old tower that still remains. On the 5th November, 1605 (the day of the discovery of the gunpowder plot), a range of handsome stone pillars which supported some Gothic arches that had escaped destruction were prostrated by a violent gale of wind. In 1614 the Earl of Sutherland commenced the repair of a part of the cathedral, and subsequent alterations converted it into an ordinary plain church; but during the year 1836, the late Duchess Countess of Sutherland restored the structure to its original dimensions and Gothic proportions; and now, with its projecting abutments and arched windows (all carefully copied from the remaining fragment of the edifice), and adorned with Gothic groinings along the lofty and long roof of the aisles, the Dornoch cathedral is the handsomest erection of its kind in the north of Scotland. The remains of the late Duke of Sutherland repose in the east aisle, where is placed a beautiful marble statue of that deeply lamented nobleman, executed by Chantrey, also a tablet to the late Duchess. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains; but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its comparative importance since the triumph of the Reformation. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628; and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with six councillors. In connection with certain other burghs before named, it enjoys a parliamentary representation. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county, and the free navigation of the Firth being obstructed by the same bar of dangerous sandbanks mentioned in the account of Tain. Of late years some extensive buildings have been erected, regular and neat: two of these are very handsome, one contains the town and county room, sheriff clerk's room, &c.; the other the town and county gaol and house for the gaoler, and also a very neat police station for the county. There is a public and a Free church school, and another for young girls. The neighbourhood of Dornoch is very pleasant, and a short distance hence are some good sea bathing stations. Within four miles, situate on the rising ground, is the neat and picturesque castle of Skelbo, erected by the late Duke of Sutherland, as a home farm, and a rural retreat during the residence of His Grace in the north; it is now in the tenancy of its former manager, Mr. T. Barclay. The scenery about here is diversified, and combines the home grounds laid out with the best taste, and surrounded by distant spots alternately romantic and beautifully picturesque, with wood and water, hill and dale. There are two public fairs or markets held annually in the town, on the first Thursday in November, and the other on the first Wednesday in December. These fairs were formerly wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country; but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places, and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, these fairs are but thinly attended. In 1871 the parish of Dornoch contained a population of 2,764, of this number the village had 625.

CLASHMORE is a modern and thriving village, about three miles west from Dornoch, situated partly on the estate of Sutherland and partly on that of Skibo, being divided only by a small burn which separates these properties, and by the parliamentary road to Caithness, which passes through the village. A neat and comfortable inn, the Sutherland Arms, affords every accommodation required by visitors; it was erected some years since by the Duchess Countess of Sutherland, at an expense of £1,000 sterling, and is much frequented by noblemen, gentlemen, and travellers. About half a mile from the village is the beautiful seat and residence of Evan Charles Sutherland-Walker, Esq. of Skibo; on the site of this mansion there formerly, for centuries, stood a castle, with a garrison, under the charge of a general officer as governor; around it many bloody conflicts took place, but its retension having become unnecessary in these peaceful times, it was demolished, and the present castle of modern architecture erected instead. The celebrated, noble, and brave but ill-fated Marquis of Montrose, in the year 1650, lodged two nights as a prisoner in the Castle of Skibo, after his unfortunate defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by the avaricious and treacherous Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who basely betrayed and delivered him up to his enemies. An extensive fair is held on the first of May, at Clashmore. Population included with that of Dornoch.

BONAR BRIDGE is a considerable village in the parish of Creich, 15 miles west from Tain, and 13 miles from Dornoch, situate on the great north mail road, and on the north side of the Firth of Dornoch, which is here crossed by an elegant iron bridge, erected by government at a cost of £13,971. Fairs are held in the village on the third Tuesdays in July, August, and September. Population in 1871, 307.

BRORA, KILDONAN, HELMSDALE, ROGART, CLYNE AND LOTH.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter neat and respectable—eleven miles from Dornoch and twenty from Tain, pleasantly situated on the east coast of the county. Before the commencement of the present century, Golspie was principally inhabited by fishermen, but it is now the most important and prosperous village in the shire. The great parliamentary road passes through it, and it is a station on the Highland railway which connects it with Inverness. A branch of the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, and another of the British Linen Company, are established here. A convenient pier, accessible at low water, constructed in the safe harbour of the little ferry three miles and a half distant, is a valuable improvement to the village and its neighbourhood. The Parish church, a small but convenient building, erected in 1619, and kept in good repair, stands within a well enclosed burial ground, surrounded by thriving trees; and at the west end of the village the Free church is situated; schools are in connection with both these places of worship. Golspie owes its increasing prosperity to its eligible situation in the centre of the arable district, and to the direct communication established between it and the distant west and north coasts. The vicinage of Golspie is peculiarly distinguished and adorned by Dunrobin Castle the chief and princely seat of the Duke of Sutherland, situated within a mile of the village. This castle is known to have existed n the twelfth century, and, according to old historians, it was even ong before that period the family fortalice of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland. Of its ancient appearance it has almost become divested, and given place to a particularly chaste and characteristic style of architecture. The principal entrance is through a long avenue of trees, terminating which the noble building bursts upon the sight. The view from the castle's summit is remarkably fine, and comprises all that can give effect to a delightful landscape, including the tastefully laid out gardens and grounds, the finely wooded burn and waterfall in Dunrobin Glen, and the picturesque mountain of Ben-Bhraggle, towering over all to the height of thirteen hundred feet. Upon the summit of this eminence has been placed a lofty monument to the memory of the late Duke of Sutherland. The interior of the castle is no less to be admired than the beauties that surround it; and the works of art with which it is decorated are various and costly, the paintings especially being of the first merit; while the apartments altogether are magnificent in their furniture and demensions. The view from the sea likewise possesses great interest. The building from this point is seen to great advantage, exhibiting its noble tiers of balconies, and numerous spires, its windows of stained glass, its gardens and beautiful fountains, &c. Near the village a handsome memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription, to perpetuate the remembrance of the many virtues of that noble lady. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,804; and of the village, 1,074.

DRORA is a village in the parish of CLYNE, about twelve miles from Helmsdale and five from Golspie. Its trade is of a domestic nature; the curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood. The parish is large, being twenty-four miles in length by from four to eight in breadth, extending inland to Strathbog, through which flows a tributary to the Brora water, a narrow and rapid stream, abounding with excellent salmon. Within the last few years great improvements have been made in this district by His Grace the Duke of Sutherland. Coal has been found and is at present worked to a considerable extent. A large steam saw mill has also been erected, which gives employment to a number of hands. Two fairs are held, one on the second Thursday of October, and the other on the Friday after the first Wednesday in May. Population of Clyne parish in 1871, 1,733; of the village, 474.

HELMSDALE is a modern village in the parish of KILDONAN, 60 miles S. by W. from Wick, and 17 N.N.E. from Golspie; situated at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward. The houses are substantial, the streets are regular, and its harbour is excellent; during the season for the herring fishery large fleets of boats resort here. The places for curing are the most complete and the best adapted on the coast for pursuing this branch to a great extent. The river that flows through the extensive strath of Kildonan abounds with salmon. Just opposite the town stand the ruins of an old castle, which serve as a landmark to mariners. The places of worship are two churches, one of the Establishment, the other a Free church. There is a public school, also one for young ladies. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is established here. Population of Kildonan parish in 1871, 1,916, and of Helmsdale, with East Helmsdale, 794.

LOTH is a parish on Dornock Frith, 10 miles N.E. of Brora; in length it is about 14 miles. The last person who suffered death for reputed witchcraft was burnt here about 1720. A public school and an Established church are in the village. Population of the parish in 1871, 583.

WIGTONSHIRE.

THIS county which forms the western part of the ancient district of Galloway, occupies the south-western extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright (or Eastern Galloway), also by Wigton Bay; on the south and west it is girded by the Irish sea, and on the north by the county of Ayr. The extent of the shire from north to south is about thirty miles, and (including Luce Bay) its breadth from east to west about the same. The superficial contents of the county (adopting a medium calculation betwixt conflicting authorities) may be taken at 480 square miles, of which, about one-half, perhaps, is cultivated. The Bay of Luce indents the land to the extent of 15 miles, and forms two promontories. At the southern extremity of the western projection is the Mull of Galloway, while the apex on the eastern is called Burrow Head. These two peninsular headlands are also known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyns or Rinos) of Galloway. On the north of the county another promontory is formed by the intersection of Loch Ryan. In ordinary language the district is divided into Upper and Lower Galloway, which designates the northern or high, and the southern or lower parts of the shire.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the epoch of the Roman power obtruding itself into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the Novantes inhabited the whole of Eastern or Western Galloway, having Leucophibia (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and Rerigonium (Loch Ryan), for their principal port. The Anglo-Saxon overran the district in the sixth century; and Oswie, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the ninth or tenth centuries the country on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or "the country of the Gael," was conferred on the territory. About the twelfth century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary contests which originated in the competition of Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway, long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct; it was revived, however, and now bestows an earldom on the distinguished family of Stewart and Garlies. The Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners, and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Whilst these distinctions remained the inhabitants were conspicuous for rudeness bordering on ferocity. Their chief derived his authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftain and his vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours, making reckless incursions into the territories of those that had the misfortune to dwell in the proximity of these half civilised marauders.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &C.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from the encumbrance of rocks. The best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year, usually accompanied with rains; yet, when proper attention is exercised by the agriculturist, the moisture of the climate is but seldom injurious to the products of the earth. Snow rarely lies long, and frosts are not generally severe or of tedious duration. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively. The salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been, with some justice, ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. The spirit and practice of husbandry gradually spread from that shire to Kirkcudbright, and, thence from Ayrshire, penetrated into Wigtonshire. Since that period rents have risen rapidly, and corn and other products of tillage, black cattle, wool, sheep, and swine are now largely exported. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool. The mineral resources of this county are by no means extensive. There is no coal, at least for any useful purpose; and although there is plenty of iron ore, the absence of the former article renders the latter of comparatively little value. In the northern part of the Rhinns the existence of sandstone has been ascertained. Quarries of slate, of different qualities, are found in various places; and lead mines were formerly wrought within the district. The shipping trade of Wigtonshire has felt, like all maritime counties, the impetus of steam navigation. The ports of Stranraer, Wigtown, and Whithorn derive considerable benefit from this mighty power; and at one time Portpatrick was the station for the mail steam packets communicating with Ireland; the removal of which to Glasgow and Greenock has been a severe blow to the prosperity of this interesting little port. The coasting trade of this county is considerable, and is steadily increasing, giving employment to a large number of mariners. In 1688 the number of boats belonging to this shire was four, while at the present time they may be numbered by hundreds. There is also considerable activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, so that, combining the various sources of agriculture, commerce, and the fisheries, Wigtonshire may be pronounced an active and prosperous county.

RIVERS AND MOUNTAINS.—This country has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch, and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtonshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton-Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of twenty-four miles, falls into Wigton Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of twenty-one miles, unites with the Bladenoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are Lang, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014; and Barhullion, 814. The Caledonian Railway offers extensive facilities for communication with other important towns and counties.

DIVISIONS AND REPRESENTATION, &C.—Wigtonshire comprehends seventeen parishes, and has three royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn; with these is associated New Galloway in returning one member to Parliament, and the county at large sends another. The member at present (1877) sitting for the county is Robert Vans Agnew, Esq. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton-Stewart, Garlieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports or natural harbours; and is ornamented by many handsome mansions and elegant seats of its nobility and gentry. The acreage of the shire is 310,742. In 1871 the population was returned as 17,879 males and 20,951 females, total 38,830; in 1861 it was 42,095. At the former period the inhabited houses numbered 6,789.

GARLIESTON AND SORBIE.

GARLIESTON is a sea-port village in the parish of Sorbie, finely situated at the head of Garlieston bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigtown bay). From the pier-head the Ross light bears S.E. by E. For distance—See Sorbie. The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour capable of receiving a great number of vessels; the tide at the spring flow rises eighteen feet. A regular steam communication is maintained between this port and Liverpool once a fortnight, and there are traders occasionally. The Broughton and Poutenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Galloway House, a fine mansion, the seat of the Earl of Galloway, erected in 1740, is adjacent on the south; it is surrounded by beautiful plantations, and the grounds about it, for several miles, are extremely picturesque, and the prospects on every side delightful. Garlieston is a station on the Wigtonshire Railway. Population in 1871, 683.

SORBIE (or Sorby) is a parish and village—the latter 39 miles E. from Portpatrick, 30 S.E. from Stranraer, 18 S. from Newton-Stewart, and 6 S. from Wigtown; situated in a fine part of the county, and surrounded by land in a high state of cultivation. The parish is of an irregular figure, extending along the shore about twelve miles, and varying in breadth from two to six miles inland. The chief bays in the parish are Garlieston and Rigg, with the ports of Allan, Whaple, and Innerwell; these bays and ports are very convenient for shipping, and well adapted for the prosecution of the fisheries. The headlands are Cruggleton and Eagerness; upon these are the remains of two strong castles, one of these, Cruggleton Castle, gives the name to the promontory. It is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1098, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies or M'Kerlies, who retained possession until the reformation. Previously they owned Carolton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Cathcarts obtained in 1324. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot. It was taken by treachery, and Sir William retook it for his friend William Kerlie, who was thereby restored to his patrimonial castle and territory. This is fully mentioned in Paterson's "Wallace and Times." Eagerness was also built by the Danes, but no particular account has been handed down. About a mile to the east of the kirk are the gradually mouldering outlines of Sorbie tower, formerly belonging to the Hannay family. The Wigtonshire Railway runs close by the village. A new church was opened in 1877. It is a fine Gothic structure, cruciform in shape, with tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. It is situate at Millisle, about one mile from Garlieston, and two from Sorbie. Sorbie belonged to a family called Sorby, now changed to Sorbie. The Hannays did not get it until a much later period. Sorbie parish, which embraces an area of 91,611 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 1,667.

GLENLUCE AND NEW LUCE.

GLENLUCE is a village in the parish of Old Luce, 19 miles E. by N. from Portpatrick, 18 W. from Wigtown, 16 S.W. from Newton-Stewart, and 10 E. by S. from Stranraer; situated on the banks of the river Luce, and on the public road, at the head of Luce bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels. The country around is interesting and picturesque, and abounds with game of almost every kind. The church is a neat edifice, remarkable only for its simplicity; there is also a Free church, and a chapel for a United Secession congregation; and Board schools. About a mile to the north of the church, further up the vale (from which the village takes its name) are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190. When in its perfect state it must have been an extensive building. The vast mass of prostrate fragments at present cover about an acre and a half of ground, notwithstanding the quantities that have been carried away. The only part now remaining entire is a small apartment on the east side of the square, within which latter stood the cloisters; in the middle of this apartment stands a pillar, about fourteen feet high, from which eight arches spring. Tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory to have been at one time abbot of this establishment, and adds that his magical library still exists under a particular part of the ruins; to ascertain which a person excavated part of the ground and found many curiosities, together with several skeletons in an upright position; the explorer, however, having been seized with insanity, further search was interrupted, and the superstitions of the people prevented others from pursuing the investigation. The Dumfries and Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian line runs through the town. The principal hotel is the King's Arms. There is a monthly fair or market held here (for cattle) from the first Friday in the month of April to the first Friday in December. Population in 1871, 899.

The village of NEW LUCE is five miles north from Glenluce, situated on the Luce, where the Cross Water falls into that river. This district, which, until the year 1646 formed part of the parish of Old Luce, extends about ten miles in length by from five to six in breadth. It consists of high and low ground; of the former, the greater proportion is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. The parish church—a plain building, a United Presbyterian chapel and a Free church are the places of worship; there is also a Board school. This is a station on the Girvan and Portpatrick Junction Railway. New Luce, which embraces 28,877 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 661.

POST OFFICE, GLENLUCE, Margaret Hawthorn, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at ten minutes past nine morning and half-past three afternoon, and are despatched to Stranraer at a quarter-past eight morning, and to all parts at ten minutes past three afternoon and five evening.

KIRKMAIDEN, DRUMORE, STONEYKIRK,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of KIRKMAIDEN occupies nearly the whole of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtonshire, projecting into the mouth of the Solway Frith, and tapering to a point that inclines to the east. This parish, which comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, is about 10 miles in length and from 2 to 4½ in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and feeds numbers of black cattle. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves scooped out by the endless operations of the sea, and particularly by its furious lashings against the opposing barrier in stormy weather; on both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. At Portnissock is a harbour, constructed at the expense of the late Andrew M'Douall, Esq. then proprietor, who exerted himself to improve this locality. There is also a tolerable harbour at Drumore; here the coast-guard have a station, under the command of a lieutenant of the royal navy. Oyster fishings are now carried on at Drumore in great activity by the local boats, under the surveillance of the crown lessees, and the value of the produce annually raised from these fishings averages about twenty thousand pounds. The church, a plain edifice, is situate near the centre of the parish, not far from Drumore bay, 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 from Wigtown, 36 from Newton-Stewart, 20 from Stranraer, and 16 from Portpatrick. On the estate of James M'Douall, Esq. of Logan, is a fish pond well worthy the inspection of visitors; it is hewn out of the solid rock, and has communication with the sea by means of an ingenuously contrived iron grating; some of the fish in this artificial reservoir have been rendered so tame that they will feed from the hand. The parish of Kirkmaiden, which embraces 13,730 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 2,507.

The parish of STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk), lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, six miles from Stranrear and about the same distance from Portpatrick. On the east and south-east is the bay of Glenluce. The parish, which extends 7 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clachshant and Toskerton. The surface is generally hilly, moorish, and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. On the estate of William Maitland, Esq. in this district is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in the time of war; there is likewise another of a similar kind on the estate of the late Sir John M'Taggart, of Ardwell House. The parish of Stoneykirk contains 19,480 acres; population in 1871, 2,993.

KIRKOWEN,

OR KIRKCOWAN, is a parish and village, the latter 10 miles from Glenluce, 8 from Wigtown, and 7 from Newton Stewart, situated on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Bladenoch. There are woollen manufactories adjoining the village, belonging respectively to Mr. William Milroy and Messrs. Thomas Milroy and Sons, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. The Portpatrick Railway passes within a quarter of a mile of the village. The principal hotel is the Commercial. The church, which is a very neat edifice, was erected in 1838; its site, as well as the ground occupied by the church yard, were given by the late Captain W. C. Hamilton, of Craighlaw. There is a chapel for the United Presbyterians, and Board schools. The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland intersperced with pieces of arable land. It extends from north to south 15 miles, by a general breadth of about five; and it is well watered by the Tarf and Bladenoch streams. Acreage of the parish, 35,865; population in 1871, 1,352.

RAILWAY.

The line from DUMFRIES to PORTPATRICK passes within a quarter of a mile—John Gordon, station master

NEWTON STEWART,

AND THE PARISHES OF PENNINGHAM, MINNIGAFF AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town and burgh of barony, 131 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 82 s. from Glasgow, 52 w. from Dumfries, 26 w. from Stranraer, and 8 N. from Wigton; situated on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick on the right bank of the river Cree, in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff. The line of railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick, and the Wigtonshire railway pass the town. The town owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which he gave the name of Newton Stewart. About the year 1778 the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas, Esq., of Carlingwark, who founded the town of Castle-Douglas, when it was created a burgh of barony, under the title of Newton-Douglas, but it subsequently resumed its original name. About twenty years ago the houses consisted but of one storey, and were covered with thatch, but the greater portion are now two storeys in height, and slated. The town is principally composed of one long street, in the centre of which is the town-house. The Cree is crossed by a very handsome bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town. The government of the town is vested in the justices of the peace and nine commissioners elected by the ratepayers. The cotton manufacture was formerly carried on here, and in the neighbourhood to a considerable extent, but it is now completely extinct. The staple at present is wool, furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Lancashire markets.

There are two tanneries and a brewery in the town. The places of worship are the Established church, which is considered to be the most elegant modern ecclesiastical structure in the south of Scotland, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. "The Douglas Academy," founded by Samuel Douglas, Esq. of Jamaica, and the "Ewart Institute," founded by James and John Ewart, merchants, of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments. A very handsome Gothic monument to Randolphe, ninth earl of Galloway, was erected in 1875, at a cost of £1,000. An institution called the "Industrial Home" has been founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about forty destitute and orphan girls. There is a Mechanics' Institute in the town in a very flourishing condition; it is liberally supported by the gentry of the neighbourhood—the newsroom is supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and is open to the public every evening; the library contains about one thousand volumes. The British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale and the City of Glasgow Banking Company, have each a branch in this thriving town. There are three excellent hotels, the Grapes, the Crown, and the Galloway Arms. Agricultural improvement has been carried on to a great and beneficial extent in this district. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Minnigaff parish there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to Claverhouse, and superior of this district prior to the revolution, administered justice. About three miles to the north of the town are the remains of Castle-Stewart, formerly belonging (as before stated) to a branch of the Galloway family, but now in possession of Edward James Stopford Blair, Esq., of Penninghame. The weekly market is held on Friday; cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual fairs on the second Friday in February, April and October, the Friday before Dumfries horse fair in November, and the Friday after the 15th of June (old style). According to the returns for 1871 the population of Newton-Stewart was 1,282 males and 1,591 females; total, 2,873.

The parish of PENNINGHAM (or Penninghame) extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about fifteen miles, by a breadth of from three to five; bounded by Wigtown on the south and Kirkowen on the west. The greater part of the district is moorish and uncultivated, chiefly adapted to pasture. Acreage, 33,488; population in 1871, 3,940.

MINNINGAFF is a large parish in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, bounded on the west by the Cree, over which is a bridge (before noticed), forming the communication with the parish of Penningham and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is 17 miles in length and 11 in breadth. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which stream being navigable for several miles, has been of much benefit to agriculture. This river likewise produces excellent fish of various kinds, and abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to agriculture, and sustains large flocks of sheep, and numerous herds of black cattle. There are two places of worship—one each of the Established and Free churches. Within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is Heron-Kirouchtree, beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by tasteful serpentine walks. A romantic grotto in the grounds is formed out of an old stone quarry, and is well worth inspection. Acreage of the parish, 88,130; population in 1871, 1,529.

PORT WILLIAM AND MOCHRUM.

PORT WILLIAM is a prosperous village in the parish of MOCHRUM, 24 miles N.E. from Stranraer, 15 S.S.E. from Glenluce, and 9 west from Whithorn, situated on the bay of Glenluce. The harbour, though small, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported to Liverpool and Lancaster. In the vicinity is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of Sir William Maxwell, Bart., proprietor of the place, and its founder. The mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the bay of Glenluce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man, and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old Parish church, now occupied as a place of sepulture by a family named Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. The houses in general are very well built, and afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists during the bathing season. The principal hotel is the Monreith Arms. The places of worship are a chapel each of the Free and United Presbyterians. There are also commodious Board schools. Population in 1871, 829.

The parish of MOCHRUM is about ten miles in length, and extends inland between four and five miles. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient and picturesque building, in an inland part of the parish. It was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, Knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquis of Bute. The village of Mochrum, which is about a mile and a half from Port William, contains nothing worthy of mention, except the Parish church and Board school. Acreage of the parish, 24,071; population in 1871, 2,450.

PORTPATRICK

IS a parish and seaport town, the latter 133 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 89 s.s.w. from Glasgow, between 34 and 35 w. from Wigtown, the same distance w. by s. from Newton Stewart, and rather more than 8 s. by w. from Stranraer; it is distant from Dublin 117 miles, from Belfast 36, and from Donaghadee 21 (19 nautical) miles. It is situated on the coast of the North Channel, and has long been the great thoroughfare from the north of Ireland, being the nearest point of Great Britain to that country, and the best place of crossing from the one kingdom to the other. The town is small, but its situation delightful, having a fine southern exposure, backed by a ridge of small hills. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of Lord Montgomery, whose residence was the old castle of Dunskey, which stands in the neighbourhood on the brink of a tremendous precipice overhanging the sea, and was once a building of considerable strength, as appears from its interesting remains. The late Sir James Hunter Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and it is to the exertion of that gentleman that the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements. There is now one of the finest quays in Britain and a reflecting light-house; in the construction of the quay the diving bell was most successfully employed. Several years ago extensive and important improvements were made at the harbour, under the auspices of government and direction of Sir John Rennie, for the accommodation of her Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square, which is connected with the harbour by means of a channel, containing ten feet of water at low tides, was constructed. The mail communication between this place and Ireland, however, ceased in the year 1849, and since that date the business of this locality has been diminished to a great extent. This place has railway communication with all parts of Great Britain. The places of worship are the Parish church, and one for the Free Communion of Scotland. There are also Board schools. The Parish church is a remarkably neat edifice, with an embattled tower, and is a conspicuous as well as an ornamental object. The edifice belonging to the Free church is a commodious and neat structure. Acreage of the parish, 9,094; population in 1871, 1,492, of which the town numbered 685.

STRANRAER,

WITH THE PARISHES OF INCH, KIRKCOLM, LESWALT, CAIRNRYAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STRANRAER (or Stranraver) is a thriving, respectable, and ancient town, a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery, as well as a parish, 81 miles s.s.w. from Glasgow, nearly ten miles w. from Glenluce, and rather more than eight from Portpatrick, eligibly situated at the inner extremity of Loch Ryan. The principal street is of great length, but the houses have not been erected on the most regular plan. In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained. It is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI. and is called the "Tower fortalice, and manor place of Chapell," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan. In the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth his wife, then Lady Auchtriloor. The lands of Auchtriloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair. Many new buildings have lately been erected of a very handsome and substantial character. Among them may be mentioned the County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, and containing court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk, and police; the establishments of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Banking Company, the British Linen Company, and the National Bank of Scotland. The prison is a handsome and substantial erection, possessing the requisite adaptation both for confinement and discipline. A reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855. The manufacture of netting, twine, and paper bags is carried on successfully in the institution, and besides the making up of clothing and shoes for the requirements of the inmates, many of them are employed in wood turning. The old Town Hall, in George street, is a neat structure. A justice of peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, a burgh court occasionally on Saturday, and the sheriff of the county holds a court weekly, and a small debt court fortnightly.

As a royal burgh, the town is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and fourteen councillors, and it joins with Whithorn, Wigtown, and New Galloway in parliamentary representation. The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, and the harbour is now large and commodious, consisting of west pier, east pier, and breastwork, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels. The east pier is connected with the railway by a harbour branch, by which cattle, goods and passengers are conveyed direct from the steamers. There is eighteen feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1,100 tons burthen can discharge there. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow a fleet of men of war to ride at anchor with perfect safety, and it was at CAIRNYARN, the Prince of Wales first landed on Scottish soil. The bay at one time afforded a splendid supply of fine oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to Sir William Wallace, of Loch Ryan, who annually lets it. This fishing at one time employed upwards of 100 fishermen for eight months in the year, and the quality of the oysters was so fine that the men could earn good wages, and pay for the privilege of fishing about £800 a year. The beds have latterly become impoverished, thus rendering the fishery unprofitable. There are, however, several kinds of white fish caught abundantly, and occasionally herrings are got equal in quality to the best obtained on any other part of the Scottish coast. The sea bathing is also excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. There is a coast-guard station here, and a custom house. Stranraer is peculiar in the absence of manufactories or works; but is noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The district is agricultural; grain, cheese, and all kinds of farm produce, and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and once a week by steamer. A steamer runs daily between Stranraer and Larne in connection with railways on either side.

Stranraer has direct railway communication with Glasgow by a junction with the Glasgow and South-Western and the Portpatrick lines. Among other branches usually found in a flourishing town, there are in Stranraer a large brewery and six banking companies, branches of the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Banking Company, the City of Glasgow Bank, the National Bank, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland. The principal inns are the King's Arms, Meikle's Hotel, and the George. The church, in Church street, is a very handsome structure in the pointed style of architecture, the front lofty and surmounted with pinnacles. The interior is capacious, with galleries and a commanding pulpit, and the whole has an aspect of chaste neatness. The second church connected with the Establishment is situated at the western extremity of the town, on a lofty eminence, and with its tower, is a conspicuous landmark from the loch. There are other places of worship for various denominations, inclusive of two Free churches. The cemetery, beautifully situated above the town, commands a fine view of the loch; it is very tastefully laid out, and contains very handsome monuments. Numerous seats, adorned with all the charms of nature and art, ornament the neighbourhood of Stranraer. Loch Inch Castle, the residence of the Earl of Stair, is three miles distant, and Castle Kennedy in the vicinity, the property of the same nobleman, is surrounded by delightfully picturesque scenery. The following, situate in the vicinity of the burgh, are also worthy of notice:—Locknaw Castle, the residence of Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart.; Corsewall House, J. Carrick Moore, Esq.; Loch Ryan House, Sir William T. F. Wallace; Dunskey House, Alexander C. Forbes, Esq.; Logan, James M'Dowall, Esq.; Genoch, Alexander M'Neel Caird, Esq.; Rephad, Thomas C. Greig, Esq.; Balgreggan, William Maitland, Esq. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs: for horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June, and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing from April and ending in November. Other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The population of Stranraer, according to the census for 1871, amounted to 5,977, namely, 2,643 males, and 3,334 females, the number of inhabited houses at the same period was about 1,000.

The parish of INCH lies on the shore of Loch Ryan, extending nine miles in length by a breadth nearly as great. The parish church stands on the margin of a lake, in which there is a small beautifully wooded island. The lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which are the ruins of a castle, formerly a seat of the Earls of Stair. Acreage, 30,844. Population in 1871, 3,268.

KIRKCOLM parish is bounded by Loch Ryan on the east, measuring a square of about five miles. The church is pleasantly situate near the shore of the lake, north of the bay called the Wig. Acreage, 13,318. Population in 1871, 1,948.

The parish of LESWALT lies betwixt the Irish channel on the west, and Loch Ryan on the east. It is about the same size and of much the same form as Kirkcolm. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale, while from the sea the coast presents bold and rocky features. Acreage, 15,523. Population in 1871, 2,496.

CAIRNRYAN is a small village on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan, six miles from Stranraer. The harbour affords safe anchorage for vessels which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lofty lighthouse for their guidance. Sir William T. F. Wallace has a residence here.

WHITHORN,

WITH THE ISLE OF WHITHORN AND PARISH OF GLASSERTON.

WHITHORN, or Whithern, is a town of considerable antiquity and a royal burgh in the parish of Whithorn, 40 miles E. by S. from Portpatrick, 32 S.E. from Stranraer, 19 S. from Newton-Stewart and 11 S. from Wigtown; situated not far distant from Wigtown bay. It was originally inhabited by a tribe of Britons called the Novantes, and was then a town of some consequence; it is mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia, the Saxons called it Hwitærn, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in the fourth century, which Bede mentions as the first that was erected of stone. During the eighth century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the Episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the twelfth century. After the period of the Reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south, with diverging streets. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and joins with Stranraer and other burghs in returning one member to parliament. Whithorn enjoys the facilities of railway communication by means of the Wigtonshire line. The local trade is very inconsiderable, and merely of a retail and domestic character. There are two banking establishments and several insurance agencies. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church and one each for United and Reformed Presbyterians. The parish church is remarkably neat as well as spacious, and much superior to most of the parish kirks in this county; it is erected partly on the venerable ruins of the priory, founded by St. Ninian before mentioned, and who is said to have been the first who converted the Picts to the christain faith. These ruins are remarkably grand and imposing; they contain several large vaults, a beautiful Saxon and some Gothic arches, also sculptured royal armorial bearings of Scotland, and the dilapidated arms of the bishops of Galloway. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible society, and there are Board schools in the town. A cattle market is held on the second Thursday in each month from April to December, and an annual fair in July. The acreage of the parish is 11,891; the population in 1871 was 2,900, and of the town 1,577.

The ISLE OF WHITHORN is a pleasant village, about three miles from Whithorn, of which it is the port. Near the village stand the remains of an old church, said to be the first built in this part of the kingdom, or, as some affirm, the first founded in Scotland, and its preservation is desirable from its venerable age and interesting origin. The village contains a Free church and Board schools. Population in 1871, 459.

The parish of GLASSERTON lies on the east coast of Luce bay, bounded by Whithorn on the east, Mochrum on the west, and Kirkinner on the north; it extends seven miles and a half in length by a general breadth of two and a half, except in its northern part, where it is nearly double that space. On the coast near its north-western confines is Lag Point, with a small haven on the north called Monreith Bay; a village at its head is termed the MILLTOWN OF MONREITH. The church and Board schools are in the southern quarter of the parish. Acreage 13,284; population in 1871, 1,196.

WIGTOWN,

AND THE PARISH OF KIRKINNER AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIGTOWN (or Wigton)—the former mode of spelling is now generally adopted, to distinguish this town from that of Wigton, in the county of Cumberland—is a royal and parliamentary burgh, the seat of a presbytery and the capital of its parish, 105 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 58 S.W. from Dumfries, 28 E. by S. from Stranraer, and 8 S. from Newton-Stewart, pleasantly situated on an eminence near the north side of the Bladenoch Water, two miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigtown. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the middle ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of successful Saxon invaders, who conferred on it the name of Wig, from the place having been contested in a battle, the adjunct ton, or "town," was afterwards given when the town arose. The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous until the reign of David II. when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. The Wigtonshire Railway connects the town with the network of lines communicating with the rest of Scotland and with England. The principal street is a parallelogram, of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants. At the end is a very handsome modern cross, of granite, sculptured in an elegant and tasteful manner. At the other extremity are the county buildings, having a tower of considerable height, which imparts a degree of dignity to the town. The building contains the court-room, the sheriff's small debt court and the ordinary courts, which latter are held every Tuesday in time of session. A monument has been erected here in memory of Margaret Wilson and Margaret M'Lachlan, the martyrs who perished in the Bladenoch Water, in the year 1685. It is situated on the top of Windyhill, from which there is a magnificent view of the town and the surrounding country, and was erected by public subscription at a cost of £200. Many new buildings have been erected, some of them of a very tasteful and costly description, such as the new county buildings, the Board schools, the county jail and the banks; the latter branches from the British Linen Company, the City of Glasgow and the Clydesdale Banking Company. The principal inns are the Galloway Arms and the Commercial. The burgh altogether may be considered in an improving condition. The harbour of Wigtown is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of three hundred tons burthen. The principal exports are corn and cattle, and there is regular communication with Liverpool by steam packets. Wigtown is the seat of a custom house, comprehending the creeks of Wigtonshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. In the year 1581 Wigtown was specified as one of the King's Free Burghs. It is, as a royal burgh, governed by a provost, two bailies, and eighteen councillors, and is associated with Stranraer, Whithorn and New Galloway in returning one member to the legislature. The present (1877) member is Mark J. Stewart, Esq. of Blairderry.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. The parish of Wigtown extends five miles in length by four in breadth. It has several eminences throughout, but is in general flat and fertile. At the western extremity of the parish are nineteen large granite stones, placed in a circular form. They are supposed to have belonged to a druidical place of worship or sacrifice, while tradition points to the spot as the tomb of King Galdus. The market, entitled by charter, to be holden on Saturday, is now discontinued. Fairs are also chartered to be held at Candlemas on the first Monday in April and the first Fridays in July and August, all old style, but they are discontinued. A monthly cattle market on the fourth Friday of each month has been established, and there is an annual cattle show in July, which is numerously attended. The parish of Wigtown contains 7,805 acres, and in 1871 the population was 2,306, the town numbering 1,786.

The kirk town of KIRKINNER is about three miles from Wigtown, on the road to Garliestown, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery. The principal ornament in this neighbourhood is the stately mansion of R. Vans Agnew, Esq. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served as the foundation of the story of the "Bride of Lammermoor." The parish extends three miles along Wigtown bay, the Bladenoch Water dividing it on the north from Wigtown. An Established church and Board schools are in the village. The ruins of Longcastle church (the parish now incorporated with Kirkinner) stand at the southern extremity of the parish. Kirkinner is a station on the Wigtownshire railway. Acreage of the parish, 15,250; population in 1871, 1,548.

The BONDS of the Company are accepted by

The rates of Premium vary according to the risk undertaken by the Company. The different kinds of Risks have all been classified, and the Company is therefore in a position to undertake the best at the Lowest Scale of Premium.

II.—ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT.

This Department is now one widely taken advantage of by all classes of society. Some idea of the substantial character of the benefit obtained by the Public from Accident Assurance, may be gathered from the fact that there is paid annually by way of allowance for injuries, exclusive altogether of the amount paid on Death claims, not much less than £100,000 in England alone.

III.—PREMIUMS FOR GENERAL ACCIDENTS.

£500 if killed, or £3 per week whilst totally disabled. For Class I., £1 15s.; Class II., £2 5s.; and Class III., £3 3s. per year.

The full amount assured is payable in the event of death resulting directly from an accident within three months from the date of its occurrence.

The weekly allowance is payable for a period not exceeding twenty-six weeks in any one year, and is paid in respect of each Accident in one sum.

A weekly allowance, during partial disablement, of one-fourth of the amount allowed during total disablement, can be assured at an additional Annual Premium of 2s. in Class I., or 3s. in Class II and III. for each £100 assured.

The Company is prepared in all cases to settle a claim for weekly compensation by one immediate payment.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The Quinquennial Valuation to Christmas, 1874, was made on the basis of the Institute of Actuaries' (Hm) Table of Mortality and 3 per cent. interest. The Valuation was strictly a net premium one, the whole of the loading being reserved.

The amount of profit divided among 2,875 participating policies, assuring £3,002,776, was £128,000, which was equivalent to a return of 29 per cent. of the premiums received during the five years.

The Valuation Report concludes as follows:—

"The Company's Accumulated Life Reserve Fund is about £21,000 more than is required by a net premium Valuation according to the Institute of Actuaries' (Hm) Table of Mortality. This is equalled by very few Offices indeed, and the additional guarantee afforded by the paid-up capital of £1,000,000 places the Guardian in a position of singular financial strength."

This Company pays NO Commission in any form, and can thus afford to grant Assurances at lower Rates than any other Company in the Kingdom.

As shewn in the Returns made to Government by Life Assurance Companies, nearly one-third of their whole expenses (upwards of £400,000 per annum) consists of Commission paid to Agents and others for the introduction of business. It is evident, therefore, that where this heavy item of expenditure is not incurred, a great saving to Assurers must result.

Medical Examinations arranged anywhere to suit Assurers. Prospectus forwarded on application.

DEPOSITS.

THIS COMPANY PROVIDES PERSONS WHO HAVE MONEY WITH A SECURE AND PROFITABLE CHANNEL FOR ITS INVESTMENT.

The Funds are invested entirely on the security of Heritable Property in Scotland, approved of by experienced Surveyors and Valuators. The sums lent are from the first restricted to an amount considerably under the market value of the Property, and, by the system on which the Business is conducted, this margin of safety is periodically increased by the gradual repayment of the Loan. No Property is purchased, the funds being lent only; and by thus avoiding all speculation, the Company affords Depositors all the security of carefully-chosen Heritable Bonds, and, in addition, the personal security of a large and responsible body of Shareholders for the subscribed Capital of £50,000.

The present Rates allowed by the Company for Money on Deposit-Receipt are as follows:–

For Six Months or one Year - - -	4 per cent.
„ Two Years - - - - - - -	$4\frac{1}{4}$ „
„ Three Years and upwards - - -	$4\frac{1}{2}$ „

If the Deposit is remitted from the country, the Bank charge on a Letter of Credit may be deducted. Interest is remitted by the Manager, half-yearly, free of charge, on the dates when due.

The Scottish Equitable is a PURELY MUTUAL OFFICE, and the whole profits belong to the Members, who are, at the same time, expressly exempted from personal responsibility.

The PROFITS are ascertained every fifth year, and Prospective Additions are paid to the date of Death, so that every Policy obtains its full share of the Profits up to the day on which it becomes a Claim.

The Bonus is allocated not only on the original sums assured, but also on the previously Vested Additions; each Member thus draws a share of the Surplus corresponding to his Contributions, and proportionally increased benefits are properly conferred upon those Members who have contributed longest to the Funds.

At the ELEVENTH DIVISION OF PROFITS of the Society, up to 1st March, 1873, the Surplus realized during the five years preceding amounted to £192,236. This surplus enabled the Directors to declare a reversionary bonus ranging, according to the age of the policies, from £1 to £1 16s. 10d. per cent per annum on the original sums assured; and the total additions thus made to the policies amounted to £306,818.

THE TOTAL BONUS ADDITIONS amount to £2,012,982.

AT THE CLOSE OF THE FORTY-FIFTH YEAR, ON 1ST MARCH, 1876,

The Existing Assurances, including Bonus Additions, amounted to £7,755,477.

The Annual Revenue,

From Premiums of Assurance	201,821.
From Interest and Dividends	93,257.
From Assignment Fees and Fines	120.
Total		295,198.
And The Accumulated Funds to		2,227,210.

By Resolutions recently passed, the conditions as to Foreign Residence and Travel have been made MUCH MORE LIBERAL, and at the same time GREATLY SIMPLIFIED.

LOANS are granted in connection with Life Insurance, on Life Interest, Reversions, and other approved Security. The Directors are also prepared to entertain proposals for the sale of Reversions to the Society.

The ANNUAL REPORT, containing particulars of the Investments and the Balance Sheet, Forms of Proposal, and all information, may be obtained on application at the Head Office, or any of the Society's Agencies.

STUBBS' WEEKLY GAZETTE (indispensable to all Traders giving credit) contains a list of all Bankruptcies, Liquidations, Arrangements, Trusteeships, Bills of Sale, and all Preferential Securities, County Court Judgments, &c.

II.—COMMERCIAL REGISTER AND STATUS DEPARTMENT.

STUBBS' COMMERCIAL REGISTERS comprise more than a MILLION entries relating to the credit, position and trustworthiness of the trading community of the three Kingdoms, to which valuable additions are daily being made.

The advantages derivable from this department of the business are being more and more appreciated by the Subscribers, who are thus assisted to discriminate as to the advisability of extending, limiting or closing accounts.

III.—DEBT RECOVERY DEPARTMENT.

Debts recovered upon a simple and comprehensive system. All useless Law costs avoided. Charges by per centage. Full particulars in four page Prospectus.

Exclusive advantages are secured for our Subscribers in connection with the organization of the long-established Trade Protection Association of M'Killop and Sprague Co., of the United States and Canada.

V.—FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Subscribers can obtain, through this department, all the ordinary facilities afforded by a Bank Agency, at very low rates. Negociable Securities are bought and sold through qualified brokers, at reduced rates of commission.

THE Consumer should be made to understand that these PAINTS are no newly-invented Quack Paint or so-called Composition, but a first-class quality of Paint (prepared ready for use) of the customary kind, possessing such covering and drying qualities that the most inexperienced person can use them with confidence that satisfactory results will be obtained.

They are vastly superior to anything else sold.

They will go nearly twice as far as the inferior kinds generally sold, will dry hard and glossy within EIGHT HOURS, and are packed in 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 lb. hermetically-sealed Canisters, to ensure their reaching the Consumer as fresh as when first made, and be opened and used at his pleasure.

To render it still more serviceable to the general public, the Proprietors have invented and patented a Canister which can be opened with the finger and thumb without the aid of a Key, Knife, or any tool whatever, thus completing its usefulness and convenience.

It is necessary, therefore, for purchasers to satisfy themselves that each Package is labelled LUNDY'S "HOUSEHOLD" PAINT or VARNISH, and JOHN J. LUNDY & Co., LEITH, stamped on the Canisters and moulded on the Bottles, with the above Trade Mark, as, like every article that has established a character in public esteem, it is immediately surrounded with inferior imitations.

Sold Wholesale and Retail by nearly every respectable Druggist, Grocer and Ironmonger in Great Britain, Ireland and the Colonies.

WOOD LETTER CUTTERS,

Beg to call attention to their Founts cast in their Extra-Hard Metal, which are twice as durable as those cast in the ordinary Metal, a great advantage for heavy numbers and for the Stereo process of the Daily Papers.

Their Printing Machines, with their Patent "Flyers," combine the advantages of making good work without making ready, perfect register, ease of working, and great durability. The superiority of these Machines is shewn in the numerous Testimonials they have received, a copy of which will be forwarded on application.

Their Wood Letter, cut by their Patented process, on the end grain of American Rock Maple, is harder and more durable than the ordinary kinds, and for Two Colour Letters has perfect register.

Head-Master - - NATHANIEL LEASK, A.M. (Edin.)

THE PREMISES have recently undergone extensive repairs and alterations, amounting in some sections of the Building to entire reconstruction; they are now believed to be unsurpassed in Scotland for extent and adaptability to educational purposes.

THE PLAYGROUNDS, surrounding the Institution, are upwards of 10 acres in extent, well sheltered by wood, and specially laid out for the recreation of pupils.

CLASSES.—The number in each Class is strictly limited, and the Classes are sub-divided, so that, as far as possible, boys of the same ability and attainments may be placed together; in this way each pupil receives much individual attention from the master.

PREPARATION OF LESSONS is carried on upon a thoroughly organised system, securing the maximum of application and progress on the part of the pupils.

UNIVERSITY EXAMINERS.—Each department of the School is annually examined by independent examiners of the highest standing, from whose reports the following extracts are made:—

CLASSICS.—"Abbey Park Institution, from the excellence of its educational and other arrangements, will bear favourable comparison with any other Institution of a similar kind with which I am acquainted."—PROFESSOR CROMBIE, D.D.

MATHEMATICS.—"The examiners are satisfied that both the extent of profession and the accuracy with which the work was prepared are equal to what may be found in the highest schools in the country."—PROFESSOR KELLAND.

ARITHMETIC.—"So far as proficiency in Arithmetic is concerned, Mr. Leask's pupils can hold their own with those of any other educational institution, whether public or private, in the country."—PROFESSOR BIRRELL.

ENGLISH.—"The training under which the pupils have acquired their habits of composition has obviously been both exceedingly careful and judicious; the composition, punctuation, and spelling are, as a rule, very correct; the essays are, without exception, highly creditable."—PROFESSOR VEITCH.

MODERN LANGUAGES.—"One very excellent feature of the paper done by your boys is, besides the very high percentage reached, the evenness of their work, there being between the first and last boys a difference of only 28.4; this is a result very seldom obtained, and speaks emphatically of the excellence of the teaching."—M. KUNZ.

GEORGE LANGLANDS,

SHUTTLE AND PICKER WORKS,

161 HILLTOWN, DUNDEE,

Begs to call attention to the New Patented WEFT DRAG for SHUTTLES. The advantages of the Drag is its simplicity, which renders it almost impossible of being disarranged. It gives a uniform tension to the Weft Thread, gives way to inequalities and lumps, thereby improving the Selvedge of the Cloth. It saves the Selvedge Threads from being broken, is easily threaded, and the Weaver cannot put the thread by it.

LANGLANDS AND JOHNSTONE ARE THE SOLE PATENTEES.

THE SHUTTLES CAN ONLY BE SUPPLIED BY MR. LANGLANDS, AT HIS WORKS, 161 HILLTOWN, OR COMMERCIAL STREET, MAXWELLTOWN, DUNDEE.

G. L. thanks his numerous Customers for the liberal support he has enjoyed since commencing Business, eight years ago, and begs respectfully to intimate, that, with acquired experience, he is in a position to compete with any in the Trade for First-Class Workmanship and Materials, with Moderate Charges. So as to merit a continuance of that support, he has greatly enlarged his Premises, and put in New Tools, and is now in a position to fulfil Orders entrusted to him with greater despatch than hitherto.

MILTON DUFF DISTILLERY.

This Distillery was established in 1824 and is situated in the Glen of Pluscarden, Morayshire, a locality unenviably notorious in the days of illicit distillation. None were better judges of the water most suitable for producing a fine Malt Whisky than those pioneers of the legitimate trader, the "SMUGGLERS;" and to the location of this Distillery may be ascribed the mellowness and early maturing properties of the spirit which have been long and favourably known to the trade, and acknowledged to be one of the finest for blending purposes produced in the North.

DISTILLERS.

Campbeltown is a very ancient and renowned place for the distillation of Whisky, and, as every person is aware, the Highlanders knew how to manufacture it long before any others. From Parliamentary evidence lately issued, it will be seen that the Scotch Whisky is much superior to Irish or Grain Whisky. Our Whisky, being prepared from the finest Malt only, is pronounced by the best connoisseurs "the perfection of Whisky."

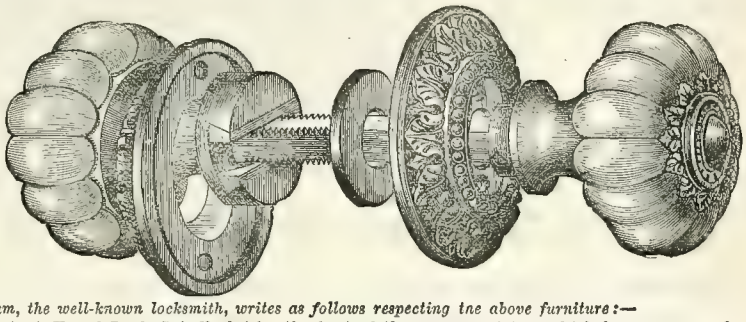
Tubing, Cornice poles; Altar, Gallery, and Staircase railings; Coronas, Candelabra, Sconces; Eagle and other lecterns; Mouldings, Guards, Screens, Ventilators, Shop fittings; Door, Sash, and Casement furniture; Espagnoletto bolts; Picture, Pulley, Curtain and Stair rods; Improved pressed stop, and other varieties of hinges; Swing-door centres; Bell furniture; Patent vitrified bowl castors, Ship furniture, Stable fittings, and Metal work of every description.

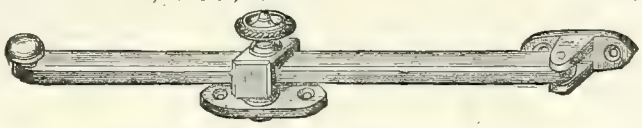
PATENT KEYED DOOR-FURNITURE.—This Furniture is more secure and less liable to get out of order than any other variety. It is fixed with great facility by fitting into the shoulder of the knob, when the knob is screwed up the spindle to its proper position, the DOVETAILED KEY. The key being so fitted, the knob is firmly attached to, and dependent on the spindle, and not (as in other patents) on a few small screws only, in the thin wood of the door.



Mr. Thomas, of Birmingham, the well-known locksmith, writes as follows respecting the above furniture:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I consider your Patent Keyed Lock Spindle by far the best of the many varieties which have come under my notice. I have had full opportunities of testing its qualities when in use, and find it to answer every purpose required."

"To Messrs. William Tonks & Sons, Oct. 30th, 1871." Yours truly, SAMUEL THOMAS.



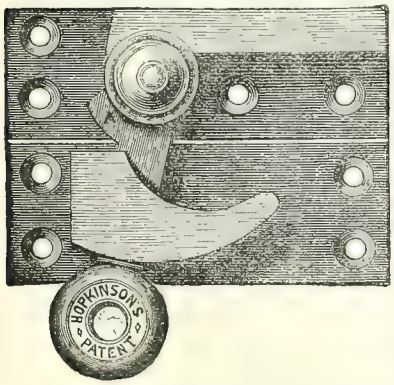
PATENT WEDGE CASEMENT STAY.—The simplicity of the construction of this Stay allows the arm to be made of wrought iron covered with brass, or of wrought iron alone, thus affording strength sufficient to resist strains under which Stays of the ordinary make so frequently bend or break. The fastening, based on the principle of the wedge, is simple and secure.

HOPKINSON'S PATENT GUARDED LEVER SASH-FASTENER.

This is the ordinary fastener, with the projection A on the left of the arm, forming the PATENT GUARD, which, when the window is fastened, lies up to, and immediately behind the opening between the sashes. When any instrument is thrust through the opening to force back the arm, the PATENT GUARD, instantaneously closing on and tightly wedging it, effectually prevents the instrument from forcing open the fastener.

Being without complicated parts, it is not liable to get out of order.

For the same reason it is not expensive, and can be sold at about the same price as the ordinary fastener.



WHOLESALE AGENTS FOR

HOOKHAM'S PATENT STEEL RIBBON SASH-LINE.

This line, which is formed of several bands of watch-spring steel, covered with a binding of copper wire, and so prepared as to resist corrosion, supplies a want long felt of a material for hanging safely all kinds of, but more especially heavy sashes.

It can be used with ordinary pulleys, and fixed in the ordinary way.

It is very neat in appearance, perfectly flexible, almost frictionless, does not stretch, and, being practically indestructible, is in the end

Much cheaper than the ordinary lines and chains.

No. 1, for sashes up to 40 lb.
No. 2, for sashes up to 100 lb.
No. 3, for sashes up to 150 lb.

Hayward's Registered Secure Flush Bolt.

PATENT

BOOK-SHELF FITTINGS.

These Fittings are intended to replace the troublesome studs by which book-shelves have been usually regulated. The perforated metal strips are let in and screwed to the upright frames. The plates, although sufficiently strong to support the heaviest books, are so thin as not to require to be mortised into the shelves; and by the facility with which the plates are inserted, a fine adjustment can be given to the shelves without an irritating waste of time.

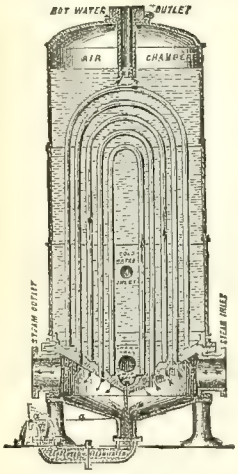
Berryman's Patent Universal Expanding Tubular

FEED WATER HEATER AND FUEL ECONOMISER



Utilizes the waste heat in exhaust Steam. It makes a saving in Coal alone of 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. The only Medal given at the Philadelphia Exhibition, 1876.

It prevents the disastrous results of grease in Steam Boilers, and increases their safety and durability. It is admitted to be the most perfectly designed and constructed Heater ever offered to steam users. The Tubes are of Solid-drawn Brass, and can expand and contract independent of each other, making leakage impossible.

When the down pressure is greater than the working pressure on the Boilers, no Pump is required; and in cases where Pumps have to be used, this Heater allows them to work cold water, and only one Pump is required in any case. These Heaters are in use at Her Majesty's Royal Laboratory, Woolwich; and in the Times Newspaper office, and have also been adopted at the various Navy Yards of the United States and other Governments. Over 600,000 horse-power are in use. The many important advantages of the Heater have caused it to be adopted by the leading Engineers, Collieries, and Manufacturing Firms, some of whom have from three to five in use.

BERRYMAN'S PATENT SURFACE CONDENSERS,

For Marine and Stationary Engines, prevent leakage of the Tubes, and require no packing.

DUNDEE COURIER AND ARGUS,

(ESTABLISHED 1816,)

PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING,

And Bi-weekly Edition every Tuesday and Friday.

The Dundee Courier and Argus is the most largely-circulated daily newspaper in Dundee.

Its telegraphic and reporting arrangements are very complete, and no expense is spared to obtain the earliest and fullest news, so as to make the Courier and Argus a first-class morning newspaper.

From its great circulation and standing in the populous counties of Forfar, Kincardine, Perth, Fife, Aberdeen, &c., with their important commercial centres and large agricultural districts, it is of the greatest value to advertisers for all announcements intended to be brought under the notice of the professional, mercantile, manufacturing, agricultural, and shipping classes.

By special train, the Courier and Argus reaches Perth at an early hour, and parcels are despatched from that important railway junction by the first trains in all directions.

In addition to the ordinary newspaper correspondents over the whole country, to meet the continual extension of business, and for the more ample and prompt supply of district intelligence, branch offices, with special reporting staffs, have been established in the chief centres, such as Perth, Arbroath, Aberdeen, Forfar, &c.

No advertisement can be effectively brought under the notice of the inhabitants of the north-east and central parts of Scotland unless it appears in the columns of the Dundee Courier and Argus.

HEAD OFFICE—COURIER & ARGUS BUILDINGS,

LINDSAY STREET, DUNDEE.

Proprietors—CHARLES ALEXANDER & CO.

WEEKLY NEWS,

LARGE EIGHT PAGE PAPER,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE ONE PENNY.

The Weekly News circulates throughout the whole of the urban and rural districts of Scotland. Several editions are published, each edition containing the special news of the district where it circulates. It has a very large and still increasing circulation, and is of great value as an advertising medium.

As an indication of the popularity of the Weekly News, and its superior value to advertisers, it may be stated, that since 1875, the weekly circulation has increased upwards of 20,000 copies, and its readers now number

ABOUT 150,000.

The leading features of the Weekly News are its Stories, Military Sketches, Antiquarian and Historic Papers, and special reports of district intelligence.

Stories by the leading novelists of the day appear in the Weekly News; also, Papers on numerous subjects by eminent writers, Poetry, and a carefully-prepared epitome of the General News of the Week, Markets, Shipping News, &c.

Head Office—LINDSAY STREET, DUNDEE.

PROPRIETORS—CHAS. ALEXANDER & CO.

DUNDEE AND THE NORTH OF SCOTLAND.

FROM the great prosperity of the Linen and Jute Trades of late years, Dundee has become a place of great wealth and importance, and the centre of a large and populous district.

THE DUNDEE ADVERTISER,

THE COUNTY PAPER, ESTABLISHED IN 1801,

And conducted for about twenty years by Mr. RINTOUL, afterwards of the Spectator, has long been the leading Journal of the town and district. As a Daily Paper, it now circulates over the whole North of Scotland, anticipating the Edinburgh and Glasgow papers by several hours.

By its powerful writing, its great attention to Commercial and Shipping affairs, its admirable digest of each day's intelligence, and the spirited enterprise of its managers in sparing no expense to obtain the earliest and fullest news, the Dundee Advertiser has become a splendid Advertising medium, and is now invariably selected for all important announcements intended to be brought under the notice of the Mercantile, Manufacturing, Shipping, Agricultural and Professional interests in the North-east of Scotland.

The Dundee Advertiser now has a well-appointed OFFICE at 145 FLEET STREET, LONDON, for the reception of News and Advertisements in the Metropolis. Its London and Dundee Offices are also connected by a through the medium of which, and by the agency of an able Literary and Reporting Staff in London, its news is as fresh and complete as that of the first-class London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Dailies. The Advertiser's London Correspondence is celebrated for its early, varied and trusty information.

Managers of Public Companies and Insurance Offices, Publishers, Shippers, and Advertisers generally will only consult their own interests by forwarding their advertisements to

THE PUBLISHER, ADVERTISER OFFICE, DUNDEE, N.B.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH

Is a First-Class Family Paper, and having the advantage of the long-established and extensive organization of the Dundee Advertiser, it circulates over a very large district, and is a favourite Advertising Medium. Orders received by

THE PUBLISHER, BANK STREET, DUNDEE.

THE PEOPLE'S JOURNAL,

PUBLISHED BY JOHN LENG, BANK STREET, DUNDEE,

Has, at the date of this advertisement (March, 1877), attained the extraordinary Circulation of 133,000 copies weekly, which attests its value for Notices and Advertisements of every description.

Orders to be addressed to the Publisher as above.

NEW THEORY AND PRACTICE

OF MEDICINE:

A treatise on the nature, cause, cure and prevention of disease in human beings;

ALSO A TREATISE, BY THE SAME AUTHOR,

On the nature, cause, cure and prevention of diseases in Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Pigs, Dogs, Poultry, Cage Birds, Silkworms, &c.

IMPORTANT SANITARY DISCOVERY.

HIBBERT'S Patent ANTISEPTIC MEDICINE and BATH SOLUTIONS. Fermentation being the great agent by which animal or vegetable matter is decomposed, it follows that almost all disease is the result of fermentation, putrid or inflammatory. The Antiseptic arrests fermentation with chemical certainty, renders vaccination unnecessary, disinfects the breath and evacuations, and therefore makes contagious diseases non-contagious. Outwardly applied, it quickly reduces inflammation by the abstraction of caloric. Sold by all Chemists, in bottles, price 1s. 1½d. and upwards. Wm. Hibbert, Chemical Works, Clarence Street, Cheetham, Manchester.

Wholesale, Barclay & Co., London; Raimes & Co., Liverpool; and Woolley, Manchester.

THE EWART HIGH SCHOOL,

NEAR NEWTON-STEWART,

Has been founded to enable the Upper and Middle Classes to obtain for their Sons the advantages of a Classical and Mathematical or Commercial Education of the First Class, at a moderate expense, the whole amount of the Endowment being saved to parents in Fees.

Head Master—JOHN ST. CLAIR, Member of Council, University of Edinburgh, F.R.G.S.

(Formerly Privy Council Lecturer in Literature in the Church of Scotland Training College, Edinburgh), ASSISTED BY A THOROUGHLY EFFICIENT STAFF OF EXPERIENCED TEACHERS.

The Course of Instruction is such as to prepare for the Universities, the Examinations for the Public Service, or the pursuits of General Business; and the organization of the School provides that each Pupil shall receive special instruction and superintendence every hour of the day, and have the whole of his work examined by the Principal. In proportion to the number of Teachers, the number of Pupils is so much limited, that special attention can be given to each.

Besides the Sons of Gentlemen residing in and near Newton-Stewart, the High School is attended chiefly by the Sons of the Landed Proprietors, the Clergy, and other educated classes in the South of Scotland, as well as more distant quarters. The attendance of young gentlemen is at its maximum now; and three-fourths of those now resident in the Head Master's House are younger brothers or other relatives of former Pupils.

In the Upper Department of the School, Written Examinations are held very frequently, and the written papers are transmitted to the Parents of the Pupils. In this Department, preparation is now made for the Examinations for the Arts, Law, and Medical Classes of the Universities, and for the many Civil Service appointments now open to Competition. Previous to the adoption of this general course of instruction, the whole body of the Pupils took the similar course of study prescribed for the Local Examinations of the Universities, and OVER NINE-TENTHS of them actually passed these Examinations, a proportion not approached by any other School in England or Scotland. This test therefore marks and measures the minimum attainments of the ordinary pupils.

TERMS MODERATE AND INCLUSIVE.

Pupils may be enrolled at any time when there are vacancies, and these occur mostly in July and August. Vacancies may be pre-engaged.

HIGHFIELD HOUSE, MELROSE,

FOR THE BOARD AND EDUCATION OF YOUNG GENTLEMEN.

Head-Master - - ANDREW M'LELLAN, M.A. (Edin.)

(For eight years senior English Master in the Collegiate School, and in Watson's College School, Edinburgh.)

PUPILS are prepared for Business, for the University, and for special work. There is an AGRICULTURAL CLASS during the winter term. The Class-Rooms have accommodation for fifty pupils, and the Boarding Department for twenty boys. One of the resident masters is a native of Germany. The senior assistant is an Aberdeen graduate.

VOCAL MUSIC, Drawing, Shorthand, Fencing, Piano, have special masters.

The DOMESTIC ARRANGEMENTS are under the superintendence of Mrs. M'LELLAN, and specially aim at home comfort.

Terms from FIFTY to EIGHTY GUINEAS, inclusive of Extras.

The GROUNDS extend to five acres, and command an extensive view. The gravel soil, and mild climate are suited to boys from the Colonies, and to those who are delicate.

Dr. BRYCE, of the Edinburgh Collegiate School, says:—"I found Mr. M'LELLAN a most valuable master. He subordinated everything to duty. He was respected by the boys for his talents and his skill in teaching, and was loved by them for his interest in their progress. As a scholar in his own department he has few superiors, while he is, at the same time, a good classic and a high mathematician."

Dr. OGILVIE, of Watson's College, says:—"It must be gratifying for you to know that no department of the school has been more favourably reported on year by year by the various examiners than the English Department, which you have brought to a state of efficiency difficult to maintain. I have no doubt you have been partly led to undertake the management of a larger Boarding Establishment by the admirable manner in which Mrs. M'LELLAN has succeeded in securing the domestic comfort of the boys under your charge."

PROFESSOR BAIN, of Aberdeen, says of Mr. M'LELLAN's pupils:—"The appearance made by the pupils could have been made only under a thoroughly efficient teacher."

Mr. PATERSON, the Edinburgh University Examiner, says:—"I have nothing to add to what I said in my report two years ago of the intellectual life and activity which evidently pervaded all the classes under Mr. M'LELLAN's charge."

TEANINICH WHISKY.

ESTABLISHED 1800.

The Whisky made in this Distillery is produced from the finest barley grown in the neighbourhood. which is one of the best barley-growing districts in Scotland. The water supply rises in the mossy uplands of Ben-Wyvis, where peat of the best quality is got for kiln-drying the malt. The chief requisites for the production of the finest quality of Highland Malt Whisky are thus at command here, and the business has in consequence been carried on extensively without interruption, since the beginning of the century.

Best facilities afforded to Wine Merchants who mature Whisky in their own Sherry wood. Orders may be given to the agents for the distillery in the large towns in Scotland, or sent direct to

(The most improved Cop Shuttle.)

Power-Loom Shuttle & Shuttle Mounting Makers,

JOHN MENZIES & SONS,

ORDIE MILLS, REDGORTON, near PERTH,

Have acquired, by their long experience in the trade, a knowledge of all requirements in the make of Shuttles. Manufacturers can testify to the great benefits derived from the various improvements which from time to time have been made by them since the Side Tipped Shuttle was invented more than thirty years ago by the late William Nairne, of Logie Almond, and John Menzies, the senior partner of the firm. The invention was at once taken up and used with the greatest safety to the weavers by the eminent firm of Baxter Brothers & Co., Dundee, and is now universally adopted.

The following are a few of their principal improvements:—

THE FIRST MAKERS OF THE SIDE TIPPED SHUTTLE,
(now universally adopted.)

THE HOOP IN END OF SHUTTLE WHICH PREVENTS SPLITTING.

THE GROOVES INSIDE THE SHUTTLE FOR HOLDING COP,
(is now universally adopted); and

THE SPRING DRAG FOR EQUALISING THE STRAIN ON THE WEFT THREAD,

Having an advantage OVER ALL OTHERS by acting instantaneous and with perfect accuracy. This is of great advantage to Manufacturers working various fabrics requiring different drags; by turning a small eccentric, will give whatever strain required. It gives way to all inequalities in the weft, prevents loose yarn from getting into the cloth, giving it an improved appearance, and leaving the Selvedge complete.

25th December, 1876.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD,

Dear Sirs,—We will thank you to make for us other 10 Drum-Winding Frames (1380 Drums) same as those you lately supplied us with, and commence delivery soon as possible.—Your attention will oblige

Yours truly,
(Signed), CLARK & CO.,*
Per ROBERT BALDERSTON.

*This Firm previously ordered upwards of 2500 Drums, 860 of which were for their works in America.

CALDHAM LINEN WORKS, BRECHIN,
5th February, 1873.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD, Glasgow.

Dear Sirs,—We have now had considerable experience of your Weft-Winding Machines, and have a growing satisfaction with them.

We find them easier to drive, and more easily upheld than other makers', while the uniform speed of the Swifts or Reels is less trying on the Yarns, and consequently gives greater production, with considerably less waste.

The last two Machines we had from you were to replace some which, though not old, we disposed of in order to get your Machines.

Yours truly,
Pro LAMB & SCOTT,
D. SCOTT, Junr.

LURGAN, 4th January, 1877.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD,
Shettleston Ironworks, Glasgow.

Gentlemen,—We have given the Pirn Winding Machines, which we got from you, a very careful trial, and we can bear testimony to their efficiency in working even finer numbers of Yarn than you offered to guarantee them to wind.

The Machines work with satisfaction to the Operatives, and with great ease to the Yarns wound, and have proved to be a considerable saving in cost of process.

We wish you to put in hands for us, and deliver with as little delay as possible, one Machine similar to those we are now working.

Yours truly,
MALCOLM & PENTLAND.

ATLAS CARPET WORKS, HALIFAX,
15th February, 1873.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD,

Gentlemen,—We are perfectly satisfied with the working of the Pirn Winding Machines. We can say, moreover, that in one particular alone, viz., saving in size, we consider the Machine will repay cost in a very few months, besides doing its work well in making a clean and uniform spool.

You can make us another machine same as last.

We are, Gentlemen,
Yours respectfully,
JOHN SHEARD & CO.

ETTRICK MILLS, SELKIRK, N.B.,
6th February, 1873.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD, Glasgow.

Gentlemen,—We have now been working your Weft Winding Machine constantly for about eighteen months, and are well pleased with it. The yarn is laid very regularly on the Pirns and comes freely off, so as to make the web very equal throughout. The Machine is quite as good for winding from the Hank as from the Broach, and for Cheviot as well as Saxony yarns.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servants,
J. & H. BROWN & CO.

PEEL MILL, BLACKBURN,
29th January, 1877.

Messrs. J. & T. BOYD,
Shettleston Iron-Works, near Glasgow.

We have one of your Pirn Winding Machines (Class A.) at work, and like it very much. It does its work well, and in good quantity. It is convenient for the workers, and readily adjusted by them to suit several varieties of work. We consider it superior to any of the Machines we have seen made in this neighbourhood.

J. & F. JOHNSTON.

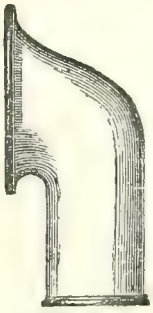
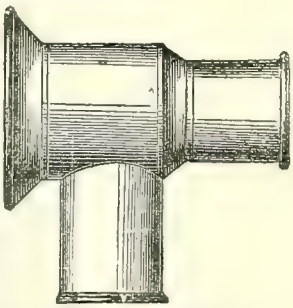
VIEHOFF & VOSS' PATENT VENTILATOR.



The object of these Patent Ventilators is the thorough Ventilation of Stokeholes, Coal Bunkers, Holds, Cabins, or any part of a Building where foul air is likely to accumulate. The principle of their construction is the fact of a vacuum being formed in the perpendicular pipe acting as a suction, carrying off all foul or hot air and dust. The benefits to be derived from these Ventilators have induced many Shipowners to use them, as conducive to health. In cases where they are used, it is beneficial to have an ordinary Ventilator or other means of ventilating forward.



They can be adapted for Railway Carriages and similar purposes, by the attachment of wings, thereby making them self-acting. Prices and further particulars on application.

PATENT

PERFECTED.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS.

TRADE "THE ACME." MARK.

THE attention of the trade is solicited and inspection invited. 'THE ACME' is a machine invented by MR. JULIUS WHITEHEAD, OF HALIFAX (LATE OF DARWEN, LANCASHIRE), a pipe maker of over twenty years' practical experience. An inspection will show.—1. That it is the most simple machine extant, both as to its construction, surroundings, and working. 2. It is adapted to an ordinary shed or single storey building, as no second floor or scaffolding is requisite. 3. It requires no special or costly foundation, and produces perfect pipes. 4. It delivers the pipes SOCKET UPWARDS, and nearly level with the floor; they are thus in proper position for removal and drying. 5. The socket is first pressed, and any reasonable and varying length of tube may be produced without altering the machine. 6. The sockets of the smallest pipes are perfect, and 'THE ACME' will make a number of pipes at one operation with a minimum amount of power. It is specially adapted for producing inverts, elliptical pipes, or other special goods. 7. The labour of 'feeding' is not more than one-half that of other machines: it is in a great measure 'self-feeding.' 8. The same workman starts and stops the machine, and "cuts off," producing better and straighter pipes, at a reduction of 40 per cent. in labour. 9. It is the most simple and strongest machine in the market, and (fair wear and tear excepted) is always in order.

References to firms using 'THE ACME' kindly permitted. It may also be seen in operation at the works of MESSRS. JULIUS WHITEHEAD & CO., BEACON FIRE CLAY WORKS, HALIFAX; OR MESSRS. C. WHITTAKER & CO., ENGINEERS, ACCRINGTON, LANCASHIRE, SOLE LICENSED MAKERS, will furnish all particulars as to prices, delivery, &c., &c. N.B.—The ordinary Vertical Machines altered to the principle of 'THE ACME' at a reasonable cost.

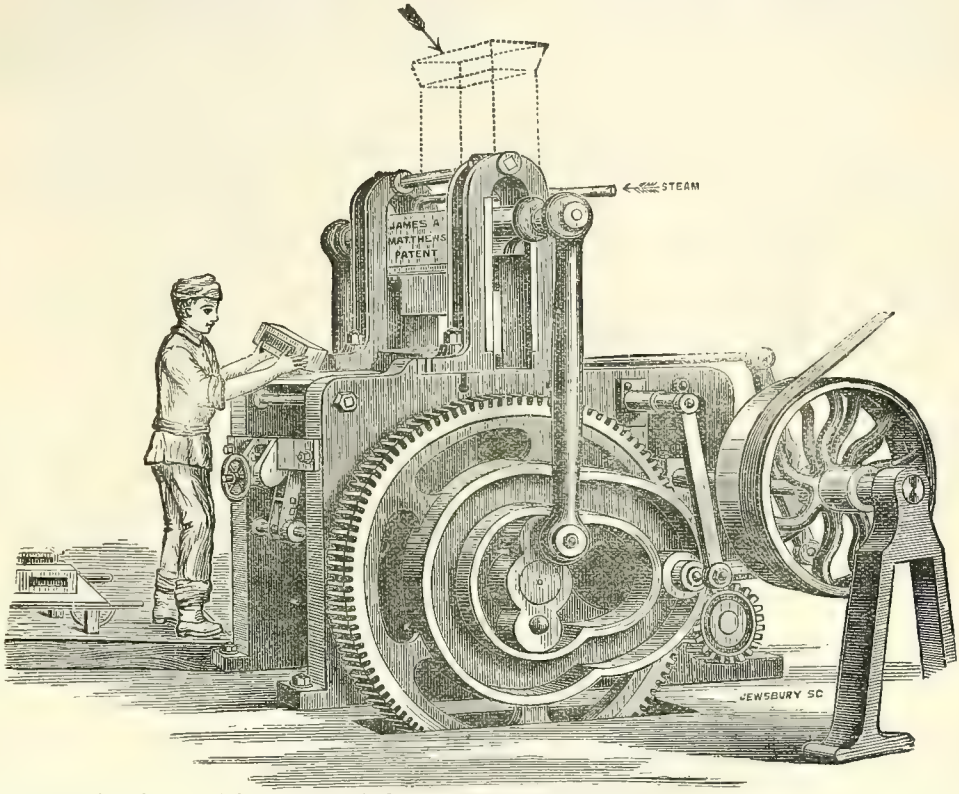
JAMES A. MATTHEWS'

PATENT SEMI-DRY

BRICK MAKING MACHINE.

C. WHITTAKER & CO., SOLE MAKERS.



THIS machine is specially designed for making bricks from ground clay from a mill, with a perforated bottom, or from an ordinary mill with an elevator, and revolving riddle, so as to make all the particles of one consistency throughout, this being done with no more moisture than is found in a natural face of clay, shale, or fire clay; or with no more moisture than is necessary to hold the particles together when they are tightly pressed in the hand. The prepared clay is fed into the trunk of the machine from the riddle or elevator, where it is formed into a properly-shaped block, with all the angles as perfectly shaped as a planed block of wood, being subjected to a very great pressure, and delivered at the front of the machine, ready for walling at once in the kiln, at the rate of 14 PER MINUTE OR 840 PER HOUR.

The material lying in the hill can be formed into bricks and walled in the kiln ready for burning in ten minutes' time. Two men getting at the face, one man filling at the mill-pan, and one boy taking off from the machine, will be all the hands required. This machine is well arranged for forming blocks of cement, or any other material of like particles.

DIES CAN BE INSERTED IN THE ABOVE MACHINE BY WHITTAKER'S EXPANDING MOULD, TO MAKE ALMOST ANY SHAPE OR SIZE OF BRICKS REQUIRED.

TO ARCHITECTS, BUILDERS, PAINTERS, AND OTHERS.

The superiority of these Stains over every preparation of the kind for Staining Deal, Pine, &c., has been long established by the marked preference shown for them by Architects and others interested in the decorations to which they are applicable

AMONG THEIR PECULIAR QUALITIES ARE THE FOLLOWING:

They are Transparent, while those generally mixed by Painters are Opaque, consisting of insoluable matter, and as a natural consequence obscure the Grain and feathery appearance of the Woods instead of bringing them out with effect as Swinburn's Stains are found to do.

Their Fluidity and Freedom from Sediment renders cracking and peeling from the surface impossible.

By using Swinburn's Stains the cost and process of Graining is dispensed with, as well as Four Coats of Paint, necessary previously to Graining.

They dry quickly.

Their application is most easy. They require less labour to apply them and cover more surface than any other stains.

They are preventive against dry rot.

These Stains have been in use for twenty years.

SWINBURN'S TRANSPARENT STAINS FOR WOODS.

SWINBURN'S STAINS are prepared in 9 colours, viz.:—Extra Deep, Deep, Middle and Pale Oak, Satinwood, Mahogany, Rosewood and Walnut, also a Black Stain. These Stains being thus arranged, are available for Ecclesiastical and other Buildings.

PRICES—6/-, 7/-, AND 7/6 PER GALLON.

They are Manufactured and Sold by

ADVERTISING IN SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW
NORTH BRITISH DAILY MAIL

ESTABLISHED IN 1847.

Is published as a large double-sheet paper, daily, and has a large and constantly-increasing circulation throughout Scotland, especially Glasgow, Edinburgh, Greenock, Paisley, and the South and West. Rents from Her Majesty's Postmaster General a special telegraph wire between its Glasgow and London offices, so as to ensure a full supply of the latest news.

The N. B. DAILY MAIL is read throughout every portion of Scotland. The City of Glasgow and the Burghs immediately surrounding it comprise a population of about 700,000; while the four adjoining Counties contain over a third of the whole population of Scotland. But large as is the proportion of the entire population of Scotland concentrated within the District in which the N. B. DAILY MAIL circulates, the proportion of its available wealth thus concentrated is infinitely larger. Those most familiar with Glasgow know best the large numbers in which the N. B. DAILY MAIL permeates every part of the District, and how great is its social and political influence with every class of the community.

NOTICE TO LONDON ADVERTISERS.

Advertisements too late for post may be sent free by the MAIL'S special Telegraph wire from the MAIL Office, 140 Fleet street, London.

Publishing Offices, GLASGOW, GREENOCK AND PAISLEY.

GLASGOW WEEKLY MAIL.

THE GLASGOW WEEKLY MAIL has by far the largest circulation of any paper published outside London, and even among the Metropolitan Weekliies there are not more than two or three which can boast of an equal number of readers. The circulation of THE GLASGOW WEEKLY MAIL is constantly increasing, and already averages over 180,000 copies.

This Circulation is of great importance to those who wish to advertise their goods in the thickly-populated districts in Scotland. In some towns where there are two or three Local Papers, there are more "WEEKLY MAILS" sold than the combined circulation of such, while in Glasgow the sale is much larger than that of any other newspaper.

SOLE LICENSEES for SCOTLAND for the LAVENDER LAMP,

Suitable for Pit Heads and Underground Works, Lime Works, Brick Yards, Chemical Works, Harbours, Railway Works, Sidings, Loading Banks, Builders' Yards, Cranes, Moulding Shops, Engineering Works, Railway Stations, Wrecks at Sea, &c. Its chief novelty consists in an improved mode of providing a draught or blast of air in the lamp, which enables it to give a greater light with the heavier class of hydro-carbon oils than has hitherto been found practicable, and this, too, at a very small cost. The Lamp consists of a Glass Lantern, which is made of various shapes and sizes, according to requirements: it has a funnel or chimney at the top, into which is introduced a jet of steam or blast, about one sixteenth of an inch diameter; the object of the steam is to create a partial vacuum in the Lantern, so that the air is drawn by suction through the Burner of the Lamp, causing an almost complete combustion of the oil. A 4-inch Wick will give a light equal to 600 sperm candles for 1½d. per hour. The Lamp has been found to give a light at a cost of 1d. per hour, equal to that which could be supplied by gas at 4d. per hour, thus effecting a saving which cannot fail to be a very powerful addition to the other recommendations of the invention.

On the occasion of the visit of the British Association to Glasgow, in September last, the Lamp was commended by no less an authority than Sir John Hawkshaw, who then expressed his belief that it was well fitted for the object in view.

2nd. That their oils are entirley free from acid and alkali, and will not corrode or otherwise injure machinery, as animal and vegetable oils are apt to do.

3rd. That they will not gum or clog any machinery, but will rather keep clean and bright all journals and bearings on which they may be employed.

4th. That, with very high firing points, they are free from any tendency to generate spontaneous combustion, which other oils tend more or less to induce.

5th. That, in respect to price, they are cheaper than any oil of equal quality which can be got to do the same work.

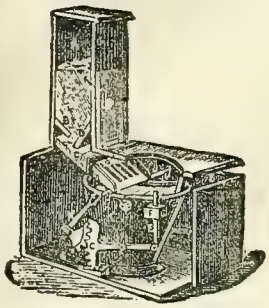
THE BRITISH SANITARY CO.'S

SELF-ACTING EARTH CLOSET.

"Thou shalt not pollute Rivers or Watercourses."—MOSAIC TRADITION. The Rivers Pollution Act, 1876.

SECTION OF CLOSET SHEWING ARRANGEMENT.



It is not more than twenty years since the Deodorising Earth Closet was first introduced into this country, and already it is in use in nearly every town and village in the kingdom, and indeed over the civilised world.

The British Sanitary Company with confidence recommend their New Patent Earth Closet to Architects, Builders, Sanitary Engineers, and the Public generally as the most perfect appliance of the kind yet produced.

They call attention to a new feature in this Sanitary Appliance, namely, that in their Patent Self-Acting Earth Closet, when earthy material is used, it may be in a semi-damp condition. In all Earth Closets hitherto brought before the public, it has been indispensable that the earth used be not only in a state of fine division, but of perfect dryness. To obtain this not only involves labour and expense, but strong objections are urged against the Closets on the score of dust arising when they are in use. The British Sanitary Co.'s Closet has been designed to obviate these objections, and to induce the more general adoption of the Dry Earth Closet both in town and country districts. To have an abundant supply of material at all times at hand, it is only necessary to store up in dry weather in an open shed or well ventilated cellar a few loads of earth from the neighbouring field or garden. If the earth is of a stony character, it must be passed through a quarter inch riddle. In a few days the surface of this heap will be sufficiently dry for using in the Closet. Every discharge of earth into the Pail is sufficient not only for the purpose of deodorising, but also provides for the exigencies of removal and storage in the garden or outhouse till the material is required as a fertilizing agent.

BLEACHERS' BLUE,

BOLTON, LANCASHIRE, ENGLAND.

This Blue is adapted to all the conditions for which a Shading Blue is needed, as it can be supplied any shade required, which shades are not changed by Sours, or in boiling, or in any process of drying, nor can they be discharged by chemic. These Shades are durable in theory, as they resist those agencies that have been substituted for the actinism of the sun as a much quicker method of Bleaching; this also can be proved in practice, by exposing its shades to the sun's rays along with those from other Blues in general use. Samples of Hand Shaded Fents will be forwarded to gentlemen in the trade for inspection and testing. Thus this Blue is recommended on its own merits.

This Blue is extensively used by the principle Bleaching Firms in Lancashire, &c.

Extract from "Iron," July 19th, 1873.

"Enamelled Hollow-ware.—We have recently had an opportunity of examining some specimens of this speciality from the works of Messrs. JOSEPH & JESSE SIDDONS, West Bromwich. Their enamel is of a beautiful white, without the grey speckled appearance observed in common articles. It is also very hard: to be exact, it is about as hard as ordinary window glass, being, like it, scratched by quartz. But its great superiority lies in the fact that it is free from compounds of lead, arsenic and antimony, all of which are poisonous. We have exposed one of Messrs. SIDDONS' enamel saucepans to the severe test of boiling in it caustic alkali, as well as hydrochloric acid, and find that, as regarded its power to withstand the action of these agents, it was superior to specimens of similar ware by three other makers which were submitted to the same treatment. One of these last was even acted upon by common washing soda, a result beyond our worst anticipations. The bearing of these facts upon the domestic use of vinegar and soda, and the preparation of jams and preserves, is too obvious to need more than pointing out. Messrs. SIDDONS have also succeeded in lining iron water or steam pipes with the same enamel, making a tube which, for cleanliness, will nearly rival glass."

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhœa, Spasms, Colic, and Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a Dose of CHLORODYNE.

Trade Mark.

CHLORODYNE is a liquid, taken in drops. It invariably relieves pain of whatever kind; creates a calm, refreshing sleep; allays irritation of the nervous system when all other remedies fail; leaving no bad effects like opium or laudanum; and can be taken when no other medicine can be tolerated. Its value in saving life in infancy is not easily estimated,—a few drops will subdue the irritation of teething, prevent and arrest Convulsions, cure Whooping Cough, Spasms, and Flatus at once.

Among invalids, it allays the pain of Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, &c. It soothes the weary achings of Consumption, relieves the soreness of the Chest, Cough, and Expectoration, and cures all Chest Affections, such as Asthma, Bronchitis, Palpitations, &c. It checks Diarrhœa, Alvine Discharges, or Spasms; and Colics of the Intestines, &c.

The extensive demand for this remedy, known as Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, by the Medical Profession, Hospitals, Dispensaries—Civil, Military, and Naval—and Families, especially guarantees that this statement of its extreme importance and value is a bonâ fide one, and worthy of the attention of all.

CAUTION.—Always ask for "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," and beware of spurious compounds or imitations. Dr. Browne placed the Recipe for making "Chlorodyne" in the hands of Mr. Davenport ONLY; consequently there can be no other Manufacturer. The genuine bears the words, "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government Stamp of each bottle.

*The following is an extract from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor in the late Chlorodyne Chancery suit—*BROWNE & DAVENPORT v. FREEMAN:—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of Chlorodyne, that the statements of the defendant Freeman were deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say that they had been sworn to. Eminent hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See THE TIMES, July 13th, 1864.

TESTIMONIALS.

Earl Russell has graciously favoured J. T. Davenport with the following:—"Extract of a despatch from Mr. Webb, H. B. M.'s Consul at Manilla, dated Sept. 17, 1864:—

"'The remedy most efficacious in its effects (in Epidemic Cholera) has been found to be CHLORODYNE, and with a small quantity given to me by Dr. Burke I have saved several lives.'"

 Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1864.

Extracts from the GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.

1st Stage, or Premonitory.—In this stage the remedy acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

2nd Stage, or that of Vomiting and Purging.—In this stage the remedy possesses great power, more than any other we are acquainted with; two or three doses being sufficient.

3rd Stage, or Collapse.—In all cases restoring the Pulse. So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D.

I have no hesitation in stating that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhœa, and other diseases, and am perfectly satisfied with the results.

Dr. M'MILLMAN, of New Galloway, Scotland.

I consider it the most valuable medicine known.

G. HAYWARD, ESQ., Surgeon, Stow-on-ye-Wold.

I am now using Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, with marvellous good effects in allaying inveterate sickness in pregnancy.

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have.

Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta.

Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhœa.

C. V. RIDOUT, Esq., Surgeon, Egham.

As an Astringent in severe Diarrhœa and an Anti-spasmodic in Colic with Cramps in the Abdomen, the relief is instantaneous. As a Sedative in Neuralgia and Tic-Douloureux its effects were very remarkable. In Uterine Affections I have found it extremely valuable.

From J. M'GREGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P., London, Late Staff-Surgeon to H. M. F.

November 26, 1859.

Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE for the last three years, in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Douloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acted as a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions.

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steam-ship Great Eastern.

I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect.

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON & Co., Horncastle.

We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other Sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after-effects.

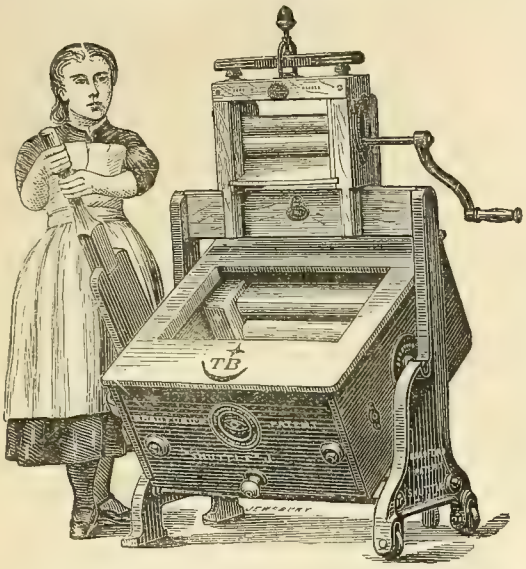
THOMAS BRADFORD & Co.'s
JOURNAL OF SPECIALITIES
FOR 1877.

BRADFORD'S NEW PATENT "SHUTTLE" WASHING MACHINE.—It is with much pleasure that we are now able, in consequence of recent important improvements, to recommend the "Shuttle" Washing Machine as the most saleable and satisfactory at the price ever offered to the public.



* "Shuttle" J, £3. 15s. Od., with "Acorn" A Wringer, 27s. extra.
The above illustration represents a girl fourteen years old who without fatigue does the washing for a family of six persons.

The name of this machine suggests at once its operative principle, that of a "Shuttle" or "Shuttle Dash," which upon the slightest oscillation of the lever handle (almost without an effort) is self-acting, the user standing in the easiest possible upright position, operating at will either in the gentlest manner upon the most delicate and costly lace, or—according to the angle of working and the increased momentum of the Shuttle Dash—upon the heaviest fabric, with certain cleansing effect; the "advancing wave" of suds following up the stroke of the dash, and the "receding or return wave" of suds constantly changing the position of the clothes in the most remarkable manner, that only needs to be seen for a moment to convince, and for the machine to be used for ten minutes to satisfy the most prejudiced person.

"Shuttle" J can be conveniently used with any ordinary Wringing and Mangling Machine, which so many already possess, and when its value becomes known no owner of a Wringing and Mangling Machine will be without one, and it is with this view that we offer it at the lowest possible price, fully assured that a sterling, well-made Washing Machine that will do good work for 10 or 15 years, without ever needing repair, is what the public want, and which we have endeavoured to supply.

"Shuttle" J or K will wash twelve men's shirts at once, thrown in—equally, or not—on each side of the dash, or two counterpanes, or two blankets; or it will wash a single small article on one side, and a large counterpane on the other side, of the improved AUTOMATIC DASH.

"Shuttle" K as a combined Machine is very remarkable for its exceeding compactness. We believe we may say, and we hope our experience entitles us to full credit, that it combines in a higher degree more of all that is excellent in quality, and convenient in working, than any machine we have seen at the price. "Shuttle" K will pass through a doorway 2ft. 3in. wide: when desired the washing compartment can be readily removed from the framework and placed wherever convenient, leaving only an ordinary Wringing and Mangling Machine.

Although occupying so little space—2ft. 3in. square—the washing compartment, being directly under the rollers, forms a convenient folding table, both sides of which can be reached by the user, without change of position.

The arrangement for wringing the clothes is very handy, no slop or waste of suds being possible, and for emptying the suds, the water plug is the height of an ordinary bucket.

The "Shuttle" Washing Machine is specially adapted FOR EXPORT, the Washing Compartment being made in Galvanised Iron as well as wood, and can be packed in lots of three—the frames separate—they are exceptionally durable, and are so simple and easy to manage that any negro, without instruction, can wash efficiently, even with soft cold water and soap—a result that has never previously been satisfactorily attained with a Washing Machine.

It should be clearly understood that the "Shuttle" Washing Machine we have now introduced, after three years of continuous experiment, was undertaken by us in accordance with the expressed wish of many of our old Agents, "that we should manufacture a combined Machine, to sell at about six guineas, adapted to the requirements of a small household;" and is not intended to supersede our universally-known and justly-celebrated PATENT "VOWEL" WASHING MACHINE, the marked superiority of which over every other Washing Machine has been signally and universally acknowledged, by the private testimony, and letters of approval of many thousands of purchasers from all parts of the world, and also by the public awards of 160 PRIZE MEDALS and First Prizes, which include the international MEDALS of LONDON, DUBLIN, COLOGNE, HAMBURG,

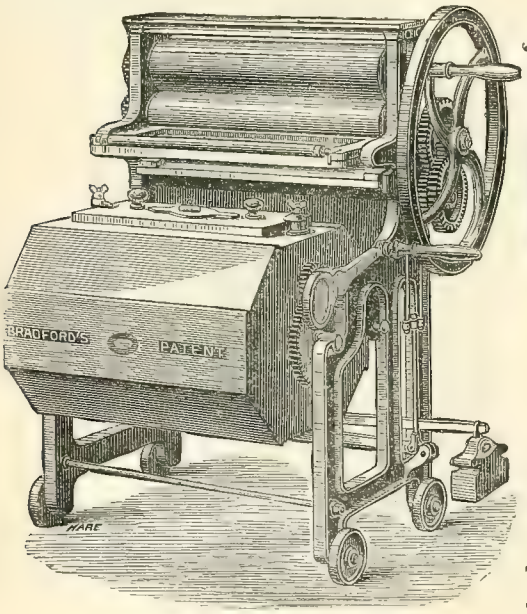
PARIS, VIENNA, and BRUSSELS, and also the only Prize Medal awarded by the Manchester Society for the Promotion of Scientific Industry, presented personally by the Earl of Derby.

beg to announce also, that from this date the prices of the two most useful and best known FAMILY Machines, "Vowel" A and "Vowel" E, will be reduced, the former to £3. 15s. 0d., and the latter to £8. 15s. 0d., carriage paid, which we have no doubt those who know the singular value of these two machines, will note with satisfaction.

The superior quality and finish of the "Vowel" Washing Machines will be fully maintained.

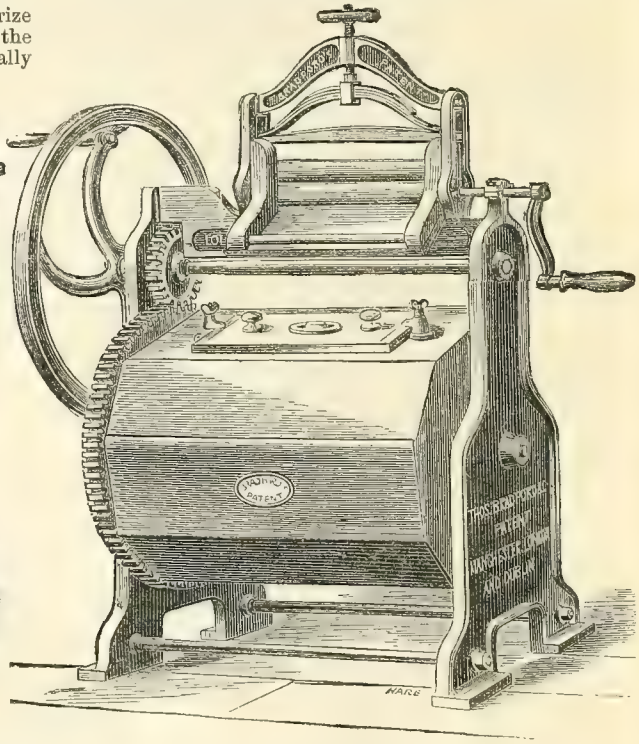
The late Emperor NAPOLEON, after minutely examining, personally working, and for half an hour witnessing the operation of a "Vowel" Washing Machine purchased by the Empress Eugenie for the Tuileries, expressed himself in the following words:—"I am extremely well pleased with the Machine; it is ingenious, simple, and very easy to work."

Mrs. PEDLEY, the well-known writer on Domestic Economy, writes in the Queen:—"The result of my experience is, that the Washing Machine in question (the 'Vowel') ranks next in domestic utility to the sewing machine; than which I can give no higher praise. Needlework by hand and washing at home are the most tedious, and to a certain extent the most laborious, kinds of work required to be done by servants. They are also the most expensive, if not in actual pecuniary outlay, in the length of time necessary for their execution, rendering it imperative, where machinery is not employed, to keep more servants than would otherwise be required to do ordinary household work. I have no hesitation in saying that with a first-class sewing machine and one of Bradford's Washing Machines, one, if not two, servants, might be reduced from the number of most establishments, and that the same labour, which is but indifferently done by hand would be perfectly executed by the machines. This, at the time when servants are scarce, expensive, and inefficient, is a fact that should be taken into consideration by all persons who value peace of mind and pecuniary economy."



* "Vowel" E, £8. 15s.

Simultaneously, however, with this introduction of he Improved Patent "Shuttle" Washing Machine we



"Vowel" A 2, £15.

* See General Catalogue.

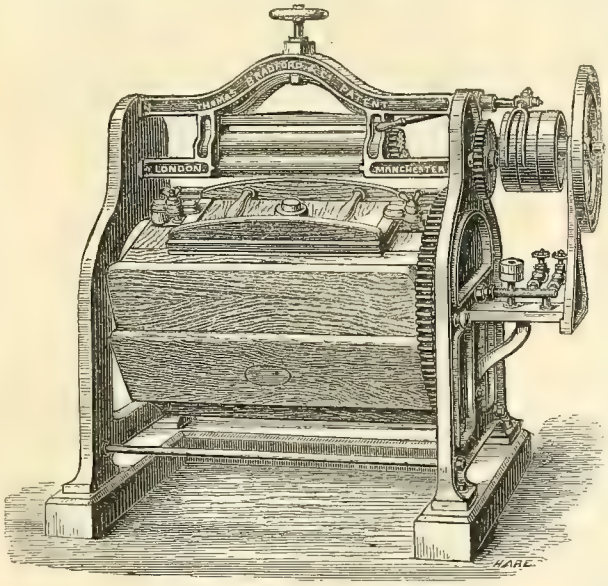
OUR PATENT "VOWEL" A 2 is a strongly made machine, with washing compartment to wash from thirty to forty shirts; the wringing machine has a galvanized iron frame and india-rubber rollers, with elliptic spring pressure; it is specially suited for hotels, schools, convents, and public laundries, in a large number of which it is giving great satisfaction. It can be worked either by a woman or by a strong lad.

The following reports from the Masters of two large Unions, will give some idea of the value of this machine:

"During the Christmas quarter of 1875 when there was no machine 300 lbs. of soap were used in the workhouse, for washing purposes. In the corresponding period last year, when the machine had been obtained, only 194 lbs. of the same article had been required. During the Christmas quarter of 1875, 416 lbs. of soda were used, while in the same period last year only 244 lbs. were required. The other advantages of the machine were that the clothes were well done and that less labour was required. The machine would soon pay for itself."

"There is much less 'wear and tear' by the machine than by the ordinary method. Three or four not very able-bodied women could, without working very hard, wash for a house of 800 inmates, and the wringing operation is so perfect that the clothes are turned out nearly dry; this is an advantage, particularly in winter, when it takes a considerable time to dry the clothes. It is easy to see from that we do not require a large over stock of sheets, rugs, &c., as you must require where there are slower methods of washing and drying. But, besides the saving in wear and tear, and the great saving of labour, the consumption of soap in this house is now only very little over one half what it used to be. The quantity formerly used was 50 or 60 lbs. weekly, and now it is only 25 or 30 lbs. Thus 12 or 14 cwt. of soap are saved for the last twelve months, which at 26s. per cwt. has paid off the expense of the machine in the first instance. I have not the slightest hesitation in recommending the machine as most useful both in a pecuniary point of view and for its great convenience and utility in a public institution."

We would respectfully solicit an inspection by all interested in Steam Laundries of our NEW PATTERN "Vowel" A 7, "Vowel" A 8, and "Vowel" A 10 Washing Machines, for STEAM POWER, which are remarkable for their massive strength and singular compactness, and with which a boy of 16 is able to wash from 80 to 150 men's shirts every fifteen or twenty minutes.

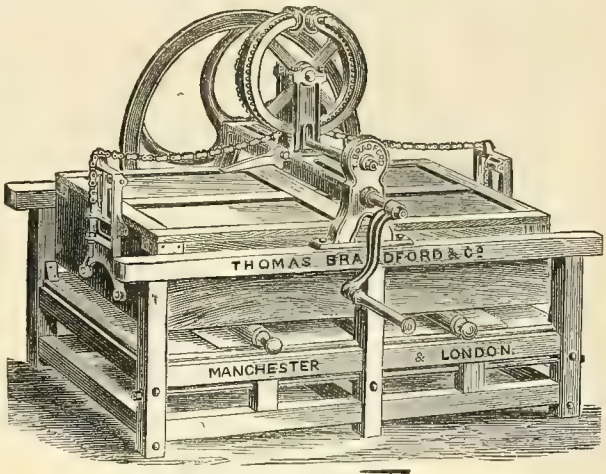


*"Vowel" A 7, for Steam Power.

We would simply advise that the Machines be seen at work—for which ample opportunity is afforded by us—when their thorough efficiency in washing every class of work for hospital, asylum, workhouse, or prison, will be seen. They require remarkably little steam power to work them, and use very little soap, in consequence of its being so perfectly utilised.

These Machines have been largely adopted in public and private steam laundries, repaying their cost in a few months where the work was constant; and the purchasers in many instances have unhesitatingly expressed their regret that, after the favourable evidence of others who had them in use, they were not more prompt in obtaining these machines, and thereby avoiding a considerable loss weekly.

The "Vowel" Machine will wash every kind of work, and for finery we assert its decided superiority over every other method for insuring thorough cleanliness (with proper management) and thorough purity of colour.



* "Premier" Box Mangle.

A "PREMIER" BOX MANGLE is indispensable in all large establishments, and a permanently valuable institution in any large household where convenient room is available. This really first-class Mangle has established for itself a European reputation, and T. B. and Co. regret having to caution intending purchasers against being misled by similar illustrations to the above, published by other Box Mangle makers, the article supplied being entirely different, and possessing none of the essential qualifications of the "Premier," either in the construction of woodwork or ironwork. Every intending purchaser is respectfully invited to inspect and note the superior construction of the "Premier" Box Mangle, and before purchasing to see that Bradford's name is upon the ironwork.

CAUTION.—The word "Premier" has recently been assumed by other makers of Wringing and Mangling Machines for obvious reasons.

After considerable experience we have the greatest confidence in recommending a trial (free) of our

to every large hotel keeper, clubhouse, or laundryman. They impart a splendid finish to table linen, and also finish bedding, and a large proportion of body linen without the flat iron.

One of the most important advantages of this calender is, that in case of crease or overlap the bottom roller can be instantaneously lowered and the article liberated from pressure, so that it can be properly straightened before being passed through the rollers.

* See General Catalogue.

* No. 68 Calender, £27. 10s. (See page 3.)

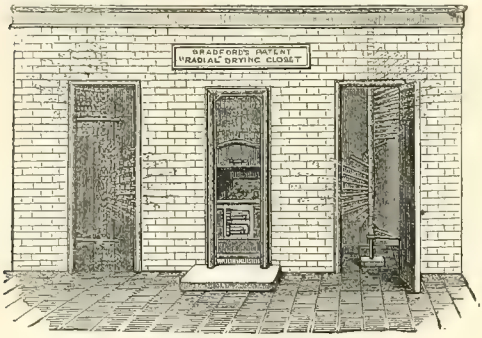
AMUSING TESTIMONY TO BRADFORD'S WASHING AND CALENDERING MACHINERY.—"A steamer from Grimsby, the linen belonging to which had been washed at the Steam Laundry fitted up with Bradford and Co.'s Machinery, went on her voyage to Antwerp, and the officers of customs whilst searching came upon the ship's linen, and so glossy and perfect was the finish of the various articles that they were supposed to be new, and were actually seized as contraband goods and taken away to the Custom House."—Hull News, Jan. 13, 1877.

BRADFORD'S "RADIAL" DRYING CLOSET.—The illustration shows elevation of two 6ft. "Radial" Horses, as enclosed at one end of an ironing room, forming a complete closet, with stove for heating flat irons and drying clothes by one small fire simultaneously, the drying occupying about twenty minutes.



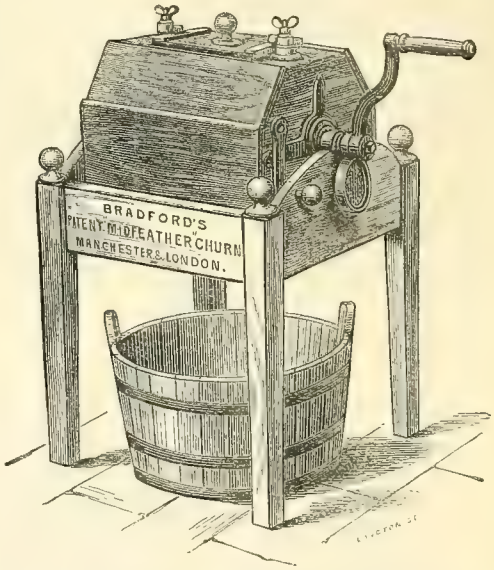
* Bradford's "Radial" Drying Closet.

We have fitted up a large number with the most satisfactory results, and for private family or hotel laundries we now recommend them as the most compact, efficient, and economical Drying Closets that are made.

They are also a valuable auxiliary drying and airing closet for large public establishments.

BRADFORD'S PATENT "MID-FEATHER" CHURN.—The New Registered Frame, which is made of selected hard wood, and polished, will instantly commend itself for its strength and lightness, its convenience for emptying both the butter and buttermilk, as a tub or large pan can be placed underneath (see Illustration). The ease of working is remarkable, the centres being burnished, and work in lignum vitæ bearings.

The "Midfeather" of this hitherto excellent and Royal Agricultural Society's Prize Churn is now supplemented by an important additional Patented Improvement, consisting of a series of angular breakers, which, in conjunction with the "Midfeather" Dash, produces a most remarkably successful churning agitation, with the least expenditure of manual labour, so much so that the experience of the last twelve months, guided by nearly 20 years' close practical application to the study of Churns and Churning, we consider fairly justifies us in recommending it as the best Revolving or Barrel Churn that is made, and which we with confidence assert a single trial by anyone of practical experience will incontestibly prove.



* "Midfeather" Churn, with New Registered Frame.

The recent Patent Improvements made in the "Midfeather" Churn enable us to recommend the largest sizes with the same confidence as the smaller ones. The difficulty with the larger sizes (before the improvements) being that the "Midfeather" principle was really too powerful—that is, that the concussion with a large body of milk was so great as to be beyond proper control. This has now been modified and remedied by the combined action, or, rather, reaction of the patent angular breakers, and even the largest size is so regulated that it can be worked with comparative ease by two lads; and, as a Power Churn, for either Horse Gear or Steam Power, it is unquestionably the best ever introduced.

The daily trials of churns at the late Dairy Show, held at the Agricultural Hall, London, October, 1876, were decidedly in favour of the "Midfeather" Churn, both as to time, quality, and quantity of Butter produced from the same Cream, which was carefully mixed, and furnished in equal quantities to each maker's churn.

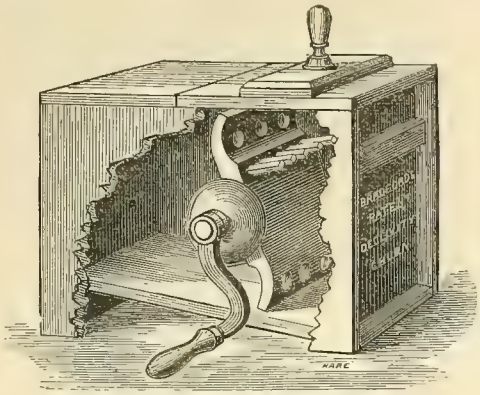
As we now make the "Midfeather" Churn one of our specialities, we respectfully recommend a trial of it, for which we deliver it carriage free to any Railway Station, and entirely subject to approval after such trial.

BRADFORD'S PATENT "DECLIVITY" BOX CHURN.—The name of the "Declivity" Churn is suggestive of its peculiar and patented operative principle.



* "Declivity" Box Churn.

The bottom of the churn declines from left to right, so that while the Milk or Cream is broken and dashed upwards—in a manner peculiar to this Churn—the return or downward fall of the Milk or Cream creates the most desirable concussive agitation for making Butter.

The half cover over the top of incline, where the Cream is dashed, is a fixture, thereby effectually preventing the slightest escape or leakage.

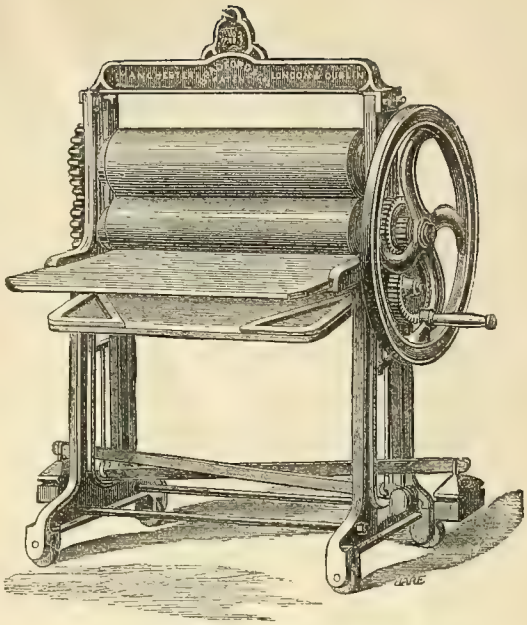
The movable half of cover affords ample space for taking out the dash and cleansing the interior of the Churn.

After churning, the butter is cleared of the buttermilk and formed into a compact roll, by the dash and incline, in a most effectual manner—also peculiar to this Churn.

The material used and workmanship displayed in the "Declivity" Churn are superior to anything previously introduced into the manufacture of Box Churns.

CAUTION.—Visitors to Agricultural and other Exhibitions are respectfully cautioned against being misled by the unscrupulous copying of certain features of design of many of our Family Machines, which are also painted exactly in imitation of them, for the sole purpose of so misleading; numerous instances having come to our knowledge of parties having not only purchased such Machines, but entered into business details concerning ourselves alone, with such other makers under the impression that they were dealing or conversing with our own representatives or agents.

BRADFORD'S COLOURS.—Light and Dark Maroon Paint, as used by us without deviation for twenty years, and by which peculiar colours Bradford's Machines have been universally recognised, are now exactly copied by other makers for obvious reasons.



* No. 1 Wringing and Mangling Machine.

"Perfect as a Wringer, unequalled as a Mangle."

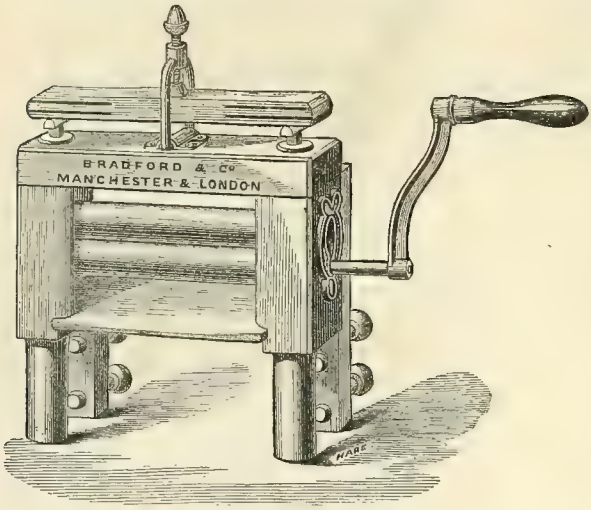
The original design of this universally celebrated machine having been shamelessly copied and painted in Bradford's well-known combination of colour, light and dark maroon, to sell to dealers (not Bradford's Agents), purchasers will oblige by carefully noting the number and name upon each machine before purchasing.

* No. 85 Wringing and Mangling Machine.

BRADFORD'S IMPROVED PATENT WRINGING AND MANGLING MACHINE, WITH ADJUSTABLE COMPOUND LEVER AND SPRING.—This Machine is becoming equally popular with our celebrated Lever and Weight Machine, and we have the fullest confidence in recommending our Patent Adjustment of Rollers as an important feature.

* See General Catalogue.

BRADFORD'S PATENT "ACORN" INDIA-RUBBER WRINGER.—This Wringing Machine, with best Vulcanised India-rubber Rollers, has become for some years past universally recognised as the most practical and durable, and has now consequently a number of imitations, in form only, without its essential excellence, the patented pressure link, which compensates itself, and relieves both rollers and linen from undue strain.



* "Acorn" C Wringer, 40s.

All ordinary articles can be wrung by "Acorn" A, without regulating the pressure, as the patent lancewood spring yields sufficiently. With "Acorn" C anything can be efficiently wrung, from a lace collar to a counterpane, without any alteration of the pressure, as its increased size admits of increased strength, beyond the power of injury by any washerwoman, and we at all times prefer to recommend it for general family work, the extra outlay in price being decided economy. If, however, the machine is only intended to be used for wringing body clothes, or starching (for which they are admirable), then the smaller and much lighter "Acorn" A will be found all that can be desired. "Acorn" C is the size we always recommend for use with the "Vowel" A Washing Machine.

BRADFORD'S TRADE MARK.—To protect ourselves and the public, our Trade Mark—T. B. over a Crescent—will in future appear prominently upon all our manufactures, in addition to our name and address, or those of our appointed Agents, which, we trust, will be carefully noted by intending purchasers of our Washing, Wringing, and Mangling Machines.

LOCAL AGRICULTURAL SHOWS, AND THE PRIZES AND PRIZE MEDALS AWARDED BY THEM.—We are still constantly being asked, by Agents and intending purchasers, why we have discontinued to exhibit at these Shows for the last few years. Our answer to the first is, that our Machines are so well known, we find it better to leave the trade of such localities to our local Agents; and to the latter we answer, that our experience has been conclusive that the indiscriminate awarding of prizes at many local Agricultural Shows was calculated more to mislead than to guide the purchasing public, as they too frequently afforded no criterion of merit; and whenever, as exhibitors, we felt it our duty to question the propriety of placing machines which our practical experience assured us were comparatively useless, upon the same footing—so far as the awards—with machines of proved practical value, we have frequently been met with the rejoinder, "Oh, you have prizes enough; let somebody else have a turn."

TO THOSE WHO KEEP FOWLS, DOGS, OR PIGS, OR CULTIVATE A GARDEN.—BRADFORD'S PATENT BONE MILL, recently greatly improved, price £5. 0s. 0d., carriage paid. The opinion of all who are now using this Bone Mill, in its improved form, is, that it need not be further improved, as it entirely fulfils all the conditions so long desired to make a really useful Bone Mill for hand power.

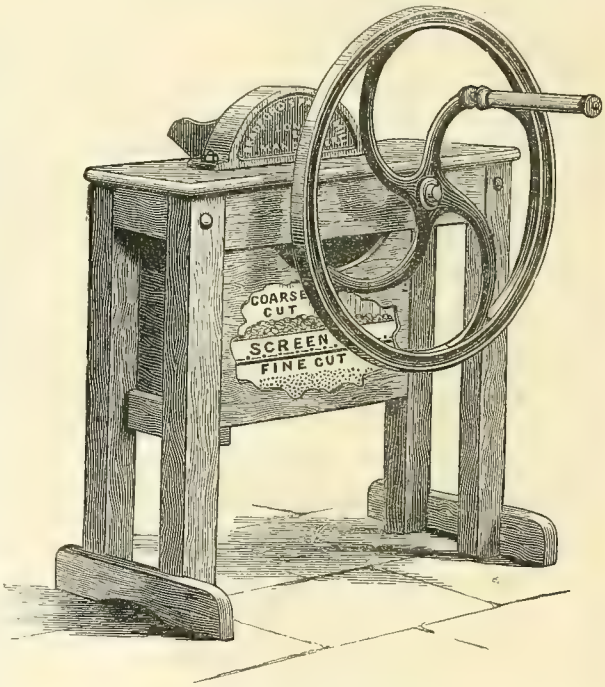
All Purchasers of this Bone Mill in its first form are at liberty to return it to us, and we will have it either re-made or replaced with a new one, free of charge, except carriage.

Finding, by costly experience with the various sizes we made upon the introduction of this Mill in its original form, that the medium size was the most practical, we devoted ourselves to perfecting this size only, entirely remodelling it, greatly increasing its strength of construction and working power, and, by an improvement in the formation of the Disc Wheel, to which are secured with absolute firmness three Cutters instead of two—a steady, continuous cutting and crushing action is maintained with ordinary hand power, and all liability to breakage overcome.

One man can both turn and feed this Bone Mill, but a man and a boy will, of course, get through more work, and more conveniently.

We are permitted to publish the following:—

A Purchaser writes:—"I have thoroughly tested the capabilities of your New Bone Mill, and am fully satisfied with it. No kind of bones seem to come amiss to it, and my fowls and pigs and dogs are now thriving upon 'marrow and fatness' which, but for your Mill, would have been lost to them. I have been for years on the lookout for a portable Bone Mill, which should combine efficiency with strength of construction, and yours in every particular supplies the desideratum."

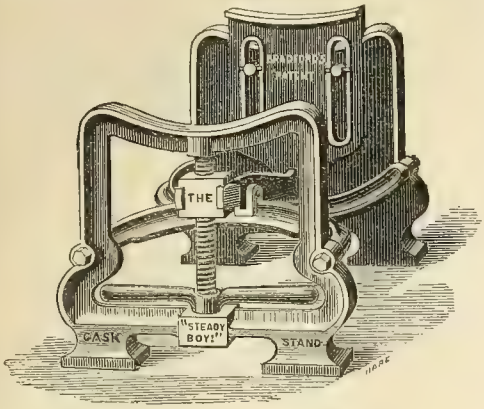


* Bradford's Patent Bone Mill.

Another Purchaser also writes:—"The more I use it the more I value it. My method is to pass the bones bodily through the Mill three or four times, and then give them to my fowls—for dogs, once through will be ample—I find the fowls leave verylittle unappropriated. I have no doubt that they are in far better condition, being in confinement, than they would be if deprived of the phosphatic and other nutritious ingredients which they get from the bones.

* See General Catalogue.

"Fowls are greatly insectivorous, and by giving them bones in due proportion, properly prepared for their use, we supply them with ingredients for digestion and assimilation similar, in several characteristics, to the food which they would get if at liberty, and catering for themselves."

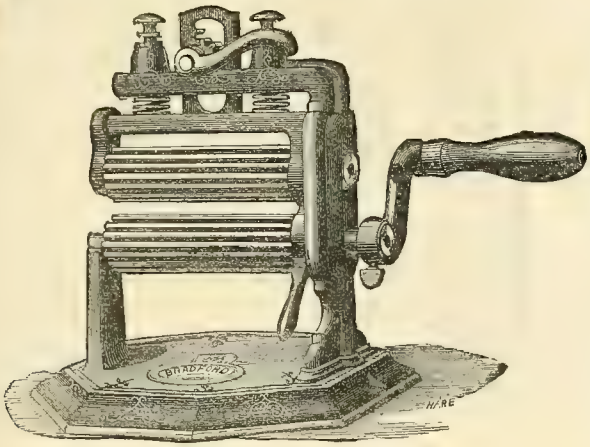


* "Steady Boy" Cask Stand.

This Cask Stand is well worthy of the name given to it, possessing, as its name implies, "the essential excellence" for the purpose intended.

Before use, the back tilt is flush and solid with the strong cast-iron framework, and as soon as the cask—of whatever size or weight—is placed or centred upon it, for which its massive construction affords a solid base, the tilt at the back can be raised with ease by turning the handle in front with the thumb and finger only; the steady movement of the square-chased screw avoiding the possibility of the liquor being shaken or in any way disturbed, which the rack, spring, or cam, as applied to all other cask stands, fails to accomplish.

A trial of the "Steady Boy" Cask Stand will at once prove its great superiority.



* "Norwood" Goffering Machine.

No Goffering Machine hitherto made can be compared to the "Norwood" for efficiency, and it has entirely superseded all others in the principal London laundries.

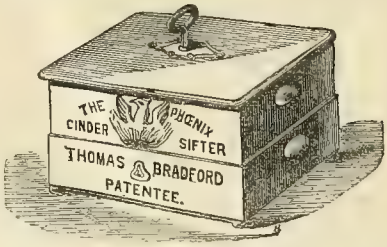
No laundress who has much finery to get up should be without one, as it repays its cost in a few weeks.

A greater variety of work can be done by it than by any other fluting process.

The "Norwood" is much valued in private families. Goffering can be done without stint, because done so quickly and with so little trouble by thi machine.

The top roller can be raised or lowered instantaneously to insert or take out the most intricate work.

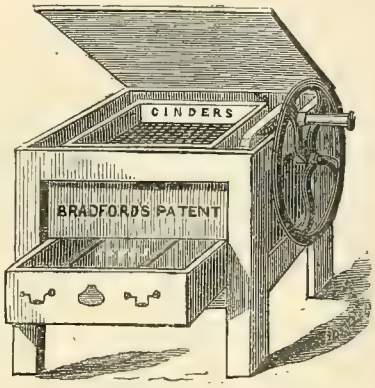
The fluting is more regular and better "set" than can be done by the tongs, and is done in less than one-tenth of the time.



* No. 1 "Phœnix" Cinder Sifter, 16s. 6d.

The possession of a Cinder Sifter by every housekeeper is almost as desirable as the possession of coal itself, because it will not only save at least one-third of the consumption of coal, but will ensure by the proper mixture of cinders with coal a better fire both for heating and cooking in either the open or enclosed fireplace.

The "Phœnix" Sifter is recommended more especially for its singular efficiency and convenient form. A coalbox full of cinders can be thoroughly riddled in less than a quarter of a minute without dust; the ashes being deposited in the lower part of the machine, and the cinders left in a moveable riddle, from which they can conveniently be transferred either to the coalbox or to the fire. It is simple, efficient, and an article that can with confidence be recommended.

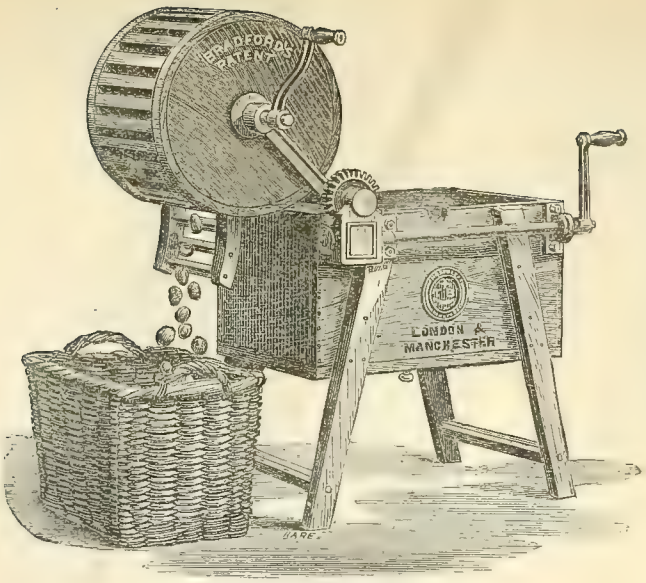


* No. 3 Riddling Machine, £4.

PATENT CINDER SIFTER, OR RIDDLING MACHINE.—This very efficient and strongly-made Cinder Sifter, or Riddling Machine, will soon repay its cost in any large establishment where the consumption of coal is considerable. The riddling motion being lateral, like the "Phœnix" Sifter, it is recommended with confidence as the best made, and its value in several cases has more than justified the further expense of a cinder house, where they may be collected and riddled each day, the cinders into one bin and the ashes into another, should the latter be required for any special purpose. Extensively used in connection with Dry Earth Closets, and made any size to order for Hand or Steam Power.

As an instance of the value of these Cinder Riddlers, one of the principal Hospitals in London has upwards of a dozen in use in various convenient parts of the Hospital, contiguous to the dust shoots.

* See General Catalogue.



New Patent "Peel-Potato" Washer.

The "PEEL-POTATO" WASHER will be found an improvement upon all others hitherto introduced to the public for this purpose.

In addition to the improvements made in the ordinary revolving cage, by which a scraping and—with new Potatoes more especially—a peeling action is produced, it can be raised easily and conveniently out of the water, and lifted over, as shown by illustration, for emptying.
